FEDERAL INQUIRY ORDERED INTO DU PONTS' PURCHASE OF LARGE STEEL HOLDINGS

BOARD SUSPECTS MERGER

Acts on Rumor of Aim to Link General Motors to Steel Corporation.

NO MOVE TOWARD SUIT

Justice Department, It Is Said, Has Not Received Any Request to Act.

WALL STREET UNDISTURBED

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—An investigation into the close financial relationships alleged to exist between the United States Steel Corporation, the General Motors Corporation and the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Company was ordered today by the Federal Trade Commission.

This step was taken following the reports that du Pont interests, which are heavily interested in General Motors, were buying large blocks of United States Steel, and were seeking more power in the Steel directorate. Some of these reports have pictured the recent activities as forecasting what would amount to a huge financial and industrial combination taking in these three companies.

There has been deep interest in official circles in the last few days over the reported developments, and the first direct action came at today's meeting of the Federal Trade Commission when a resolution ordering the inquiry was offered by Commissioner A. F. Myers and adopted.

The Department of Justice officials have not decided upon a separate investigation. As far as could be learned no formal complaint has been made to any Government department or agency.

The Trade Commission holds that it has power, if it finds that a merger which it believes would prejudice public interest is contemplated, to issue a cease and desist order under the Clayton act. If it did not take this course, but felt that action was warranted, it could certify the facts disclosed to the Department of Justice and ask that a suit to enjoin be instituted under the Anti-Trust act.

A published report that the du Pont interests had bought about 114,000 shares of United States Steel recently for approximately $14,000,000 was one of the developments which resulted in action by the Trade Commission.

Commission Explains Its Course.

In a statement of explanation of the action taken to investigate the relationships of the three concerns, the commission said that recently published reports were to the effect that the du Pont company has a large investment in the stock of the General Motors Corporation and the Steel Corporation and that it expects to have a number of directors representing its interests elected to the board of the Steel Corporation and in other ways to develop a close corporate connection among the three companies.

"Establishment of a community interest among these three corporations, reputed to be among the largest in the nation," the statement read, "is held by the commission to be a matter of public concern. In authorizing the inquiry the commission calls attention to the act creating the Federal Trade Commission and giving it the power and authority to inquire into the organization, business conduct, practices and management of corporations."

The resolution of the commission directs the chief economist to make an inquiry into the relationships, direct or indirect, tending to bring these three large corporations under a common ownership and control or management, with information as to the probable economic consequences of such community of interest."

The Commission's Resolution.

Whereas it appears from published financial reports of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Company that it has a large investment in the stock of the General Motors Corporation; and

Whereas it is currently reported in the press that the said du Pont Company has recently acquired a large holding in the capital stock of the United States Steel Corporation, that it expects to have a number of directors representing its interests elected to the board of the latter company and in other ways to develop a close corporate connection among them; and

Whereas the establishment of a community of interest among these three corporations, which are reputed to be among the largest industrial corporations in this country, is a matter of public concern; and

Whereas the act creating this commission authorizes it to inquire

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, July 29.—Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, the American Ambassador to Germany, has added another doctor's degree to his already large collection.

It was announced today that Heidelberg University, where the diplomat spent some time as a student nearly fifty years ago, had awarded him the honorary Degree of Doctor of Philosophy in recognition of his meritorious efforts to improve and strengthen the relations between Germany and the American nation.

The formal presentation of the diploma will take place in October. Foreign Minister Stresemann, who is now at Bad Wildungen, wired his congratulations to Dr. Schurman.

23 PLEAS OF GUILTY IN TICKET TAX FRAUD

TO DEPOSIT $637,000 TAXES

This and $42,500 Surety for Possible Fines Will Be Held Pending Test of the Law.

Twenty-three theatre ticket agencies, and in each instance the owner or principal official, were indicted yesterday by the Federal Grand Jury for willful refusal to pay the 50 per cent. tax imposed upon their excess profits by the Internal Revenue act of 1926.

As soon as the indictments were handed up to Federal Judge Harry B. Anderson all the defendants pleaded guilty and entered into a stipulation with United States Attorney Tuttle that hereafter no theatre ticket would be sold for more than 50 cents in excess of the box office or established price. Mr. Tuttle said that the indictments, the pleas and the stipulation represented a "death blow" to theatre ticket gouging.

Sentences were postponed pending the outcome of the appeal of Edward and Oscar Alexander, ticket brokers, convicted on similar charges, and bail was fixed at $1,000 in each case. The twenty-three brokers agreed to deposit in a bank or trust company the full amount of their tax arrears, said to total more than $637,000. They agreed also to deposit with the clerk of the Court sums aggregating $42,500, to cover possible fines and also as a sort of security or pledge that they would abide by the terms of the stipulation.

Should one of the ticket brokers indicted violate either the law or the terms of the stipulation pending the outcome of the Alexander appeal, Mr. Tuttle would then be privileged to order such offender's arrest and he would be subject to a jail sentence as well as a fine. The maximum penalty in each case is one year in prison and $10,000 fine.

List of Defendants.

Each count in the indictments represents one month in which a defendant failed to pay his Federal tax of 50 per cent. of all profits in excess of 50 cents advance over the established price of each ticket. Following are the defendants and the number of counts in each indictment:

Arrow Theatre Ticket Company, Inc., William L. Deuten, President, 14.
Bascom, Inc., Geo. J. Bascom, President, 14.
Bryant Theatre Ticket Company, Inc., Walter H. Bryant, President, 14.
Louis Cohn Theatre Ticket Office, Inc., Samson Mayer, Secretary, 14.

B. M. T. FIGHTS BUSES; MAY ASK INJUNCTION TO HALT EQUITABLE

TO OPPOSE SOME ROUTES

BYRNE EXPLAINS SWITCH

Says He Voted With Mayor to End Long Deadlock—Coach Company Prepares for Operation.

The B. M. T. will fight the award of a bus franchise for Manhattan, Brooklyn and Queens to the Equitable Coach Company, it was learned yesterday, and the contest over the bus franchises, which deadlocked the Board of Estimate for more than a year, will be transferred to the Transit Commission and to the courts.

It is not likely that there will be as serious opposition to the award of the Bronx bus franchise to the Surface Transportation Corporation or the Staten Island franchise to the Tompkins Bus Corporation.

The Surface Transportation Corporation is a subsidiary of the Third Avenue Railway Company, which owns the Bronx surface lines, so there will be no objection to the granting of certificates of convenience and necessity by the Transit Commission because of the alleged paralleling of routes, as there will be in the case of the Brooklyn bus franchise obtained by the Equitable Company.

To Attack Legality of Award.

Neither in the case of the Surface Transportation Corporation nor the Tompkins Bus Corporation will there be the effort to upset the legality of the award of the franchise on the ground of the failure of the Board of Estimate to give a proper public hearing, as there is almost certain to be in the case of the Equitable Company.

Information obtained yesterday by public officials was that the B. M. T.'s first line of attack against the Equitable franchise would be the alleged failure of the Board of Estimate to grant a public hearing on the company's amended application eliminating the Manhattan longitudinal routes, which is required by law and notice of which was given in the advertisement setting Thursday, July 28, as the date of the hearing.

Mayor Walker did not permit this public hearing, the B. M. T. is expected to contend, by directing a vote on Item 14 on the calendar without giving either the attorneys of the B. M. T. or any one else an opportunity to speak. George D. Yeomans, counsel for the B. M. T., and several members of his staff, were in the Board of Estimate room, ready to speak, and the contention of the company is expected to be that the Mayor failed to give opponents of the Equitable Company their full legal rights in denying them a public hearing.

If the B. M. T. seeks an injunction to prevent the Equitable Company from proceeding under its franchise, the effect probably would be only delay, for the Board of Estimate has the power to vote the franchise again. Presumably it would do so, for Borough President James J. Byrne of Brooklyn, whose switch from the Coney Island and Gravesend Bus Corporation to the Equitable gave the Mayor the necessary number of votes for the award of the franchise, would hardly be expected to change his position again.

Will Fight Certain Routes.

The more serious attack of the B. M. T., it was said, would come before the Transit Commission in opposition to certain proposed bus routes in Brooklyn, which the company will allege parallel its service lines and are not entitled to certificates of convenience and necessity.

The law requires that a separate hearing on an application for a certificate of convenience and necessity must be held on each route. This will give the B. M. T. an opportunity to make a separate fight on each route which they say parallels an existing surface line. The Brooklyn City Railroad Company, which joined with the B. M. T. in creating

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WARSAW, July 29.—A band of international safecrackers were arrested early this morning after they had tunneled to within a few feet of 6,000,000 new zloty notes (about $720,000) lying in the State Printing and Engraving Building.

One of the gang was killed in the fight, which lasted four hours, and in which machine guns were employed by the police. Eleven are in jail, including Cichoti, noted Polish burglar, believed to be the leader.

Several weeks ago two well dressed men rented an old building adjacent to the State printing plant and opened up a basket manufacturing shop. They apparently turned out a large production.

However, during a police inspection several days ago one of the officers of the law recognized an old much-wanted yegg. The place was then carefully watched. Too much night work with noisy machines aroused further suspicions and last night 150 policemen surrounded the building.

The gang opened fire and the police were forced to send for additional weapons. After the arrests were concluded the basket factory was examined.

The tunnel, filled with electric lights and containing supplies, gas masks and oxygen tanks, was discovered, leading from the cellar to the printery, a distance of 100 feet. Evidently it was the intention of the safecrackers to make their haul last night, since only a thin floor of concrete separated the crooks from their booty.

DECISION ON SACCO COMING WEDNESDAY

Fuller, After Defense Counsel's Arguments, Says He Will Announce It Then.

HEARS PLEAS THROUGH DAY

Governor to Work on Ruling at Summer Place—Witnesses Ask Perjury Test.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, July 29.—Sacco and Vanzetti will know Wednesday night whether they are to live or die.

Governor Fuller's decision will be ready then, he said tonight as he left the State House, not to return until Monday.

The record of the Governor's investigation, it is true, has not yet been completed. He listened today through eight hours of as uncomfortable a July day as Boston has known in years to the impassioned pleas of William G. Thompson and Herbert B. Ehrmann, who for four years have been counsel for the convicted Italians.

That ended at 5:30 P. M. Except for the Governor's decision, the last word seemed to have been uttered. But again came an anti-climax. Another witness had been waiting, John Van Vaerenwyck, President of the State branch of the American Federation of Labor, and for half an hour he told his story to the Governor, reiterating his belief in the innocence of the two men.

But eventually he was not the last witness, for Governor Fuller a few minutes later said there were others to come Monday, although he did not state their names or their relation to the case.

In setting the problem of time of his decision, the Governor did not seem to be guessing. He did not say merely "Wednesday." He said "Wednesday night," and there was just a shade of emphasis on the second word.

Council Meets on Wednesday.

The Executive Council, which must confirm any recommendation of the Governor for reprieve, for commutation or for outright pardon, meets Wednesday, but usually it meets at noon, and adjourns within an hour. In the ordinary course of affairs its eight members will be scattered all over the State by Wednesday night.

If the Governor's finding is that the men are guilty and must pay the penalty in the electric chair, he does not need to consult the council.

Yet friends of the two men, grasping at every straw in the last few days, refused tonight to believe that the Governor's emphasis on Wednesday night had sealed their doom. He could very easily hold the council after it meets on Wednesday until such hour as he saw fit to have it adjourn.

Tomorrow and Saturday, completely isolated at his Summer home at Rye Beach, N. H., with a State patrolman keeping an alert eye on all strangers, the Governor will probably begin to write the decision for which the entire world is waiting. If it is to be a short document, it may be inside his little brown suitcase when he comes to Boston on Monday morning. If he is to discuss in detail all the issues raised in the seven-year fight which Sacco and Vanzetti have waged for freedom, the stenographers will still be busy at their keys when darkness falls on Wednesday.

Appeal Runs Through Day.

There was a tenseness in the air all day and about the Governor's office. The midsummer heat had at last penetrated through the thick walls of the State House, and the breeze which usually comes sweeping across the treetops on the Common and through the balcony door was missing. It was just such a day as that July 14, 1921, when a jury filed back into the courtroom at Dedham and solemnly reported the verdict which made Sacco and Vanzetti murderers under the law.

When that verdict was brought in six years ago lightning was flashing outside the high windows, and overhead were the rumbles of an approaching thunderstorm. Late today, too, as Mr. Thompson drew near the end of his long argument, the skies darkened, thunder roared and lightning flashed, and as he finished rain was beating furiously against the windows of the Governor's private office.

When they began, soon after 9 o'clock in the morning, it is understood that Mr. Thompson proceeded for some time without interruption. He outlined the defense case.

Soon after 1 P. M. the session was interrupted for lunch.

Mr. Ehrmann had talked briefly in Seeking relief from the heat of the city 200,000 persons went to Coney Island. The Rockaways reported that 200,000 bathers were on the 7½-mile beach there.

A large crowd gathered at Asbury Park and indications were that the week-end would produce a record for the season. The beaches at Ocean Grove, Asbury Park and Loch Arbour were swarming with bathers. Two bathers at Asbury Park and two in Ocean Grove were rescued from the heavy surf when they suffered from cramps.

Will Ask Tammany Leaders to Explain Their Failure to Endorse Judge.

MAY ASK FOR REVERSAL

Tammany Said to Have Rushed Its Decision to Forestall Expected Opposition.

REPUBLICANS TO RETALIATE

Belief Expressed Convention Will Refuse to Endorse O'Brien for Court of Appeals.

Governor Smith arrived in this city last night, full of interest in the action of the Tammany Executive Committee in voting to withhold endorsement from Judge Charles C. Nott of the Court of General Sessions, a Republican, whose term will expire at the end of the year. The Governor, however, withheld any comment.

"I knew that question would be asked me upon my arrival here, but I have nothing to say about that now," the Governor replied when asked what he thought about the turning down of Judge Nott, whom he looks upon as highly deserving of Democratic endorsement.

It is no secret that Governor Smith feels that Tammany's Executive Committee made a grave blunder in refusing to endorse Judge Nott, who is looked upon as entitled to support from both the major parties under the unwritten rule requiring partisanship to be waived in the re-election of Judges where they have shown themselves competent on the bench during an elective term. The Governor wants to talk with the Tammany leaders about the action of the Executive Committee and find out what prompted it before he makes any statement on the situation.

It was said last night that the Governor did not view the action of the Tammany Executive Committee as beyond revocation. But whether he would exert his influence in getting the committee to rescind its action could not be learned. Ever since the meeting of the committee on Wednesday night he has been bombarded with requests that he take a hand in the situation, in the interest of the non-partisan principle being applied in the case of Judge Nott. Before the meeting was held the Governor had been urged by many to assume his leadership and compel Tammany to endorse the Republican General Sessions Judge.

Governor Not Consulted.

There is no ground for believing that Tammany Leader George W. Olvany consulted the Governor before the decision not to indorse Judge Nott was reached. Nor has there, as far as could be learned, been any communication between the Governor and Mr. Olvany since the committee met.

There is a feeling in Republican circles that the Tammany Executive Committee acted in the Nott matter with such precipitate haste because it wanted to forestall any public stand by the Governor in favor of an endorsement by Tammany. The Tammany leaders, from Judge Olvany down, were well aware of the Governor's views in the matter. Anxiety among prominent Tammanyites to act before such bodies as the Bar Association, the Citizens Union and the City Club could take action endorsing Judge Nott, and calling upon Tammany to live up to the non-partisan rule in relation to judiciary nominations, it was believed, was responsible in part for the Executive Committee's quick decision to turn down Judge Nott and recommend the nomination of Magistrate George W. Simpson for his place on the Court of General Sessions bench.

Some color was lent to this belief through the experience of a joint delegation representing the Bar Association and the New York County Lawyers' Association, which early this month made an appointment to see Mr. Olvany to urge the endorse-

COOLIDGE BANS ACCORD ON BRITISH NAVAL PLAN; MAKES OUR FLEET TOO BIG

House Shortage in Germany Is Now Put at 3,000,000

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, July 29.—Three million people are practically homeless throughout Germany, it is announced in a statistical report published today. The report points out that the Reich needs 600,000 apartments to house an equal number of families, consisting of four of five persons each.

The erection of the necessary dwellings would require 30,000,000,000 marks (about $7,500,000,000) and nobody knows how this enormous amount could be raised.

BRITISH CABINET SUDDENLY CALLED

Swift Summons Follows News, Indicating Nearness of a Break-Down at Geneva.

NEW ORDERS NOT LIKELY

But Ministers Will Convene Again Monday After Plenary Session of Conference.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 29.—Coincident with the arrival of the gravest news indicating the probable breakdown of the Geneva Conference on Naval Limitation, a special Cabinet meeting was called this afternoon by Sir Austen Chamberlain, the Foreign Secretary, after several Ministers had started for the country on holidays.

Winston Churchill, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, intercepted aboard a train at Waterloo Station, alighted hastily and sped to Downing Street. Sir William Joynson-Hicks, the Home Secretary, was motoring toward Surrey, when stopped by a policemen on a country road. Informed of the summons he turned his car back to London.

The meeting followed denials by the Government in the House of Commons earlier in the day that any news foreshadowing a breakdown had been received.

Unlikely to Modify Stand.

What the Ministers heard at the hastily summoned Cabinet meeting, it was afterward learned, was a good deal less dramatic than the manner of their summons. Mr. Bridgeman's report on yesterday's preliminary meetings at Geneva had not come to hand when the Ministers had separated, and Sir Austen Chamberlain was anxious that they should see it before they separated for the week-end.

The Cabinet discussed matters at some length and sent a reply to Mr. Bridgeman answering some of the points he had raised.

The Cabinet will reassemble on Monday, when the results of the plenary session of the naval conference will be available, but it is regarded as certain that no eleventh-hour modifications of the British proposals are intended and that no new instructions will be sen to Mr. Bridgeman.

A semi-official statement was to the effect that "there is, after all, a well-defined margin of safety for British trade protection beyond which no British delegation dare go or would be allowed to go."

Baldwin Urged to See Coolidge.

In a leading editorial tomorrow The Daily News urges Premier Baldwin to interrupt his trip to Canada and go to the United States and see President Coolidge personally. The consequences of ending the conference, The Daily News declares, are obvious to all sensible men. Then it adds:

"It will add greatly to the big navy

DIFFICULTIES POINTED OUT

He Sees Heavy Building Involved as Main Barrier to Geneva Treaty.

CRUISERS TOO NUMEROUS

While Opposing Number, He Feels Guns and Tonnage Are Side Issues.

SEES NO REAL LIMITATION

His Aim to Cut Taxes and Aid World Peace Stressed—Still Hopes Britain Will Shift.

RAPID CITY, S. D., July 29.—The attitude of the American Government is that unless Great Britain modifies her position as to the size of her navy this Government cannot agree to her counter proposals to President Coolidge's suggestions for extending the ratio of the Washington treaty to other naval craft, and the Geneva limitation conference may fail.

This was made clear today in the most important exposition of world policy made since President Coolidge took up his residence in the Black Hills. He has followed every move in the conference and has decided the American course.

While the President is still hopeful that Great Britain will modify her position and make possible an agreement at Geneva, it was indicated that the American Government and its representatives at Geneva would not accept the number of cruisers demanded by Great Britain.

There might be a change in the American attitude relative to tonnage and the calibre of guns, but the Administration's present position is that no benefits would come to the nations interested in the way of reduced taxes if the United States accepted the cruiser program urged by Great Britain.

Thinks It Means Too Big a Navy.

President Coolidge has not abandoned hope that the conference will agree to a program that will effect what he regards as a proper limitation on vessels not affected by the Washington treaty. But on the other hand it is understood that he will not agree to a modification of the American position to such an extent as to make possible an agreement on anything like the British proposal as to the number of cruisers.

The opinion of the Administration as expressed today seemed to indicate that the conference might fail unless Great Britain modified her position and came closer to the American proposal as to the limitation of cruisers and other vessels.

The proposals made by representatives of Great Britain seem to the Administration to call for the building of a much larger navy than the American Government thinks necessary, and, therefore, there has been no agreement on this main point in the discussion at Geneva, the cause of the suspension of the conference.

President Coolidge is not informed whether Great Britain's proposals will be modified as the result of resumption of the conference and the discussion. He believes that the proposals presented by Great Britain call for the building of a larger navy than the United States wishes to agree to, and that this is the main obstacle at present to an agreement.

Had Reduction in Mind.

In his opinion there are collateral issues about the tonnage of ships and the calibre of guns, but the chief difference in the conference is over the size of the navy.

President Coolidge called this conference, it is pointed out, thinking it might result in placing a limitation on armaments, which, perhaps, would help the countries interested to reduce, as the years went by, the present size of their navies.

Reduction of the size of the navies and economics accruing therefrom were the chief thoughts in the President's mind when he called the conference to consider limitation of naval craft not included in the 1922 Washington naval treaties.

Reduction of armaments and consequent economies were considered by him as important, but he regarded as of even more importance the promotion of the peace, good-will and better understanding among nations that would be established by such a naval agreement by great world powers.

The main object the President had in view was international accord and a condition favorable to world peace. He felt when the conference assembled that it would lead to the lifting of taxation burdens through a reduction of naval expenditures, but he saw as a natural consequence the creation of a spirit of peace and good-will among nations of greater benefit to humanity in the future than reduction in naval expenditures.

Has Sent No New Orders.

Marie May Renounce the World for Convent; Rumanian Peasants Oppose Her Becoming Nun

BUCHAREST Rumania, July 29 (AP).—Queen Marie, who since King Ferdinand's death has given herself up completely to religion, may soon join a convent, her friends believe.

Ever since the Queen came to Rumania thirty-five years ago she has been fascinated by the old Rumanian monasteries and convents, which she has helped from time to time with money and other gifts. She has visited all these retreats, which are among the most picturesque in Europe, and is familiar with their history, architecture and decorations.

There is a pretty sixteenth century convent near the Queen's castle in Bran, in the bosom of the Carpathian Mountains, where ever since King Ferdinand's illness a year ago, she has spent much time in meditation, prayer and communion with the resident nuns.

Now that she must yield the throne and sovereign rights to the Regency, some of the Queen's friends predict that soon she will join the nuns in this quiet sanctuary, in memory of her dead spouse. He himself, during the last months of his life, became intensely pious, placing all faith in God when medical science failed to help him.

Queen Marie, who inherits the piety of her forbears, frequently has said that relief and consolation from the ills and disappointments of this life only can be found in the cloistered peace of a convent far removed from the evil and restless outside world.

The Rumanian peasantry, who are deeply attached to Queen Marie, have expressed strong opposition to her giving herself up to a life of seclusion in a convent. They do not wish to lose one who always has been a defender of their interests.

Midtown Manhattan Short of Hydrants, Underwriters Say in Warning of Fire Hazard

Parts of the midtown section of Manhattan are insufficiently supplied with fire hydrants and the water supply might easily prove insufficient in case of a great fire, according to a report made to the Board of Fire Underwriters by R. P. Barbour, Chairman of the Board's Committee on Water Supply and Fire Department, who has requested the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity to make a survey.

At the offices of the Department of Water Supply yesterday it was said that the conditions mentioned were being checked up and that comment would be withheld until that work was finished.

Mr. Barbour's report says that engineers have found large sections of the midtown area "poorly protected"; that while there are many supply mains throughout the district many are only six inches in diameter and these frequently supply as many as four hydrants, "with the result that if a serious fire occurred some engines might not have a full supply of water."

A check of the hydrants in the district against the maps in the Department of Water Supply, the report says, indicates that some hydrants have been removed during construction work and have not been replaced. Many hydrants, it is held, are not of suitable size. The report also says:

"In the neighborhood of the Roxy Theatre the diagrams show three hydrants on Fiftieth Street between Sixth and Seventh Avenues, while actually only one hydrant exists. The diagrams also indicate quite a number of hydrants in the section adjacent to the Grand Central Terminal between Fifth and Lexington Avenues, from Forty-second to Forty-seventh Street, some of which could not be located."

The particular sections regarded as being insufficiently supplied with hydrants are listed in the report as follows: Fiftieth to Fifty-fourth Street between Sixth and Seventh Avenues, Fifty-second to Fifty-eighth Street between Broadway and Seventh Avenue, Thirty-sixth to Fortieth Street between Fifth and Sixth Avenues, Fifty-fourth to Fifty-eighth Street between Fifth and Sixth Avenues, Thirty-fifth to Fifty-ninth Street between Fifth and Madison Avenues and Thirty-fifth to Fiftieth Street between Madison and Park Avenues.

waiting to see whether the British representatives will modify their position beyond the point reflected in speeches in the House of Commons and in the statement of Sir Austen Chamberlain, Secretary of Foreign Affairs.

Up to the present, it is held here, the expressed desire of Great Britain has been for so large a navy that the American representatives at Geneva and this Government are not able to agree, and will not meet the English proposals.

President Coolidge feels that discussion may modify the British position to such an extent that the American Government may be able to agree. Thus the tangle at Geneva would be unravelled and one of the Administration's chief foreign policies settled satisfactorily.

In case no agreement is reached the American Government and those signatory to the Washington treaty can, without violation of this treaty, build as many cruisers, submarines and destroyers as they desire.

Big Building Demands Feared.

It is feared here that the spirit of the representatives of the seaboard States in the next Congress will bring an attempt to force through a five-year cruiser program providing for the building of eight cruisers each year, which would revive the competition in naval armaments that was halted for a period of years through the operation of the Washington naval treaties.

President Coolidge is not dipping far into the future. His position is that a modification of the British demand as to the size of the navy may result from further conference, and that while the countries interested may not get what each desires, an agreement may be reached at Geneva which will lead to a reduction in armaments and tax burdens, and, beyond, a better understanding among the nations looking to peace and good-will.

In the present circumstances President Coolidge is not considering anything but success from this conference. He is hopeful, although perhaps not confident, of some agreement on the question that apparently has brought the conference to a point where Great Britain must greatly modify her position or produce a situation that the United States cannot accept as coming within this Government's ideas of a naval reduction.

Such an impasse would bring the conference to an end and produce failure on the part of three great world powers to extend the Washington naval treaties to auxiliary craft.

WASHINGTON RULES OUT PLAN.

It Would Cost Us $400,000,000 for Cruisers, Experts Say.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Officials here turned thumbs down today on the latest British proposals at the Geneva naval conference.

Thorough study of the proposals submitted yesterday and consideration of cablegrams from Ambassador Hugh S. Gibson, head of the American delegation, convinced officials that the British plan was unsatisfactory to the United States.

The whole situation was canvassed minutely at the State Department in morning and afternoon conferences among Secretaries Kellogg and Wilbur, Admiral Eberle, Chief of Naval Operations, Under-Secretar Olds and Assistant Secretary Castle of the State Department and technical assistants of both departments.

This afternoon's discussion is understood to have been given over to consideration of the statement of the American position scheduled to be made by Mr. Gibson at what promises to be the final plenary session next week.

The assumption here is that the British Cabinet was called to consider the final statement of the British case.

Unofficial reports that the British had made some modifying suggestions at Geneva were not confirmed. In view of the recent careful Cabinet consideration at London, officials here did not expect that any substantial concession to the American viewpoint would be made at the eleventh hour.

The latest British proposals, it was declared, differed mainly from the last ones, which were rejected as unacceptable, in adding 25 per cent. in obsolete tonnage and in advocating the bulking of cruiser, destroyer and submarine tonnage.

This proposal was interpreted here as meaning that Great Britain had changed her position from that which she maintained at the Preparatory Commission for the Disarmament Conference under the League of Nations, and that she was now advocating the global system of tonnage with restrictions best suited to herself on individual types of vessels.

This is contrary to the position the United States has maintained at Geneva in favor of a clear-cut, definite tonnage limitation for all classes of vessels, in accordance with principles, which, it is declared, were generally accepted at the Washington conference.

It was stated today that the effect of the first and second British proposals would be to authorize for the United States or Great Britain a total combined tonnage of 647,500 in cruisers and destroyers alone, or all for cruisers if she or the United States so chose.

Aim to Keep Supremacy Seen.

In one form or another, yesterday's proposals were interpreted as designed to assure Great Britain's special interests and the maintenance of her sea supremacy. Having a cruiser fleet greater than the cruiser fleet of any other three countries, she wishes, according to the Washington viewpoint, to maintain the lead, and possibly to widen it.

Her proposals, as construed here, involve a total tonnage of 737,500 in cruisers, destroyers and submarines combined, both for herself and for the United States, too, if this country should care to try to build up to so great a figure.

The cost in necessary American cruiser construction to gain equality with Great Britain under these proposals, it was asserted, would be more than $400,000,000, and it was added that this country, to a great extent, would be forced to build the type of vessel not considered well suited to American needs.

In this connection it was declared that the cost per ton of constructing 10,000-ton cruisers would be less than the cost per ton for 6,000-ton craft, and that it would cost less to man and operate a limited number of 10,000-ton vessels than a large number of 6,000-ton cruisers.

Contrast in Scrapping Drawn.

The contention was emphasized that under the British proposals Great Britain would scrap no ships, and retain everything she has in cruisers, built and building, and this situation was compared to the great sacrifice the United States made at the Washington conference when she scrapped 800,000 tons of ships built and building.

In a nutshell, the American view is that these proposals would have the effect of furthering British sea supremacy and that they do not carry out the thought of definite limitation, with elimination of competitive naval building, motives which actuated the President in calling the conference at Geneva.

Not only would the effect of the first and second proposals be to authorize for the United States and Great Britain a total combined cruiser and destroyer tonnage of 647,500, but, it is argued here, all of this tonnage could under the provisions of proposal No. 11 be used for cruisers if so desired and, further, that there is no definite, clear-cut tonnage limitation on cruisers provided for as in the British plan.

Objection on Old Ship Clause.

It is also contended that the amount of cruiser tonnage proposed to be retained is left to range within wide limits and that proposal No. 2 would work to the disadvantage of the United States because America possesses no cruiser worth speaking of to place in the 25 per cent. retention class.

All the old American cruisers are declared to be of low speed and gun power, built between 1908 and 1894, and now entirely obsolete, while the oldest cruiser on the British Navy list was completed in 1911.

It is argued here that the British would be able to transfer to this special class at once their cruisers completed in 1911, under the proposed sixteen-year age limit for this class, and at once lay down a replacement program, and that they could continue to do the same thing each succeeding year.

In 1931, for example, Great Britain would be able to transfer to this additional 25 per cent. class the seven useful vessels of high speed of the Champion type, and replace them by a building program, it is contended.

Criticism of Guns and Cruisers.

The interpretation placed on proposal No. 4 is that it would be necessary for the United States to build 8-inch gun cruisers in this particular group in order to balance the Hawkins and York types of cruisers.

Proposals 5 and 6, calling for a division of cruisers into two classes, one of 10,000-ton ships and the other of smaller cruisers with a maximum displacement of 6,000 tons and mounting guns of not more than 6-inch calibre, are regarded by American officials as affecting directly and adversely the interests of the United States in that the type of cruiser deemed best suited to her geographical requirements—the 10,000-ton cruiser—would be limited to fewer than the number considered necessary for American needs in this type of vessel, and the United States would be forced to build the greater part of the cruiser tonnage allowed under the proposals in 5,000-ton vessels armed with guns of not more than 6-inch calibre.

The American contention is that, due to lack of bases, the United States requires cruisers of maximum cruising radius and armament under provisions already agreed to in the Washington Treaty.

Merchant Fleet Arming Discussed.

The effect of the British proposals, it is held, would be to establish a standard type of cruiser of 6,000 tons carrying a six-inch gun and no greater, with the result that Great Britain's merchant fleet, with forty vessels of a speed of 18 knots or better and capable of carrying six-inch guns, might form an effective reserve as naval auxiliaries.

With the cruisers of other countries not carrying a greater gun than the six-inch gun installed on her merchant ships, Great Britain, according to the American view, would have supremacy and could sweep the seas.

This is held here to be the very crux of the gun and tonnage controversy. Furthermore, the 5-5-3 ratio accepted in principle at Washington, it is declared, would be altered by the British proposals somewhat in favor of Japan, so far as cruisers are concerned.

As no restriction by classes is mentioned in the final British proposals, it was argued today that it would be possible for Great Britain, if she so wished, to discard all her destroyers and submarines and have 737,500 tons in cruisers alone.

Possible British Allotment.

Taken another way, experts said, if Great Britain contemplated distributing the 590,000-ton maximum over 300,000 tons of cruisers, the maximum amount set in the original American proposals, 200,000 tons in destroyers, the American minimum figure, and 90,000 tons in submarines, the American maximum proposal (and these were considered fair assumptions from an understanding of British naval needs), the provision for 25 per cent. of the total in obsolete ships, would, if utilized in cruisers, make the total cruiser tonnage 647,500.

This compares with the outside figure of 400,000 tons in cruisers set by the American delegation as the point beyond which it would not discuss limitation.

Because of the tonnage difficulty in the British proposals it was scarcely deemed necessary by officials to go into the question of 10,000-ton cruisers and 6-inch guns, both of which are held necessary for the United States up to the point that her security demands. The proposal to restrict the number of 10,000-ton cruisers to twelve each for the United States and Great Britain and eight for Japan was said not to give a sufficient number to America.

The necessity for 14,000-ton cruisers armed with 8-inch guns, it was asserted, was admitted at the Washington conference by Great Britain, which had proceeded to build them in number. Since 1918, it was added, she had completed twelve of this class armed with 8-inch guns, as well as four of 9,750 tons armed with 7.5-inch guns, one of 8,000 tons armed with 8-inch guns and two of 7,550 tons armed with 6-inch guns.

Great Britain now proposes to keep all these. To offset them the United States, it was said, would have ten of 7,500 tons armed with 6-inch guns. America, it was added, had completed no 10,000-ton cruisers, although work on two had started and six more had been authorized and appropriated for. It will take three years to complete them.

ITALIAN PAPER ASSAILS US.

Calling Three Powers Imperialistic, Tribuna Says We Seek Big Fleet.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, July 29.—"Never has a war more coldly calculating, more mathematical, more arithmetical been fought than the one now raging in Geneva," says the Tribuna, Rome's official Fascist organ, in a signed editorial by its editor, Forges d'Avanzati.

The three-power naval disarmament conference, he charges, is a "military and political monstrosity," which but thinly veils American, British and Japanese imperialist aims.

The United States, he says, is "not in favor of limitation of armaments. It is in favor of a fleet second to none."

America, he adds, is absolutely safe within its boundaries. It possesses territory more than sufficient for its needs. It obtained at the Washington conference cessation of the Anglo-Japanese alliance. Nevertheless, it asks in peremptory fashion that Great Britain cease to have superiority in any class of war vessels.

After remarking that America threatens in case of disagreement to build the most powerful fleet in the world, Forges d'Avanzati continues:

England meets America's demands by pleading the necessity of safeguarding her empire, continues the Tribuna editor. England does not wish to lose the pre-eminent position she has had on the seas for centuries. She does not oppose the principle of equality, but argues that, her needs being greater, equality in her case means having more cruisers than other powers.

"England bases her naval policy on imperial necessities which America does not possess; but her defense of her pre-eminent sea power is imperialism nevertheless, even if she pleads the needs of the Dominions to justify it. This is just what imperialism means."

Says Rivalry Pleases Japan.

Japan, finally, says Forges d'Avanzati, is carefully preaching its imperial position in the Far East. It sees with undisguised satisfaction the rivalry between Great Britain and America, which is the real reason why it can accept a smaller fleet than the other two.

These being the real motives behind America's, England's and Japan's actions, concludes the editor, although operating behind the veil of "disarmament hypocrisy," it is not surprising that the procedure at Geneva has reached the extreme limit of absurdity.

"One must be very hardened in social democratic hypocrisy not to notice that the greatest militarist monstrosity has been reached under the auspices of the League of Nations," he writes.

"Three nations which loudly protest their pacific intentions sit down around a table and begin to count their tonnage in hundreds of thousands of tons, their guns in hundreds, and attempt to stabilize their naval supremacy on the basis of British naval power, which is gigantic and immovable.

"Only an erratic and deformed pacifist mentality could conceive and fight this battle around the conference table.

"With Fascist sincerity, we must say that all this is completely repugnant from the viewpoint of healthy political ethics."

BERLIN SEES NEW ARMS RACE.

Correspondents at Geneva Have Gloomy View of Conference.

BERLIN, July 29 (AP).—Evening papers here display prominently pessimistic accounts of the situation in the naval conference at Geneva, but do not comment editorially.

Local advices paint a gloomy picture of the situation at Geneva. The Geneva correspondent of the Vossische Zeitung says that even the moderate aims of "limitation" of naval armaments appeared doomed to failure.

The Boersen Zeitung, under the caption "Fateful Days in World Politics," says: "Disarmament is impossible as long as the naval powers do not disarm but continue the mad race in armaments which means a new war. The issue cannot be viewed too seriously."

The Achtuhr Abendblatt headlines its account of the Geneva proceedings with the streamer: "Collapse of Geneva Disarmament Conference. Agreement of America and England No Longer Possible."

Admiral Beatty Quits Post as First Sea Lord; Seven Years' Service Saw Heavy Naval Cuts

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 29.—Lord Beatty, Admiral of the Fleet, went for the last time to the Admiralty today as the First Sea Lord; tomorrow he will be succeeded by Sir Charles Madden. On the occasion of his retirement from office he has been made a Privy Councillor, an honor only twice previously conferred on a naval officer.

Lord Beatty's term at the Admiralty is memorable not only for the length of over seven years but for the far-reaching changes made owing to post-war conditions. Lord Beatty is still only 56 years old and will remain on the active list another nine years.

His brilliant war service has been largely responsible for his advancement. His tactical handling of the British battle cruiser fleet in the Jutland engagement will long remain a matter of controversy, but his courage was reflected in his famous remark after seeing two of his vessels blown up:

"There seems to be something wrong with our —— ships today. Turn three points nearer the enemy."

Outstanding features of Lord Beatty's régime at the Admiralty have been carrying out the reduction of the naval strength laid down by the Washington Conference, the application of war lessons to ship designs, the plan for enlarging the Singapore naval base, the development of the Dominion navies and the creation of an air arm for the fleet.

It is a smaller but scientifically well-equipped fleet that Lord Beatty hands on to his successor.

GIBSON REGARDS CONFERENCE AS OVER

He Is Busy Preparing Speech for Final Meeting of Geneva Naval Parley.

TO REFER TO PANAMA CANAL

He Will Say That Unless We Have Parity We May Be Forced to Ask British to Help Us Guard It.

By WYTHE WILLIAMS.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, July 29.—Without awaiting a reply from Washington on the final British program presented to the tri-power conference yesterday, Ambassador Gibson has informed the British delegation that these proposals are "absolutely unacceptable." He then asked the First Lord of the Admiralty if Britain was prepared to accept the position that the United States was free within the cruiser tonnage limitation to build according to her needs ships mounting 8-inch guns.

Mr. Bridgeman regretted that Great Britain was not prepared to accept such an arrangement. Mr. Gibson then informed the British delegation that he considered that except for the formalities of Monday's plenary session the tri-power conference had already ended.

Despite this unequivocal position insistent voices were raised in both the British and Japanese camps throughout the day that Mr. Gibson was waiting "instructions" before going ahead with the conference burial program.

Mr. Gibson explained that of course he had sent a full report of yesterday's meeting to Secretary Kellogg, that he would probably receive a reply before Monday, but that no doubt existed in the mind of any member of the delegation as to what the reply would be.

Meanwhile Mr. Gibson is busily preparing the speech which will wind up the conference. He intends to submit it to Mr. Kellogg ahead of time.

It developed today that Mr. Gibson last night made it plain to Mr. Bridgeman that the new proposals were impossible, but he preferred to hope otherwise.

Tonnage Proposals Restudied.

When Mr. Gibson insisted that the proposals be given to the correspondents, Mr. Bridgman demanded a plenary session for today in order to explain the British position to the general public. This, Mr. Gibson refused on several grounds.

The first was that the British had held up the conference ten days and so had had time to prepare an argument. Also he argued that time was necessary for the American public to study the British proposals.

Today both camps are hard at it preparing documents for the public, giving all reasons why an accord has been impossible.

Ambassador Gibson now intends to bring up a point that has been held in reserve throughout the conference, namely, that unless the United States has complete parity with Britain she might be forced to surrender her unique position as guardian of the Panama Canal and admit Britain to co-proprietorship. The United States has accepted the moral responsibility of assuring the freedom of the canal, but cannot guarantee to do so without real naval strength.

Careful restudy of the British proposals submitted yesterday shows that Britain would have an actual total of 737,500 tons, in which she could easily obtain 77 cruisers and still maintain the 18 destroyer leaders, 171 destroyers and 41 submarines now in service.

Of these cruisers, including the new mongrel class suggested yesterday in boats just under 10,000 tons, she would have eighteen with 8-inch guns, and thirty-four from 3,500 to 4,700 tons and twenty-two of 6,000 tons, with three extra, averaging 7,000 tons, mounting 6-inch guns.

Against this the most that America could hope for, according to the British rules, would be fourteen ships with 8-inch guns, the rest of the American tonnage being limited to the 6-inch gun type which is declared useless for American needs.

As one of the American Admirals expressed the situation yesterday, the 8-inch gun is a part of the Treaty of Washington and, and therefore he considers the British proposal would abrogate that agreement quite as clearly as, he said, it was her intention to do when Britain suggested changing the tonnage of capital ships.

By this evening the British delegates became more convinced that no arm would be stretched out from American headquarters with a suggestion of further parley.

Geneva Awaits Next Move Here.

GENEVA, July 29, (AP).—What will Washington do? That was the question everybody seemed to be asking tonight in British, Japanese and other non-American circles of the naval conference.

The Japanese delegation authorized The Associated Press tonight to deny a report circulating abroad that the Japanese would mediate between Great Britain and the United States.

The Japanese spokesman said that they could not see their way clear for mediation, as there was a problem of principle involved due to the American opposition to the 8-inch-gun cruiser and to America's desire to maintain freedom concerning the construction of 8-inch gun secondary cruisers.

The Japanese continue pessimistic concerning the outcome of the conference. They seem particularly desirous that if it adjourns without achieving its purpose it should do so without anything being said at the final session that might provoke friction or lead to misunderstanding among the powers involved.

It is said to be the idea of the Americans also that the delegates should separate quietly with moderately phrased statements that they had been unable to agree because of an honest difference of opinion.

The suggestions emanating from British circles today that the British would discuss favorably any American proposal for a certain number of 8-inch gun cruisers for the United States in addition to those permitted under the British plan has not been communicated to the American delegation.

Japan Against 25 Per Cent. Plan.

While the Japanese would be content with restricting the number of their 8-inch gun secondary cruisers to four during the life of the treaty (ten years), they made it clear tonight that they would insist in principle upon liberty of action with this type of cruisers. They said they did not wish the number of four to be used as a precedent in any future negotiations.

The Japanese also announced that they were now disposed not to accept the British suggestion that each power retain 25 per cent. in the form of obsolete warships over and above the total tonnages mentioned in the British plan. They said the naval experts had advised them that 15 or 20 per cent. would be more reasonable.

Although the Americans still refuse to comment on the British plan, it is understood that they find it particularly hard to swallow the last paragraph, which is said to permit a transfer of tonnage from one category of warships to another.

It is said that under such a plan Great Britain and America, in principle at least, could put all of the 590,000 tons allocated for all auxiliary warships into cruisers, plus 25 per cent. allowed for obsolete ships. This would make a grand total of 737,000 tons.

This clause is objected to by the Americans on the ground that it would create great uncertainty as to what type of warships the nations would build, and in a general way lead to competitive construction, the very thing the conference was convoked to prevent.

The British spokesman again emphasized today Great Britain's desire to restrict the number of "offensive" warships. He said that no real limitation could be achieved unless the nations could agree upon the exact number of powerfully armed cruisers which could be constructed.

The British express the belief that 8-inch-gun cruisers, whether 10,000-ton vessels or warships of smaller size capable of mounting 8-inch batteries, must be classed in this category and subjected to limitation.

It is possible that owing to the fact that the Swiss national fête day falls on Monday, the plenary meeting may be adjourned.

According to information obtained in authoritative circles, Lord Cecil, member of the British delegation, during yesterday's session of the principal delegates, suggested an adjournment of the conference for about six months in order to permit time for further reflection.

COOLIDGE STILL HOPES TO MAKE TRIP TO CUBA

He Expects That Any Difficulties Tending to Prevent the Visit Can Be Overcome.

Special to The New York Times.

RAPID CITY, S. D., July 29.—Such difficulties as might tend to interfere with the departure of President Coolidge from the United States in the event he accepts the invitation of President Machado of Cuba to attend the Pan American Conference in Havana, probably can be overcome, the President believes. He is continuing to give consideration to the invitation extended by the Cuban President, the acceptance of which would give him an opportunity to deliver an important utterance on Latin-American relations.

The difficulties in the way of an acceptance are chiefly whether the President's duties will permit him to absent himself from the country next Spring when the Pan American Conference meets.

The President told President Machado he would take the invitation under consideration and expressed the hope that he might be able to accept. The matter is being carefully canvassed now and a decision will be reached within a comparatively short time.

Mr. Coolidge, who has been getting much pleasure out of riding over South Dakota trails by horseback, will not continue such exercise in Washington, it was stated today. He likes riding over mountains and in fields, such sport as he had while a boy in Vermont. He cannot get any excitement out of horseback riding through narrow park paths, and he does not like to cross city streets and pass motor cars.

In addition to the objections as to congested traffic conditions, the President finds it would take too much time in Washington, changing clothes and getting ready for such exercise.

VESUVIUS IS AGAIN ACTIVE.

Flames Issuing From Volcano Make Night Spectacle for Tourists.

NAPLES, July 29 (AP). Mount Vesuvius has again resumed unusually strong activity and has been presenting a remarkable night-time spectacle.

The gradual increase in the height of the internal cone is making the flames from the crater visible from a distance. All last night a lofty column of smoke issued from the crater, accompanied by staccato explosions.

Many tourists spend the night near the crater of the volcano.

party in the United States and very likely enable them to start building cruisers on a scale which will give America pre-eminence and make it impossible for us, with our limited means, to compete."

Widespread regret was expressed in official circles over the failure of the conference to reach an agreement, but one authority, asked what would be the effect of a complete breakdown, replied unhesitatingly: "None whatever."

It is maintained that Great Britain placed her cards on the table, the proposals which are now unacceptable to America having been put forward as early as last year.

A good deal is being made here of the fact that the American delegates refused to consider the British proposals for a reduction in the size of battleships. The Daily Telegraph says editorially:

"Although the Admiralty would impose a somewhat higher maximum total tonnage for cruisers, destroyers and submarines than the American delegates would fix, the British plan would really be much more effective in limiting armaments and would thus fulfill President Coolidge's purpose with more certainty, besides offering greater possibilities for saving money."

Need of Understanding Stressed.

The Westminster Gazette agrees with The New York Times that there are more important issues at Geneva than the technical ones, and continues:

"As The New York Times says, it is more important to limit misunderstanding than to limit armaments. If the former is checked the latter ma look after themselves.

"The danger of a breakdown is that the relations of the two countries would be embittered. Such a development as the result of a conference upon disarmament would be an unpardonable irony, and the suggestion of The New York Times that the two countries 'are best consulting their separate interests when they seek to understand each other and work together' is worth consideration by the statesmen of both countries."

The Daily Mail, under the caption "Good Friends Still," observes that disagreement at Geneva will be unfortunate but certainly not tragic, saying:

"It is ridiculous to suppose that because Britain and the United States have not yet been able to find the precise formula for the regulation of their naval armaments in cruisers and minor craft, this country is going to embark on any vast program of warship construction. Whatever ships we build, every one knows we shall not be building against the United States, but against the risk of attack from other quarters."

League of Nations circles, both here and at Geneva, are said to be greatly worried. They feel that if the three powers are unable to agree on naval disarmament, the prospects of an agreement being reached by a score of powers on the more vast problems of land disarmament are most remote. The postponement of the World Conference on Disarmament indefinitely is now envisaged as a possibility.

PARIS FEARS GENEVA WILL NOT AID PEACE

French Doubt That Naval Parley Will End Monday, but Think It Will Not Succeed.

THEY WANT ACCORD REACHED

If This Is Impossible, They Hope That England and America Will Disagree as Friends.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 29.—Paris is watching the naval conference with constant and real interest. The prevailing opinion in the French Capital tonight is that the meeting will not succeed, but it is doubted that it will end Monday. This feeling appears in well-informed quarters to be based simply on the belief that a breakup of the conference might have such a far-reaching effect on the relations of England and the United States that the leaders of the two countries will certainly try again to reach a settlement.

While there are some Frenchmen who see relations between France and America improving, should the Geneva conference fail, since relations between London and Washington would thereby suffer, it must be said in all fairness to the French that the vast majority of the French leaders prefer that there should be an arrangement between the two great naval powers.

This wish is due to a feeling that the world needs peace and that the ends of peace and world stability would not be served by the coming of a feeling of coolness between the great Anglo-Saxon nations. Even if England and America disagree, their common friend, France, hopes it will be, as Sir Austen Chamberlain suggested last night in the Commons, as friends.

The French, who with their extended history as a nation, have a somewhat long-range view on matters of international politics, are now convinced that no matter how the conference turns out it will do harm in international relations. They feel that if it succeeds it must mean that America will have to build many tons of fighting ships to achieve equality with England, and that this effort will not tend to develop love between America and England. They are also sure that if the conference ends brusquely, an analogous feeling, but stronger, will rapidly grow in the public minds of both nations.

Blame Open Diplomacy.

They say that the conference once more shows the error of "market-place" diplomacy and justifies the quiet, non-public preparations which old fashioned diplomacy would have made before convoking a public meeting.

With respect to the merits of the issues at the conference, from which they officially are absent, the French have not taken sides. They regard it as a contest between American and British nationalists and are willing to be on the side lines of such an effort which, if it had no unhappy results, they would very much enjoy. Perhaps they would chuckle if America achieved naval equality with England, but if we did not the French would be merely in face of a situation which is not new for them since England has long had the world's biggest fleet.

If the French have any conviction with regard to the naval race, it is in the reality that America will not be able, in any near future, to obtain naval equality with England, because in the time of crisis British shipping means as much auxiliary aid to England's fleet which America could not counterbalance.

Side With the English.

However, there is one development of the conference which interests the French from the standpoint of theory. And that is the firmness with which England supports the case that she alone can decide best what she needs for national defense, for that is what the French need to do with regard to land armament. This is the viewpoint of professional French diplomats.

Those Frenchmen who are zealots of the disarmament cause do not see it being furthered by the Geneva Conference, and these theorists are inclined to side with England rather than with America, because they feel that w have not well presented our case for needing as large a fleet as England. And any sort of claim that we should have a big fleet because we want it and can afford it brings from these theorists the demand: Why do we not also build up the biggest army in the world?

They contend that prestige should play no part in disarmament proceedings and that armaments should be based only on real defense needs. And to put it frankly, very few Europeans have been convinced that America really needs as large a fleet as Britain.

TO PROSECUTE DORIOT FOR SPEECHES IN CHINA

French Government Will Press Charge of Sedition Against Communist Deputy.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, July 29.—The French Government has decided to prosecute Deputy Jacques Doriot for sedition. M. Doriot comes, after Marcel Cachin, as the most conspicuous Communist leader in France.

The Government's case accusing him of plotting against the security of the State, will be based on his activities in China during recent months, where he took an active part in the Communist activities in support of the Southern Chinese armies.

The decision to bring him to trial forms part of the new French policy of firmness toward the Soviets. M. Doriot has long been known as one of Moscow's leading agents in France.

The Government considered trying him some time ago, but appeared to have dropped the matter. But recently the Cabinet obtained official reports of speeches made by M. Doriot in China, notably at Canton, where in one address the Deputy characterized French imperialism in Indo-China as being as bad as the imperialism of the Western Powers in China.

It is understood that Premier Poincaré intends to push the case against Deputy Doriot to the limit, and to insist on his conviction and a prison sentence.

Deputy Doriot and MM. Cachin and Semard, two other prominent red leaders, are now in prison on various charges.

Indications are present that the Government intends to become much more firm toward the activity of the Reds in France, and it is probable that Minister Rakowsky, who is now in Moscow, has gone to explain that the Third International must slow down in France or there will be danger of a rupture of relations with Russia.

M. Rykov, Chairman of Moscow's Economic Council, being a member of both the Internationals and the Soviet Government, should, it is figured here, be able to understand that situation in one or the other of his capacities.

The Communists this afternoon received another rebuff at the hands of the French labor union when its congress passed a resolution refusing admission to its ranks of the Communist-controlled rival organization known as the "Cgtu" body.

The resolution provided that "Cgtu" members as individuals could be accepted as union members, but that the leaders, whose purposes and aims were to undermine the French labor organization, would be excluded from participation in the congress.

BRITISH PARLIAMENT ENDS SUMMER SESSION

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 29.—With the royal assent given the Trade Disputes act and ninety-three other pieces of legislation, the Summer session of Parliament ended today.

Many members, taking time by the forelock, had arrived in holiday garb and brought their golf clubs and suitcases with them in their cars so as to lose no time in beginning their vacation, which may last until Nov. 8.

Premier Baldwin had already begun his working holiday en route to Canada.

The most unusual holiday idea is that of T. D. Fenby, deputy chief Liberal whip, who will spend the interim working in his smithy at Bridington. Sir Austen Chamberlain will devote part of his holiday to gardening. He is reputed to be a hard worker on the land and is a striking figure in old breeches, heavy boots and his inevitable monocle.

The Trade Disputes bill, which finally became a law today, is probably one of the most important pieces of legislation of the present Parliament and is bound to play a considerable part in the next election, in view of the pronouncement of the Labor leaders that it will be repealed as soon as the Labor Party is in power. It makes general strikes and intimidation illegal, forbids compulsory political levies in trade unions and prohibits civil servants from belonging to outside trade unions.

Another feature of the session was Winston Churchill's budget, the brilliance of whose devices could not conceal the fact that it was designed to cover the unprecedented national expenditures of more than $4,000,000,000.

A measure of interest to American picture producers is the Films bill, which, as the result of the determined opposition in the committee by Labor members, was laid over until the Autumn. It fixes a quota of British pictures which must be shown and prohibits blind booking.

Another interesting proposal which proved abortive was Lord Cave's scheme to reform the House of Lords. So much opposition developed within the Government itself that little more is likely to be heard of it.

The Prime Minister's "votes for flappers" proposal, which proposes to place men and women on electoral equality, also was subject to much Conservative criticism and probably will be deferred as long as possible.

It has been made clear on more than one occasion during the session that the Government does not purpose to go to the country until 1929.

PLANS GALLIPOLI MEMORIAL.

Turkey to Erect Huge Monument to Its Men Who Fell There.

GALLIPOLI, Turkey, July 29 (AP).—The Turkish Government is to erect a memorial on the heights of Gallipoli to the 100,000 Turks who perished in the World War campaign there.

According to a member of the Construction Committee, it will be of such proportions "that it will make the existing monuments erected by the Allies seem no more than insignificant bits of stone."

It will be 152 feet high, and $36,000 already has been appropriated by the Ministry of National Defense for its construction.

TOKIO IS HOPING PARLEY WON'T FAIL

OKADA VOICES CONFIDENCE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TOKIO, July 29.—Although practically all of the Japanese correspondents at Geneva have cabled that the naval conference is hopelessly deadlocked and will end on Monday and the dispatches of Admiral Saito, head of the Japanese delegation, admit that the situation is grave, the Navy and Foreign Offices refuse to give up hope and express the belief that even between now and Monday adjustments may be found.

As Navy Minister Okada left the council in which the heads of the Japanese Navy had been discussing for two hours today the latest developments at Geneva, he said:

Yesterday, before the Geneva parley was resumed, Admiral Okada made a statement for THE NEW YORK TIMES which, owing to time required for translation, was not released until today. He still endorses it and does not believe that the latest developments have altered its significance.

The statement contains the interesting disclosure that an important group in the Japanese Navy wanted to demand equality of ratio (presumably in cruisers), but this proposal was overruled in favor of the proposal which Japan actually made for limitation on the basis of existing strengths.

Faith in Ultimate Success.

"With the Geneva conference as it stands at present," Admiral Okada said in his statement, "our hopes are based upon the unstinted efforts now being made by all of the delegates for an agreement.

"Whatever the seeming difficulties may be, we have full confidence in the conference's ultimate success, but only faith in the final result can bring success where so many conflicting elements have to be faced.

"As far as Japan is concerned, our position has been consistent from the beginning. We stand for the existing strengths, including the sanctioned programs, and we regard this as the simplest, the most practical and the freest from objections of all the plans proposed.

"Our plan alters nothing, causes no additional burdens on the taxpayers, and causes no unrest in other nations, and the very assurance that none of the three powers was going to build would promote peace and prevent a hostile atmosphere from developing in the future.

Ratio of Equality Plan Rejected.

"A very influential party in the Japanese Navy favored asking for an equality of ratio with the maximum set at a convenient level. In spite of that, we proposed the existing strength because we thought it more practical and more easily to be agreed upon.

"Moreover, the existing strengths have a happy precedent because it was the idea of the United States at Washington. Our idea would be easier to carry out because it does not involve scrapping the units under construction or interference with the existing programs.

"However, we are far from obdurate and are ready to make such concessions as we can without jeopardizing the fundamental principle upon which our plans are based—namely, limitation.

"We cannot for any conceivable reason accept an agreement which would force us to pile up armaments on top of what we already have, though, even so, we shall not be particular about small variations which are negligible for practical purposes.

"I have been informed of the rumors that prevail in America to the effect Japan is aligning herself with Britain. These rumors are absurd. We are aligning with no powers and with all of the powers now meeting at Geneva. There is a complete understanding in this respect between Mr. Gibson and Admiral Saito.

"We are inspired by no sentiment other than that which prompted America to propose this meeting for the sake of world peace."

PARIS, July 29.—The Good Welcome Home, founded by the late James Gordon Bennett in 1902 for abandoned and suffering animals, was reinaugurated this afternoon at Gennevilliers under the patronage of Mme. Camille du Gast. The Minister of Agriculture and the Prefet of Police presided at the ceremony.

Mme. Du Gast, who is well known for the mothers and babies dispensary which she has maintained for years in one of the poor quarters of Paris, has brought the Gordon Bennett work entirely up to date, the house has been entirely made over and the kennels enlarged to hold 200 dogs. The operating room has been entirely re-equipped and a model kitchen installed.

Only healthy or curable animals are kept—incurables being killed by injections.

JOYCE THREATENS SUIT IN SURETY ROW

NEW CONTRACT IS ADOPTED

Transportation Board Moves "to Free Contractors From Grip of Bond Combine."

It was indicated yesterday that the action of the Board of Transportation on Thursday in persuading the Board of Estimate to permit the substitution of other security for a surety bond on a subway contract marked the beginning of active warfare between the city and the surety companies.

The Board of Transportation followed its initial move by announcing a new form of contract for subway construction designed to "bring relief to subway contractors and free them from the grip of the bonding combine." William B. Joyce, Chairman of the National Surety Company, singled out by Chairman John H. Delaney of the Board of Transportation as "the head of a band of conspirators," demanded an apology from Mr. Delaney and threatened court proceedings. Samuel Untermyer, who is to investigate the surety companies for Mr. Delaney, suggested that the city do its own bonding, just as it carries its own fire insurance. State Superintendent of Insurance James A. Beha defended the surety companies and mildly assailed Mr. Delaney.

A meeting had been scheduled to take place at Superintendent Beha's office yesterday morning at which the surety men met. Besides Mr. Joyce there were present R. R. Brown, President of the American Surety Company; Vincent D. Cullen, Vice President of the Fidelity and Casualty Company; E. C. Lunt, Vice President of the Great American Indemnity Company; President O'Neill of the Royal Indemnity Company, and Edward R. Lewis, manager of the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company. The statements of Superintendent Beha and Mr. Joyce were issued some hours after this conference, which was an executive one.

Change Form of Contract.

Meanwhile the Board of Transportation had held a meeting on the form of contract and security for the construction of the $5,000,000 car shops and repair yard at 207th Street and Tenth Avenue. In connection with this it was proposed that the contract form be changed as to the form of security to be required from the contractor. Later a statement was issued by the board in which the following assertions were made:

"The board, which has a construction program involving more than $500,000,000 worth of work under way, will probably change the security clauses of all the contracts still to be let. . . . The board at its regular meeting on Tuesday will adopt a form of contract which would bring relief to subway contractors and will free them from the grip of the bonding combine. . . .

"The alternative which it is proposed to write into all future rapid transit construction contracts provides for an initial deposit of 5 per cent. of the contract price in the form of cash, Federal or State bonds, or corporate stock of the city; the withholding of 15 per cent. of monthly payments until two-thirds of the contract has been completed, after which the retained percentages will be refunded gradually, until 5 per cent. of the contract is held, and this amount to be turned back to the contractor at the conclusion of the work."

Such a clause, it was said, would eliminate the surety companies entirely from subway construction work. The city has paid $7,000,000 for surety bonds on such work, the premiums being added to the amount of the contractors' bids. The board says "less than 1 per cent. of the amount of these bond payments has been returned to the city in the form of surety defaults."

Joyce Defends Bond Refusal.

Mr. Joyce's statement was long. It related that the company had refused to bond the contracting firm of Mason & Hangar because "we did not believe the financial condition of the contractor warranted us in taking a part of this risk." Mr. Joyce also said:

"The statement that Mr. Delaney is reported to have made to the effect that 'Mr. Mason called upon Mr. Joyce and was told "there is not enough in it for us"' is a falsehood, for I told Mr. Mason that, although the premium was very low, it had nothing to do with our refusal."

Mr. Joyce explained that the Mason & Hangar bid for the Fulton Street subway work was $1,745,000 lower than the next lowest bidder and averaged $5,158,000 lower than all other bidders, hence his company thought the bid too low, particularly because of the risks involved in this construction. He also spoke of the amount of the premium and continued:

"The accusation of Mr. Delaney reported in this morning's papers that 'William B. Joyce * * * is the head of a band of conspirators' makes it necessary for me to ask Mr. Delaney to make a public apology, and failure to do so within a reasonable length of time will result in an opportunity being given to him to prove his charges in court.

"It seems to me Mr. Delaney is unwise to make such statements when he must know that neither he nor any one else has any proper basis whatever for them. Public officers frequently and unwarrantably abuse citizens only to aggrandize themselves, and this appears to be such an instance. * * *

"I have dealt withe the public for nearly forty years and in that period I have never had a public officer make a more unjustifiable statement.

"This company is anxious to help the city in its transit problems, and abuse by Mr. Delaney will not change our attitude."

Superintendent Beha's statement set forth that Mr. Beha had called yesterday's conference to see what could be done about the Mason & Hangar bond and that "between the sending of the notice for the conference and the holding of the conference the surety companies were publicly attacked as having entered into a conspiracy to mulct the city, the reason being that the surety companies were resentful because of the recent reduction in the surety bond rates."

Beha Holds Charge Unfair.

The State Superintendent then set forth that he is convinced, after investigation, that no surety company refused Mason & Hangar a bond because of the reduction in the premium rate and that no official of any company attempted to influence any other company in the matter. He said that the reduction in rate was made, after a conference, because the companies felt it their duty to facilitate the awarding of subway contracts and that "it is unfair to charge any of the surety company officials with vindictiveness because of the refusal of individual companies to go upon any subway bonds." The statement concluded:

"Superintendent Beha is persisting in his efforts to find a satisfactory solution of this situation, although his task had been made much more difficult by reason of the unwarranted attack against the surety company officials."

When this statement was issued Mr. Delaney had left the offices of the Board of Transportation for the day. An official of the board said, however, that the action taken earlier referring to the announcement of the proposed change in the form of contracts could be regarded as a full answer to Mr. Beha.

Untermyer Ready for Inquiry.

Mr. Untermyer admitted he had consulted members of the Board of Transportation and had complied with the request to investigate the transactions of the surety companies. He said the charges of such companies are grossly exorbitant and that in his judgment the city should become its own insurer. No company, he said, will give bonds unless indemnified, and the city could take the same form of indemnity and for half the saving on the bonds could establish an insurance fund and still save millions in the transaction. He was not certain that the city would not have to get power from the Legislature to carry out this suggestion. He recalled that in the Lockwood investigation exorbitant charges of surety companies were a factor, especially in connection with workmen's compensation insurance, as adding to the cost of building. He sought legislative relief for the former, arguing at Albany for an exclusive State Workmen's Compensation law.

"But the insurance lobby was too strong," he said yesterday.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, July 29.—Count Wilhelm of Waldburg-Zeil was killed, and the Countess and her aunt, Princess Salm, were injured in a motoring accident yesterday on the Oberalp Pass.

When their car reached the top of the pass, which is 6,720 feet above sea level, the Count, declaring that he was tired, handed the wheel to the Countess. The descent had hardly begun when the car dashed over the parapet.

After several somersaults, during which the two women were flung out, it landed forty feet below. The Count, aged 37, who was pinned under the car, was instantly killed. His body was extracted by a number of tourists, who witnessed the accident.

The Countess and the Princess, who were not seriously injured, were transported to a hotel on the Oberalp. The accident was caused by the brakes failing.

Two prominent families of the old Holy Roman Empire were involved in the accident in which Count Waldburg-Zeil lost his life.

The Count, whose full name Gotha's Almanac gives as Marie Gustavus Wilhelm Charles Maximilian, belongs to the Zeil or second branch of the Waldburg family, which dates back to the wars of Guelphs and Ghibellines in the twelfth century.

The Count, who went by the name of Wilhelm, was born at the ancestral castle at Zeil on Jan. 19, 1880. He was a retired cavalry captain. He lived at the Castle of Rimpach, Leutkirch, Württemberg.

The Countess, whom he married at Vienna on Sept. 28, 1921, was Altgravine or Countess Marie Theresa of Salm-Reifferscheidt-Raitz, and was born in Vienna on Feb. 28, 1896.

Her aunt, whose name is also Marie Theresa, became a Princess by her marriage on May 8, 1897, to Prince Erich Augustus, uncle of Count Wilhelm and head of the House of Waldburg-Zeil at his death Sept. 2, 1918, when he was killed at the front in France. He was then a Major. The Princess was born Oct. 31, 1869.

The Salms trace their family back to 998. The line of Reifferscheidt-Raitz, the second branch, was founded in 1720.

BUSES REPLACE TROLLEYS.

Harrison Permits Change on Silver Lake-White Plains Line.

Special to The New York Times.

HARRISON, N. Y., July 29.—Buses will replace trolleys on the Silver Lake line to White Plains, on Monday, it was announced today after the town board granted consent to the proposal to the Westchester Street Transportation Company, a subsidiary of the Third Avenue Railroad Company. White Plains had already consented to the change.

The buses will run from here to midway between Hancock and Jefferson Streets on the Boulevard in Silver Lake. Alfred Davison, chief counsel for the Third Avenue Railway System, explained that the company still has the franchises to run the buses as far as the trolleys operated. The trolleys run now only to Hancock Street. There are no tracks beyond that point.

Before granting consent, the town board held that the company must run the buses to Barnes Lane.

UNION PLANS FIGHT ON I. R. T. IN COURT

Counsel Says Effort Will Be Made to Break Company's Contract With Men.

NO CONNECTION WITH STRIKE

Action Decided Upon Before Recent Crisis, Declares Perlman—Wagner to Appear in Suit.

Papers in a legal action by which the Amalgamated Association of Electric and Street Railway Employes will seek to break the contracts of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company with its employes, have been prepared and will be filed in the Supreme Court next week, it was announced yesterday by Nathan D. Perlman of 475 Fifth Avenue, who, with United States Senator Robert F. Wagner, is counsel for the Amalgamated.

The signatures of employes were obtained on or since July 1 and, the Amalgamated alleges, were exacted by coercion. In signing the contracts, the employes agreed to a reservation empowering the I. R. T. to discharge them "when deemed advisable" because of "economic or other conditions," according to Mr. Perlman.

"In other words," he said, "we contend that the contract is not an equitable one, but a contract at will. Practically, it gives the I. R. T. a seeming right to discharge any employe it sees fit merely by saying that it no longer wishes to employ him. It is the same contract by which the employe is made a member of the company union.

"In the complaint we recount that the men in many cases were given no opportunity to read what they were signing, and in some cases were not capable of reading what they were signing. The papers, which will be filed next week—I don't know the exact date yet—have no connection with the threatened strike. The suit was contemplated some time ago."

Patrick J. Shea and James H. Coleman, leaders in the strike movement which Mayor Walker succeeded in checking, continued their policy of silence. Neither would comment on reports that they were not satisfied with the manner in which subway officials were living up to their agreement with the Mayor to take back employes discharged for sympathy with the Amalgamated.

Officials of the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Company said that in the last few days "several" of the seven or eight employes who were discharged for strike agitation had been reinstated, and that those who had not been reinstated had failed to apply for their old jobs. If they applied they would be accepted, it was said.

TO CONSIDER CAR SERVICE.

Conference Today on City's Staten Island Electricity Bill.

Officials of the Staten Island Edison Company will confer today with Albert Goldman, Commissioner of Plant and Structures, regarding the threat of the company to cut off the power for the seven municipal trolley lines of Staten Island because of the failure of the city to pay a $175,000 power bill. The company has announced that the power will be cut off on Monday if the bill is not paid, but whether this threat will be carried out will depend on the outcome of today's conference.

If the power is cut off, resident of numerous parts of Staten Island will be seriously affected by the halting of service on the municipal lines which include two trackless trolley lines. Several petitions have been sent to Mayor Walker urging him to take action to prevent the stoppage of service.

OPPOSES B. M. T. BID FOR TRANSIT BONDS

The opinion that the proposed issue of $20,000,000 of 5 per cent. bonds of the New York Rapid Transit Corporation would have an intrinsic value of at least par and a market value of not far below was expressed yesterday by Dr. John Bauer, expert witness for the city, in testimony before Transit Commissioner Charles C. Lockwood at the hearing on the company's application for permission to sell the entire issue to the B. M. T., its parent company, at 80.

Samuel Untermyer, special counsel of the commission, who was joined with the city in opposing the application, declared that the commission had power to compel the company to submit the entire issue to competitive bidding instead of selling it at 20 points below par to the B. M. T. Mr. Untermyer based this contention on a provision in the contract between the city and the New York Rapid Transit Corporation under which it operates the B. M. T. subway system. A clause in this contract provides that the commission may direct the sale of bonds issued for equipment or betterments by competitive bidding.

Dr. Bauer supported Mr. Untermyer's contention that it would be better financing for both the company and the city if the former should issue prior lien bonds, authorized but not issued, instead of the securities which the commission has been asked to approve. After cross-examination by A. M. Williams of counsel for the B. M. T., who inquired into Dr. Bauer's qualifications as an expert on bond values and methods of floating bond issues, the hearing was adjourned to next Wednesday.

Although it is practically certain that the commission will deny the company's application, it was learned that the commission desires to submit some alternative proposal to which the company will agree, so that the purchase of new steel cars, for which about $12,000,000 of the proposed bond issue is necessary, may not be delayed. The new steel cars will be used to replace wooden cars on those B. M. T. elevated lines which are strong enough structurally to carry them.

DENIES CAMDEN CHARGES.

Former City Solicitor Says Official Now in Office Approved Bills.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMDEN, N. J., July 29.—Criminal action against members of the previous municipal administration was promised today by Assistant Prosecutor Joseph Varbalow if the financial report submitted by Walter R. Darby, head of the State Department of Municipal Accounts, showed the law had been broken.

Mr. Darby's report, made public at Trenton yesterday, described alleged irregularities in the city's affairs, including manipulation of contracts, failure to publish statements of receipts and expenditures, and violations of the law regulating local school taxes.

Howard Miller, City Solicitor under the King administration, which is under attack, asserted that the Darby report was filled with errors.

"All the vouchers were drawn by the City Controller, Sydney P. McCord, who has been retained by the new administration. Every act of the commission was familiar to him. Had there been any violation of the law by the Commissioners, no power would have induced him to countenance such violations."

DIVORCED MINISTER OUSTED BY BISHOP

Dr. H. A. Lynch, Assistant to Dr. Guthrie, Is Deposed for Marrying Again.

VIOLATED CANON OF CHURCH

Episcopal Paper Announces Action by Dr. Manning—Justified, Says St. Mark's Rector.

Today's Churchman, an Episcopal weekly published in this city, contains an official notice from Bishop William T. Manning to the effect that he has deposed from the ministry the Rev. Harold Arthur Lynch, who was assistant for the last six years to the Rev. Dr. William Norman Guthrie, rector of the Episcopal Church of St. Mark's in-the-Bouwerie, Tenth Street, west of Second Avenue.

The action of Bishop Manning was the result of the marriage of Mr. Lynch, who was divorced, and his first wife is still living. The canons of the Protestant Episcopal Church prohibit a divorced clergyman from remarrying during the lifetime of his former wife.

It was said that Mr. Lynch's second wife was a Miss Vickers, secretary for the last six months to Dr. Guthrie. Mr. Lynch could not be found last night and information as to where and when the wedding took place was not obtainable.

When he was reached over the long-distance telephone from his Summer home near Stamford, Conn., Dr. Guthrie said that the connection of Mr. Lynch with St. Mark's had ceased May 31 last.

"The rector, wardens and vestrymen of St. Mark's knew nothing of Mr. Lynch's plans for remarrying," said Dr. Guthrie, "and I hope you will make this very plain, because we do not approve of his step at all. Bishop Manning was perfectly justified in deposing him from the ministry. All I know now about the matter is what I have been told by others. Mr. Lynch has not communicated with me.

"I am exceedingly sorry Mr. Lynch has taken this step. I was very fond of him. I knew he was divorced and the reasons were perfectly satisfactory to me. But Mr. Lynch is no child and he knew that if he married again he could not remain a clergyman of the Episcopal Church. The triennial general convention in Portland, Ore., a few years ago made the canons so strict that, as I understand them, an Episcopal clergyman can under no circumstances remarry when his divorced wife is living. This was done to keep the late Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant from being able to marry Mrs. Lydig."

Mr. Lynch, according to the Churchman's announcement, asked the Bishop to take the action he did.

For years before going to St. Mark's, Mr. Lynch was assistant to Dr. Grant at the Episcopal Church of the Ascension, Fifth Avenue and Tenth Street.

Mr. Lynch's first wife was Miss Ruth Leonard Hutchinson. The marriage took place in 1917.

the morning, but in the afternoon Mr. Thompson alone held the floor. The two attorneys thanked the Governor sincerely for his attention.

"All I can say," Mr. Thompson declared afterward, "is that I did the best I could for my clients. We covered every bit of ground we could."

Reads Statement by Vanzetti.

Mr. Thompson took with him to read to the Governor a long statement dictated to a stenographer in the Charlestown State Prison by Vanzetti.

In the statement Vanzetti described at length his grievances, backing up his assertions with dates and specific instances. It contained part of the data he used when he made his famous speech to Judge Webster Thayer in Dedham court.

As the two attorneys walked into the Governor's office Mr. Thompson's face was grave. His jaw was set. His usual affable, genial manner had been cast off. He was ready to battle for the two radicals, who are but thirteen days from the electric chair.

Sacco-Vanzetti defense alibi witnesses today gave to Governor Fuller a petition in which they demanded to be arrested as perjurers if he decides to permit the execution of the two prisoners.

The petition was taken to the State House by Beitrando Brini, a law student, who as a boy of 13 was befriended and encouraged to study by Vanzetti.

Petition of Alibi Witnesses.

The petition reads as follows:

"We, the undersigned, alibi witnesses for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, respectfully call your Excellency's attention to the effect of your decision upon us.

"If you do not set Sacco and Vanzetti free you thereby accuse us of perjury. As perjurers we are subject to punishment under the laws of this Commonwealth.

"We ask you in the interest of truth and justice to arrest us and bring us to trial, charged with perjury, if you decide against Sacco and Vanzetti."

It was signed by R. Albert Bosco of East Boston, A. Dentomaro of New York City, Felice Guadagni of Newton Centre, Mass.; Melvin V. Cori and Enrico Bostoni of North Plymouth, Mass., and Mrs. Mary Fertini, Carlo Balboni, Giovannia de Carli, Augusta Nicoli, Vincent L. Longhi, Augusta Malagnti, Bellirando M. Brini, Mrs. Faye Wager and Alfonsina Brini, all of Plymouth, Mass.

Governor Fuller today received by telegram the plea from the widow of Alessandro Berardelli, one of the two men slain in the South Braintree holdup, word of which came to the defense committee last night. She asked freedom for the men, declaring she had always doubted their guilt.

His forenoon argument, Mr. Thompson explained, was devoted almost entirely to the alleged innocence of the men, together with some attention to the claim that the trial was unfair.

Says They Are in "Pitiful Condition."

"Sacco and Vanzetti are in a pitiful condition over at the prison," he said. He remarked the information from the prison that their hunger strike is beginning to affect the two men.

"Europeans—these men are Europeans—that explains a lot of things about this case. It is simply impossible for Americans to understand these two men without an understanding of their European turn of mind.

"Offhand, I can think of only one analogy. Assume that President Lowell of Harvard was arrested and tried in Russia for some crime. How could the Russians possibly get his point of view. He would immediately be denounced as a President of a capitalist college, a friend of capital, an enemy of the working class, and before his trial had progressed far bullets would be flying back of the court house."

Munich Police Ban Sacco Meeting.

MUNICH, Bavaria, July 29 (AP).—The police have forbidden the holding of a mass meeting planned by workers for next Sunday in protest against the sentencing of Sacco and Vanzetti to death. A number of noted literary men of Bavaria had been scheduled to speak in favor of a reprieve.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, July 29 (AP).—Mass meetings of workers have been organized here for Sunday by the Uruguayan Labor Federation to demand the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti.

BUENOS AIRES, July 29 (AP).—Preparations are being made by the Federation of Regional Workers of Argentina, the strongest labor organization in the country, for a meeting Sunday to protest against the sentencing to death of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti by the Massachusetts court. The next day there will be another demonstration of sympathy for the condemned men.

SEVEN MEETINGS VOTE PLEAS.

Final Sacco Protest Assembly Here to Be Held Tomorrow.

Seven open-air mass meetings of Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers were held in various parts of the city last night to protest against the execution of the two condemned radicals. Speakers at several of the meetings expressed the belief that there was little hope that the men would escape the electric chair.

Similar resolutions were adopted at each of the meetings. One asserted the innocence of the condemned men, protested against the secrecy of Governor Fuller's review of the case and asked the Governor of Massachusetts to release them. The other resolution, which is to be sent in the form of a telegram to Sacco and Vanzetti, pledged support to their cause. The speakers asked all those attending the meetings to be present at a final mass meeting which is to be held tomorrow afternoon in Union Square.

The places at which the meetings were held were Rutgers Square, Tenth Avenue and Second Street, Fifth Avenue and 110th Street, Prospect Avenue and 163d Street, the Bronx, Eastern Parkway and Pacific Street and Hopkinson and Fifth Avenues, Brooklyn and Grand Street Extension, Williamsburg. Detectives and uniformed policemen were on guard at the meetings, but no disorders were reported.

B. M. T. FIGHTS BUSES, MAY ASK INJUNCTION

the Coney Island and Gravesend Bus Corporation, is expected to join the B. M. T. in opposition to certain of the Brooklyn bus routes.

John H. Pardee, President of the J. G. White Management Corporation, which will operate the Equitable bus lines, said yesterday that the company would apply to the Transit Commission for certificates of convenience and necessity just as soon as Mayor Walker signed the franchise and other formalities connected with its issuance were completed.

Mr. Pardee said that in the meantime the company would proceed with its arrangements for getting buses and for providing for garages and machine shops. "We intend to go ahead as speedily as possible," he said. "Ultimately we will have about 700 buses in operation."

Borough President Bryne of Brooklyn, whose vote for the award of the franchise to the Equitable company was decisive, denied that he was influenced by the promise of additional subways for Brooklyn, which were voted by the Board of Estimate just before the vote on the award of the bus franchises. Mr. Byrne also said that John H. McCooey, Brooklyn Democratic leader, and his brother-in-law had no part in bringing about his change of mind.

"The reason why I voted for the Equitable instead of holding out for the Coney Island and Gravesend Bus Corporation was because this matter had been pending for more than a year and I did not care to appear in the rôle of an obstructionist," Mr. Byrne said. "I realized that if I still withheld my vote at Thursday's meeting there would be no buses in the streets of Brooklyn this year.

"I had no idea of going along with the Mayor until after the Board recessed for lunch. During that time the Mayor presented the case to me. I want to emphasize that the Mayor used no promise and offered no inducement to obtain my vote."

When asked whether Mr. McCooey had influenced him in any way to vote with the Mayor, Mr. Byrne said:

"No, he did not. Mr. McCooey believes and has contended throughout the bus discussion that the bus franchises should have been awarded through competitive bidding by the sealed bid method."

Says Mayor Spoke Bluntly.

Mr. Byrne said that Mayor Walker had spoken to him bluntly in discussing the bus situation and had stressed the fact that action had been delayed for more than a year and that the time was ripe for a vote, so that the people of the city might have bus service as soon as possible.

"I am still of the opinion that the Brooklyn bus franchise should have been granted to the Coney Island and Gravesend Bus Corporation," he said. "But I do not regret my action in voting for the Equitable Coach Company in the least. I still believe that the Coney Island and Gravesend Bus Corporation could have given Brooklyn better service than any outside company, but I am glad that this bus question is settled at last."

In answer to a question as to his knowledge of the financial ability of the Equitable Company, Mr. Byrne said:

"I know nothing about the financial ability of this concern. I left that to the Mayor's good judgment. He has had the very competent advice of John H. Delaney, Chairman of the Board of Transportation.

"It is my belief that the terms of the contract do not greatly interest the man in the street. They do not interest me. The big thing is service. What the average citizen wants is to have a bus ready when he wants to get into one."

Browne Assails Franchise.

Stewart Browne, President of the United Real Estate Owners' Association, who was at the Board of Estimate meeting to oppose the grant of a franchise to the Equitable Company, declared that Mayor Walker had refused to grant a public hearing.

"Mayor Walker jammed through the franchise for the Equitable Coach Company by calling out the number himself, an unusual proceeding, so that no one heard," Mr. Browne said, "and then at once asked the clerk to call the roll. By this means, no one present knew that it was the resolution granting the franchise to the Equitable Coach Company. Although I had lined up fourteen associations in opposition and representatives of them were present, no one was given an opportunity to voice their objections. That is what the Mayor considers a 'public hearing.'

"While Mayor Walker can kill strikes, he steam-rollered the rawest deal that was ever put over. Under the Equitable franchise bus users will pay in the aggregate $0 per cent. more in fares and the city will lose about $1,000,000 in revenue."

BUS STOCK ADVANCES.

Fageol, Which Controls Equitable, and American Car Shares Rise.

The grant of a tri-borough bus franchise to the Equitable Coach Company by the Board of Estimate on Thursday was followed yesterday by sharp advances in the stocks of corporations interested in that company, apparently in the expectation of large equipment orders in the near future.

Fageol Motors, which controls the Equitable Coach Company, awoke sharply from near oblivion on the Curb Exchange and at one time had nearly doubled its value. Quoted at 2½ at the previous close, it opened at 2⅝, advanced to a high of 4 and closed at 3¼, up one point for the day.

The Fageol Company is owned by the American Car and Foundry Company. The stock of the latter company was very strong on the Stock Exchange yesterday, moving between 103 and 100 and closing at 101¼, a net gain of 2⅝ points on the day. Yellow Truck, which gained 1½ points, and other bus manufacturing shares responded to the same influences.

HIRSHFIELD ASSAILS AWARD.

The suggestion that the Equitable Coach Company is really owned by prominent New Yorkers, whose names have been kept secret, was made yesterday by Magistrate David Hirshfield, in a letter to former Mayor John F. Hylan, criticising the award of the bus franchise to that company. Mr. Hirshfield added that Samuel Untermyer might investigate the company to find out who its real owners were.

"Well, the expected has happened and just as expected," Judge Hirshfield wrote. "The bus franchises worth at least $100,000,000 have been given away by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment responding to Mayor Walker's whip, to the so-called Equitable company, ostensibly owned by three gentlemen from the wooly, wild West, but in reality said to be owned by certain prominent persons in the City of New York. Else why go to California, Ohio and Kalamazoo to find men to whom to make a present of the most valuable franchises possessed by the City of New York?

"If Samuel Untermyer is a pro bono publico in fact, and an investigator in the interest of the people, he could perform no greater service to the people of the City of New York than by starting an investigation to ascertain who are the real owners of this wild Western broncho, the Equitable Coach or Bus Corporation. No doubt the disclosure would make very interesting reading.

"Some day the true owners and backers of this Equitable company will be found out. Unless like many years ago, in the case of the Brooklyn Elevated Railroad, when all information of its true ownership was resisted, claiming that the savings of widows and orphans were invested in that 'L' road and that their savings would be wiped out in case the true ownership of that road was disclosed.

"Have you also noticed that only crosstown bus lines will be operated by this Equitable company, which means another nickel for a ride up or down Manhattan?"

The three Westerners referred to by Magistrate Hirshfield as the ostensible owners of the Equitable company are the directors and officers of the company, as recently announced by John H. Pardee, President of the J. G. White Management Corporation, which will operate the Equitable bus lines. They are Frank R. Fageol, President of the Fageol Motor Company, now living at Oakland, Cal.; William O'Neal of Akron, Ohio, and C. B. Rose of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio.

URGES A FEDERATION AS CHINA'S SOLUTION

DICTATOR RULE DISCUSSED

DEBT REVISION ADVOCATED

A Society of American Nations Is Also Proposed — Sforza Predicts Closer Franco-German Accord.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., July 29.—Predictions of a new centralized Government in China, of continued uncertainty in the relations between the United States and Latin America, of slow progress in the solution of the Philippine problem, of a slow but growing entente between France and Germany, and of further consideration of a revision of the war debts were features of today's sessions of the Institute of Politics.

Differences of opinion cropped up as to whether the Tuchuns, or military governors, who have ruled North China since the fall of the monarchy in 1911, would participate in the new Government, as to whether American economic power in Latin America would necessarily mean American political domination there, and as to whether the Porthy-Bethlen régime in Hungary was "an anti-semitic factionary oligarchic dictatorship."

The round table on the Chinese situation, in which members of the institute have displayed the greatest interest, began with an analysis of the Tuchuns, of whom Chang Tso-lin is the most important, by Professor Harold S. Quigley of the University of Minnesota, Chairman of the round table. Professor Quigley, who taught political science and did research work in Far Eastern politics at Tsing Hua College, Peking, from 1921 to 1923, and is a member of the Chinese Social and Political Science Association and of the Royal Asiatic Society, declared that the Tuchuns were an important factor to be reckoned with in the present situation.

Calls Tuchuns Political Bosses.

Comparing the Tuchuns to American political bosses as far as concerned what he calls their bad qualities, Professor Quigley said they possessed power, each in his own territory, which would be hard to break. The best solution to be expected from this problem for the present, he went on, was not the abolition of the Tuchuns, but the erection of some sort of working agreement among them so that they would stop fighting among themselves and get together in a confederation.

Even if the Central Government is dominated by the Cantonese from South China and becomes Nationalistic, he continued, the Tuchuns would have to be included.

Professor Quigley said that the Central Government might take the form of a "council of elders" representative of the influential factions or regions of China, with provinces forming units in the confederation or grouping into regional units.

He pointed out that this would be historically and geographically a logical solution of the Chinese problem. Because of the influence of Tuchuns, who exert the power of feudal lords in their own domains and are sometimes called "bandit chiefs," the powers of the central government might be few at first, he continued, but they would increase as time went on. This he regarded the most practical plan yet suggester for China.

Tuchuns Must Go, Says Sforza.

Count Carlo Sforza of Rome, Italian lecturer at the institute and former Minister to China, participated in the round table. He disagreed with the rôle assigned by Professor Quigley to the Tuchuns in the future pacification of China, declaring that he saw no hope of progress through them. He has recently returned from a visit to China, and he pictured the situation there as a reversion to the spirit of medieval fifteenth century Italy, when feudal lords battled one another "for the lust of power at the head of hired armies, who fought not knowing why, amid populations that knew even less."

Nevertheless, Count Sforza agreed that some form of central or federated government would be established in China; whether for good or bad, he could not say. He and Professor Quigley were in agreement that the chief problem of China was to organize a central government with which the world powers might negotiate for a revision of the treaties to which the Chinese object, and which would be sufficiently representative of all China to insure the carrying out of new treaties and orderly international intercourse.

Professor Quigley declared that the ascendancy of the Tuchuns was inconsistent with Chinese ideas of government, and had been made possible only by the lack of any constitutional order to take the place of the old monarchy. The effects of the Tuchun system, he went on, have been the deflection of revenue for military purposes, each province having one or more armies; the total number of men under arms in China reaching 2,000,000; and the increase of brigandage, opium-growing and interference with agriculture, trade and economic development.

Despite the domestic control of the Tuchuns over the provincial and national administrations, he continued, other factors are making for stability and centralization as soon as the power of the Tuchuns can be weakened. The gentry, the family village, the district magistrates, the guilds, the respect for traditional rights and customs, and a strong common culture, he declared, could be depended upon eventually to hold the country together against the disintegrating influence of the Tuchuns.

Clash of Views on Latin America.

Promise of fireworks in future sessions of the Round Table on Latin-American affairs came with the appearance of Guy Stevens, director of the American Association of Oil Producers in Mexico, at that table, which is headed by Professor William R. Shepperd of Columbia University. There is considerable variance between the opinions of Mr. Stevens and Professor Shepperd as to what should be the policy of the United States toward Latin America, especially Mexico.

Mr. Stevens contented himself today with merely asking if it was not possible for the United States to combine a policy of economic penetration in Latin America with a policy of an "American society of nations" in the Western Hemisphere. Professor Shepperd admitted this was a possibility, although a nebulous one.

Mr. Stevens is expected to have more to say at later meetings.

Professor Shepperd said that since 1880 the United States in relation to Latin America had risen from "one among many to the headship of two continents," and that associated with this was a situation without parallell in the world today.

"There is no balance of power," he went on. "The tune of this hemisphere is a monotone."

He asserted that there were two possible developments from the present situation. One was that the Latin-American republics might become an area of a "regional understanding" or a "sphere of interest," exclusively for the United States. The other was that the United States and its sister republics to the South might form an "American society of nations" based upon equality of advancement, mutuality of sentiment, and a sentiment and a spirit of goodwill, restoring the "community of independent sovereign nations which existed in this hemisphere a century ago."

Economic Needs of Filipinos.

Professor Ralston Hayden of the University of Michigan, speaking at the round table on the Philippines, of which he is the leader, said that the outstanding problem now before the United States and the Filipino people is to increase the use of their natural wealth so that the revenues of the Philippine Government may be more nearly adequate to meet the expenses of the American and Filipino program for the development of an educated healthy, progressive and prosperous Filipino people.

"In the Philippines further social and political developments await upon further economic development," he said. "The task of American and Filipino statesmen is to stimulate and guide this in such a way that the national needs, desires and aspirations of both peoples will be met in the fullest possible degree."

At the round table on international debts, the conference leader, Dr. Joseph S. Davis, director of the Food Research Institute at Stanford University, who was an economic adviser to the American members of the Dawes Commission in 1924, said that the justice of the interallied debts settlements had not been established in the minds of many conscientious Americans, and that this problem must be met.

He admitted that none of the debts was now causing serious interference with economic progress, that reparations were being paid smoothly under the Dawes plan, and that payment under the funding agreements were being made without great difficulty, but said it is a question whether the debtors can live up to the funding agreements, or if they can whether the creditor nations will wish them to do so.

"The huge flotation of foreign loans in the United States raises serious questions for the future, affecting not only our trade and financial stability but our national policies," he declared.

William T. Hornaday, naturalist, advanced the opinion that "America's obligation to the allies" must be considered, and said that hatred of America among Europeans, especially the French, was caused by the debt question.

Dr. C. Kiep, Chargé d'Affaires of the German Embassy at Washington, volunteered to give any information desired during the institute

Spencer Discusses Dictators.

Professor Henry R. Spencer of Ohio State University, leader of the General conference on "Dictatorship vs. Democracy in Europe," discussed Mussolini in Italy, Primo de Rivera in Spain, Lenin and Stalin in Russia and other dictatorships which have sprung up since the war.

"It is to dictatorship's credit," Professor Spencer added, "that in some instances its energetic unity has facilitated the attainment of business recovery. Here, of course, is the explanation of the adoration Mussolini receives from the American business man, to whom, at whatever cost to political liberty, business is business and is sacrosanct."

Charges by Professor Spencer that the present régime in Hungary is an oligarchic dictatorship which was exaggeratedly nationalistic, anti-Semitic, and practiced a taxation system that favored the rich and condemned the peasants to hopeless misery elicited voluble protests from John Pelenyi, counselor and Chargé d'Affaires of the Hungarian Legation at Washington.

Sees Franco-German Entente.

Delivering the first of his series of lectures on "Diplomatic Europe Since the Treaty of Versailles," Count Sforza, who was formerly Italian Ambassador to France, expressed the hope that an entente was gradually growing up between France and Germany as a result of the Treaty of Locarno. He said that M. Poincaré's present ministry, though intensely nationalistic, was carrying on the policy of conciliation and predicted that the new German Cabinet, in power since January, though composed of many Nationalists, would do likewise.

He quoted a German junker as having told him that it was a mistake for the German Nationalists to elect von Hindenburg President, for "with that great wooden statue we have sealed the grave from which the Hohenzollern will never rise again."

"The danger in both nations, he went on, was from fanatics or factions which "might imperil a growing entente with acts of violence." For this reason, he said, the interests of European peace and a Franco-German entente could best be served by "going slowly."

"No sensational changes are desirable," he continued. "No problem is solved by one single concession at any rate, there should be no hastening or trying to make believe that such concessions could miraculously wipe out from the book of history whole pages of grudges, of fears, of misunderstandings.

"The real feud between France and Germany has its deepest cause in their tremendous mental divergence. But Goethe, who saw it, also believed in a possibility of the gulf being spanned over. What the greatest of modern Germans hoped, we may hope."

Bottomley Free After Five Years in Prison; Villagers Welcome Home Former Editor

LONDON, July 30.—The gate of Maidstone Prison swung wide today for Horatio Bottomley, founder and former editor of the London weekly, John Bull, former Member of Parliament and violent critic of the United States, who has just completed five years of his seven years' sentence for the theft of the funds of a Victory Loan bond club.

To avoid a demonstration planned by many friends of the 67-year-old prisoner on his release, the prison authorities let him out some weeks earlier than anticipated. He appeared in excellent health and eager to try to come back. According to his friends, his plans have been laid on the scale of his old magnificence.

When Mr. Bottomley arrived at his home at Dicker, near Eastbourne, by motor this morning, he was greeted affectionately by his wife and their servants. An ex-laborer on his farm who was near by when he alighted from the automobile, spread the news of the return of Mr. Bottomley, who was the Squire of the village. The villagers immediately suspended work, hung flags from their houses and stood in groups about the Bottomley mansion. As the news spread, neighborhood "rubbernecks" wagons full of the curious began to converge on the ex-prisoner's home.

Mr. Bottomley, however, received only a few callers. To one he said:

"It has been a terrible experience, but I am so certain of my rehabilitation that I would not have missed it. It has taught me much of life. I never felt fitter."

The ex-editor has written a book entitled, "My Life as Convict Thirteen." It is understood that he intends taking up the publishing business again. He has received hundreds of invitations to lecture on his prison experiences as well as many offers to go on the stage.

PRINCES ON SHIP REACH QUEBEC

CITY IS GAY WITH FLAGS

Visitors From All Parts of the Dominion and America Have Flocked There.

ON BOARD STEAMSHIP EMPRESS OF AUSTRALIA, Saturday, July 30 (AP).—The Empress of Australia, bearing the Prince of Wales, Prince George and Premier Stanley Baldwin, anchored soon after midnight off the King's Wharf, Quebec, where she will await the arrival of the official welcoming party aboard a tender at 10 o'clock.

The final day of the voyage of the Princes and Premier Baldwin was passed in ideal weather.

In the late afternoon the Prince of Wales paid a visit to the third-class quarters as well as the tourist third-class, which contained many students and instructors from the colleges of Canada and the United States.

In the evening the Prince and Premier Baldwin enjoyed hearing the Ohio Wesleyan Glee Club, which is just returning from a concert tour of Europe under the patronage of Ambassador Herrick.

The Prince also received the ship's company, the men being presented by Commander R. G. Lattax. He obviously enjoyed this and chatted informally with more than a dozen of the staff.

At the instance of Prince George, who is known as the "Sailor Prince," the party inspected the ship's engine room, and seemed greatly impressed with the new high-speed engines installed during the Empress of Australia's recent reconditioning on the Clyde.

In the morning several large icebergs were passed at the entrance to the Straits of Belle Isle, attracting the attention of early risers, among them Premier Baldwin.

Later Mr. Baldwin engaged in a lively game of deck tennis, while near by the two Princes tossed a medicine ball to each other. They afterward engaged in a rope-skipping contest.

Quebec Crowded With Visitors.

QUEBEC, July 30.—This ancient French Canadian city, one of the oldest on the continent, is filled tonight with visitors from all parts of the Dominion and many from the United States to receive the Princes and Premier Baldwin, and the town is gay with flags and banners bearing the ostrich plumed coat of arms of the heir to the British throne.

Early tomorrow morning the Canadian Prime Minister, W. L. Mackenzie King, and most of the members of the Dominion Cabinet are scheduled to arrive at the Chateau Frontenac to greet the two Princes and the British Premier.

Alongside the King's wharf, the dock reserved for the entry of royalty, the Lady Grey, a Government tug, lies tonight in readiness to bring the Princes and the Premier ashore tomorrow morning for the elaborate ceremonies planned for them here in the next two days.

PRINCETON TOWER RAZED.

Appearance of Gymnasium Group Changed—New Building Rises.

PRINCETON, N. J., July 29.—When Princeton students return in the Fall they will see the Princeton sky line altered. The tower which has been a dominant feature of the southwest corner of the gymnasium group was torn down this week and the symmetry of the group restored. This tower was necessitated by the power plant, which was located until last year next to the gymnasium group.

The construction of the new outdoor gymnasium, a new building in the group given by John D. Rockefeller Jr., is rapidly progressing and will provide much needed facilities for the physical education work of the university.

Among those attending were Lya de Putti, motion picture actress, and Acario Cotapos, Chilean Vice Consul.

Smoker Burned to Death in Bed.

James Perry, 44 years old, was fatally burned in a fire started as he lay smoking in bed at his home at 300 Montgomery Street, Jersey City, early yesterday morning. Three children, asleep in an adjoining room, narrowly escaped. They were rescued by Patrolmen Murtha and Durr, who saw the smoke coming from the apartment. Perry was alive when firemen carried him from the house, but died in Jersey City Hospital.

German Authorities Get Confession That They Killed Him After Losing a Fight.

OSNABRUCK, July 29.—Two of the youngest murderers on record were arrested today at the village of Ibbenburen. They are boys 10 and 11 years old.

Last night the body of a 12-year-old schoolboy named Gausmann was found in the canal with a crushed skull. The police investigation disclosed that the youth made an excursion into the forest with several companions. The latter were questioned and the two youngest finally made a full confession.

Both said they got into a fight with young Gausmann while berry picking and were worsted. Later they attacked their stronger adversary from behind with stones, beating out his brains, and then threw the lifeless body into the canal.

The deed created tremendous excitement, and the police had to arrest not only the youthful murderers but also their parents in order to protect them from a mob bent on lynching them.

WOMAN TELLS OF ATTACK.

Says 7 Men Took Her From Escort —Girl Assaulted, Two Held.

Two attacks upon women early yesterday morning were reported to the police, who investigated and arrested two men alleged to have participated in one of the attacks.

Mrs. Margaret Hurst, 28 years old, who gave her address as 314 East Forty-first Street, said that she, her husband Peter, and James Gallagher, a friend, were set upon by seven men in Forty-second Street, near First Avenue. Hurst and Gallagher were knocked unconscious, she said, and she was dragged into a vacant lot and attacked. The address they gave is that of a house now being razed.

Miss Rose Sirlock, 19 years old, of 165 East Fifty-eighth Street, went with Anthony Gero, 29 years old, to his apartment at 302 East 100th Street to meet Angelo Cosacco, 19 years old, of 130 East 115th Street, and get a watch she had lent him. In the apartment Gero, Cosacco and a third man attacked her, she told the police. Gero and Cosacco were later arrested by detectives of the East 104th Street Station and held by Magistrate McQuade for hearing Monday.

TELLS OF KANSU QUAKE.

British Missionary Puts Number Killed in Liangchow at 26.

LONDON, July 29 (AP).—A report reaching the China Inland Mission says twenty-six persons were killed and many injured at Liangchow, China, in the great earthquake which devastated the Kansu Province May 23. Earlier advices reaching London had estimated that at least 10,000 perished in Liangchow and that the casualty list in the catastrophe totaled 100,000.

The mission's report was received from the Rev. W. M. Belcher of the United Methodist Church at Liangchow. He said the first shock was felt at 4 o'clock in the morning on May 23.

The quake was so violent that three pagodas dating back 1,000 years were destroyed in Liangchow, Mr. Belcher's house collapsed, but he and his wife escaped uninjured and are remaining there, continuing their missionary work.

No Shake-Up of Dry Agents Here.

Prohibition Administrator Maurice Campbell announced yesterday that there would be no shake-up in the personnel at prohibition headquarters, 1 Park Avenue, next Monday. For more than a week clerks and agents have been agitated by reports that wholesale changes would be made here as soon as Seymour Lowman succeeded Brig. Gen. Andrews as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in charge of prohibition enforcement. Major Campbell said, "Every man who does his duty need have no fear."

LOWMAN TO KEEP UP DRY PRESSURE HERE

Still Maintains Federal Agents Alone Cannot Close All the Speakeasies.

BUT HE SEES SOME GAIN

Agrees With Dr. Doran That the Bootleg Supply of Alcohol Has Been Reduced.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Declaring that the Federal authorities will keep striving for full dry law enforcement, Seymour Lowman, former Lieutenant Governor of New York, who will become head of the Federal prohibition forces on Monday, issued the following statement today after a series of conferences at the Treasury Department:

"In the States where there are no State enforcement laws and the local courts have no jurisdiction over liquor matters, it is extremely difficult to deal with minor violations of the Volstead act. New York State is in point. We are making very fair progress with enforcement except in the case of these minor violations, which should be handled in a police court. No conclusion should be drawn from the above that the Federal authorities will in any way relax their effort for full and complete enforcement."

The foregoing was in amplification of the statement made yesterday by Mr. Lowman in which he said that complete enforcement could not be brought about in New York without a State dry law, an assertion which aroused no little comment in the prohibition unit at the Treasury Department.

The position taken by Mr. Lowman, it was said, was being widely interpreted as a confession that efforts at enforcement in some section of the country were proving futile and officials were obviously anxious to counteract this supposition.

During a conference with the newspaper correspondents today Mr. Lowman did not retreat from the position he had taken, but made the added point that in his opinion there was a general tightening up on the liquor supply finding its way into bootleg channels in the New York district. He reiterated that the lack of a State enforcement law there was hampering enforcement and added that it was obviously difficult for about 300 Federal agents available for the State to keep that territory dry.

Cannot Close Speak-easies.

Mr. Lowman declared that it was impossible to close all of the speakeasies in New York, because the Federal Bureau did not have enough Federal agents and there were not sufficient courts in the metropolitan area to handle the cases. But work was being done by the Federal Government in some directions and he pointed out that since June 20, thirty-seven wildcat breweries and distilleries in the Buffalo district, which turned out 4,700,000 gallons of alcohol and 226 barrels of beer a day, had been closed. Diversion of industrial alcohol also had been cut down.

It would be impossible to assign more Federal agents to New York and the Federal Government could not attempt to police a city where 30,000 police officers were engaged in enforcing all laws except those dealing with prohibition, Mr. Lowman added. A somewhat similar situation was to be found in Maryland, where there was no State law giving authority to State courts in liquor cases. This resulted in enforcement work being impeded. The number of agents could not be increased, as concentration of agents in a few wet States would only reduce the effectiveness of enforcement in other sections.

Mr. Lowman ended by declaring that there was no good whisky available in New York. He was asked to estimate the number of bootleggers there, but said that no census had been made.

Claims Less Diversion.

Prohibition Commissioner James M. Doran, who was present during the interview, contended that the New York enforcement agents were making great progress in cutting off the bootleg supply of commercial alcohol, but he would not be drawn into a discussion of the impracticability of obtaining complete enforcement in New York. He estimated that the amount of alcohol diverted into bootleg channels in the country had been reduced by about 10,000,000 gallons a year.

The entire supply of industrial alcohol used still amounted to about 100,000,000 gallons, Dr. Doran said.

Official Attacks Governor Smith.

The effort is being made in some quarters to use Mr. Lowman's statements as an attack upon Governor Smith of New York. Bartice M. Parmenter, Assistant Attorney General, at a luncheon of the Washington Round Table in the University Club said he wished it were possible to "get Al Smith and others together on the same platform and let them wallow in the filth they have encouraged."

"If New York, the land of bathtubs, wine and unclad women," said Mr. Parmenter, "wants to broadcast to the world that it is a safe place for criminals, let her do so, but a lesson will be learned and the penalty paid."

He referred to the failure of the New York Legislature to pass laws to uphold the prohibition amendment and added that if "New York wants to secede from the Union let her go right now."

The Prohibition Bureau has abolished all of the mobile "flying squads" and established a "dry secret service." W. B. Robinson, an intelligence agent for the Internal Revenue Bureau, has been selected as head of the new organization.

Capital Police Protest Wet Charge.

WASHINGTON, July 29 (AP).—Indignant over charges attributed to Senator Edwards of New Jersey that Washington police officers were engaged in bootlegging, the Policemen's Association of the city has demanded that the Senator at once place evidence before the District of Columbia Commissioners supporting the accusation. The association at a meeting adopted a resolution declaring the charges "unfounded and to a high degree injurious to the public confidence the Washington police has enjoyed."

$500,000 Fire Razes Ohio Pottery.

ZANESVILLE, Ohio, July 29 (AP).—Fire, believed to have originated from an explosion in the main kiln shed, destroyed the Weller Pottery Company plant here last night. The loss was estimated at $500,000.

HARDSHIPS OF ARMY TOLD IN ARCHER SUIT

Soldier of Fortune Testifies at the Trial That He Preferred Dog to Princeton Associates.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 29 (AP).—A romance that blossomed on the Presidio at San Francisco twenty-two years ago reached its end here today with the start of the divorce trial of Sergeant Herman N. Archer, drill master at Princeton University, against Mrs. Anna Laura Archer of San Francisco.

Archer, the hero of Richard Harding Davis's novel "Captain Macklin," testified that his wife had refused to leave San Francisco to come to him at Princeton. He charges abandonment.

Mrs. Archer, in an answer and cross petition, charged that she had been willing to live in Princeton, but that each time she was ready to come Archer invited her for various reasons to delay the start. A letter alleged to have been written by Archer to her in which he told her he thought she would be unhappy in the university town was introduced.

Pressed for an explanation of the letter, Archer declared on the stand that he found more pleasure in the companionship of his dog, Old Colonel," than from any of his associates at Princeton.

Much of the testimony today dealt with the financial hardships of an enlisted man. Archer testified that the quarters he was able to provide for his wife were distasteful to her and that she finally went back to San Francisco after living with him in various army camps.

Archer was a Captain in the World War and has an army record of thirty-two years. Although stationed now at Princeton, he maintains his legal residence here.

When Mrs. Archer filed her answer to her husband's suit in March she took issue with his view of marriage as expressed in the novel "Captain Archer, U. S. A.," of which he was co-author. This passage she quoted as follows:

"All in all, the ideal soldier's wife is one who can carry on her own campaign in any circumstances. Above all, she's got to understand that her husband is her husband, even if he's out with other girls on the other side of the globe. And that she's his wife even if she goes out with other men when he's away. And letter writing doesn't play a part."

20 CENTS BUYS FIRE TRUCK.

Race-Winning Motor of 1911 Goes to Jersey Junkmen.

Special to The New York Times.

NYACK, N. Y., July 29.—Jackson Hose Company's first motor truck, which took part in the Briarcliff automobile race sixteen years ago, was sold yesterday for 20 cents. It was bought in 1911 by Nyack firemen for $800 because of its creditable showing in the race, and in 1914 the truck finished second in the race at New City in the first hose-laying contest of the Rockland County Volunteer Firemen's Association. A special body was built for it and the apparatus gave good service for many years.

Officials of the fire company bargained for an hour with two Hackensack (N. J.) junkmen, but not another nickel could they obtain. The 20 cents was turned over to the Treasurer of the company.

PARIS, July 29.—Of twenty swimmers training at Cape Gris Nez or awaiting a favorable opportunity to try to swim the English Channel seven are women—or rather girls.

The youngest is 17—Hilda Harding, a Brighton photographer's assistant. There are also the London swimming instructress, Ivy Hawks; Millie Hudson of London, Miss Gleits of London, Miss Jeans of Nottingham, Miss James of Liverpool and "the mystery woman doctor" of London.

According to the veteran trainer Jabez Wolffe, all odds are against a successful crossing this year. The water is eight or ten degrees colder than when Gertrude Ederle crossed, which makes it a terrible ordeal. The trainer says the person who has the best chance of success is the Egyptian giant, Helmi.

RITCHIE DECLINES WHEELER DEBATE

Rejecting Michigan Forum Bid, He Scores Dry Leader's Cause as 'Menace to the Country.'

CALLS HIM 'PAID PLEADER'

Maryland Governor Says That He "Proclaims, Dictates, Abuses, Threatens and Collects."

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, July 29.—Characterizing Wayne B. Wheeler as a "paid propagandist and special pleader" and declaring that "Wheelerism" was "becoming a menace to this country," Governor Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland has refused to meet the general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League in a debate upon prohibition.

The Governor's views were recorded in a letter written to Dean R. D. Hollister of the University of Michigan declining the invitation of the University Open Forum for the debate. The Governor made the letter public here today on his way home from the Governors' conference at Mackinac Island.

In this letter Governor Ritchie made it clear that he was not averse to discussing prohibition, or the broader question of governmental power in relation to individual rights, with "drys" whom he considered sincere and qualified. But he could see no reason for debating with Mr. Wheeler "unless it be to give publicity to him," and added that he was one who "proclaims, dictates, abuses, threatens and collects."

Says Wheeler Would Not Be Fair.

Governor Ritchie's letter was as follows:

"I congratulate your great institution upon its purpose to provide a neutral forum for a discussion of this perplexing national problem and I feel sincerely complimented that you should think me worthy to participate.

"There are several reasons which in any event might prevent my accepting your invitation, but I feel that in candor I should give you the one that makes it impossible for me to do so.

"While personally I believe our prohibition friends are taking the wrong track and are not only injuring the cause of true temperance, but are also doing harm to the very character and substance of our Government, nevertheless I recognize there are many fair and sincere men and women, for whom I have the utmost respect, who differ with me and with whom it would be an honor to debate if I could arrange it.

"But, to be entirely frank, I cannot bring myself to feel that way about Mr. Wheeler. He is the paid protagonist of a cause, a professional propagandist, a special pleader pure and simple.

"That is his privilege, of course, but I cannot conceive of him for one moment as seriously considering the views of his opponent, however sincere, or as regarding any debate as an impersonal and disinterested effort to test out the truth.

Sees "Menace" in "Wheelerism."

"So far as I know he never debates. He proclaims, dictates, abuses, threatens and collects. And, to my way of thinking, 'Wheelerism' is coming to be a real menace in this country.

"I am very deeply interested in the subject of prohibition, not because it involves a controversy between 'Wets' and 'Drys,' but because it involves a problem of American Government and of civil liberty, and I would like to see some sane and sensible way out of the present wilderness evolved. But to Mr. Wheeler every one who is not with him is a 'tool of the liquor interests' or an 'enemy of society.'

"For a long time now we have been hearing about this or that person debating prohibition with Mr. Wheeler. I have, of course, no word of criticism for any one who wishes to do that, but personally, I can see no possible object in debating with him unless it be to give publicity to him or to his opponent.

"I earnestly hope you will not misconstrue this letter as indicating anything less than the highest respect on my part for the object the University of Michigan has in mind and my sincere appreciation of your purpose in extending me so cordially an invitation to take part in the proposed debate."

'GOLF BACHELOR' LOSES IN DIVORCE ACTION

Two members of the Wheatley Hills Golf Club came to the final parting of the ways yesterday when Charles S. Sinsheimer of 51 Chambers Street, referee, filed a report in the Supreme Court recommending that Mrs. Nephicle A. Brown of 1,065 Madison Avenue receive a divorce from Nova Adolphus Brown of East Williston, L. I.

Mrs. Brown did not ask for alimony as she and her husband have made an agreement whereby he will receive custody of their two children and provide for her support.

When Mrs. Brown filed suit a year ago, Mr. Brown denied her charges of cruelty and described himself as a "golf bachelor." He said that his wife was so busy going around the country playing in matches that she didn't have time even to sew a button on his shirt or to take care of their children.

Mr. Brown was arrested a year ago on the charge made by his wife that he had broken a golf club over her head and beat her so badly that several of her teeth were knocked out.

The recommendation for the divorce was granted on the testimony of witnesses, who said that Mr. Brown had registered at the Hotel Vanderbilt with another woman. Mrs. Brown led a raiding party at the hotel on May 17.

TRIP HERE PAID BY BRITAIN.

American Who Says He Was Mistaken for Thief on Liner Sent Back.

Stewart Donnelly of Chicago and Indianapolis, 24 years old, returned yesterday from Southhampton on the Cunarder Aquitania in the tourist third cabin at the expense of the British Government.

According to reports received from Scotland Yard, Donnelly went over in the first cabin of the Berengaria and was mistaken for another man, so he said, who took $4,500 from a woman passenger. The detectives in London located the money and Donnelly was arrested in connection with the case. There was not sufficient evidence to hold him and he was discharged with a recommendation that he be sent back to America.

Donnelly, a well-dressed and well-spoken man, said the whole thing had been a mistake which had distressed him greatly. The Scotland Yard authorities had not deported him, he said. They had advised him to return home and had given him a ticket. A detective accompanied him from London to Southampton and saw him safely on board the Aquitania.

Donnelly said he was leaving at once for Chicago.

LONDON, July 29.—A silver model of an American destroyer, named "Uss Pull Together," the gift of American naval officers to Admiral Sir Lewis Bayly, their British commander-in-chief in the Irish Sea in the World War, is recalled today by Commander Stopford Douglas, R. N., in a letter to The London Times, relating to the Geneva conference.

"This 'Uss Pull Together' commemorated in a wonderful way how the two navies cooperated in a common cause," he writes. "What an admirable centrepiece it would make at the conference table at Geneva."

Detectives Cleared of Oppression.

Detectives Neil Walters and Louis Decker, charged with oppression by Henrietta Kinkie of 53 East End Avenue, whom they arrested on July 9 on a charge of violation of the Volstead act, were discharged for lack of evidence by Magistrate McQuade in the Harlem Court yesterday. Mrs. Kinkie will be arraigned before a United States Commissioner on the Volstead act charge on Aug. 10.

FEDERAL INQUIRY INTO DU PONT DEALS

into the organization, business, conduct, practices and management of the said corporations; now, therefore be it

Resolved, That the Chief Economist of this commission be directed to cause an inquiry to be made into the relationships, direct or indirect, among the United States Steel cCrporation, the General Motors Corporation and the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Company, tending to bring them or any other important industrial corporations under a common ownership, control or management, with information as to the probable economic consequences of such community of interest, and to report the facts to this commission.

Du Pont Officials Won't Comment.

WILMINGTON, Del., July 29 (AP).—In the absence of Pierre S. du Pont, President, and other officials of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Company, the only statement obtainable tonight regarding the Federal Trade Commission's inquiry into the relationship between the du Pont, General Motors and United States Steel Corporations was issued by the publicity department. It read:

"Officials of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Company said today they knew nothing of the proposed investigation by the Federal Trade Commission of the company's holdings in General Motors and United States Steel. The officials further said, knowing nothing about it, they had nothing to say."

Wall Street Is Undisturbed.

Announcement that the Federal Trade Commission had ordered an inquiry into the relationship of the United States Steel Corporation, the General Motors Corporation and E. I. du Pont de Nemours Company excited comment in Wall Street, but had only a slight effect on the stock market. There was a brief selling movement at about 2 o'clock following the receipt of the report of the Trade Commission's action, but the market quickly rallied and many in the financial community dismissed the subject.

"Just another investigation," was the comment in many quarters.

There is little likelihood, according to the view in Wall Street, of the du Pont or General Motors interests obtaining control of the Steel Corporation. For one reason, the stock of the Steal Corporation is too widely held and too much of it is in the hands of investors unwilling to part with it.

The du Ponts, according to their own announcement, have acquired 114,000 shares, for which they paid an average of $122.50 a share, and it was reported yesterday that members of the du Pont family were accumulating more of the stock. There are more than 7,000,000 shares outstanding.

While there has been much talk of Pierre du Pont, who is Chairman of the board of General Motors, going on the board of the Steel Corporation, it is regarded as by no means certain that he or any other member of the General Motors family will do so. Reports that Mr. du Pont may succeed Elbert H. Gary as Chairman of the Steel Corporation are not credited in well-informed quarters.

It was pointed out yesterday that other large corporations, including the Allied Chemical and Dye Corporation are heavily interested in the Steel Corporation.

The attitude of the Steel Corporation management in connection with the proposed investigation is that it is not able to control the distribution of its stock. Any one may buy the stock in the market. That is what the du Pont company did.

Steel Stock Again Rises.

The outstanding common stock of the United States Steel Corporation, which advanced into new high ground in a boiling market on the New York Stock Exchange yesterday, had a market value last night about $78,000,000 greater than at the beginning of the week when the present sensational upturn was just getting under way. Holders of the stock were richer by that much as a result of one of the most spirited uprushes that Steel ever has known.

Yesterday's action of Steel common, while somewhat less spectacular than that of the day before, was more impressive by reason of the fact that the issue was able in a market admittedly in a technically weak position to lift itself more than 3 points above the quotation at which Thursday's violent rise had left it. The day's high was 137¾, but late selling erased part of the earlier gains, the final quotation of 135⅞ showing a net gain of 1⅝ points.

The early buying activity in Steel was ascribed to reports that the Mellon interests and others were actively accumulating the stock. It was also reported that a number of large companies, including the Allied Chemical and Dye Corporation, were increasing their holdings of Steel. Allied Chemical already is a large stockholder in the Steel Corporation. The du Pont interests, who announced this week that they had acquired 114,000 shares of Steel common, were also mentioned yesterday as purchasers of additional stock.

Wall Street gave scant attention to the announcement from Washington that the Federal Trade Commission was preparing to investigate the reported "community of interest" among the Steel Corporation, E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. and the General Motors Corporation. The du Pont announcement of its investment in United States Steel appeared to have prompted the commission to make the inquiry. The du Ponts are already large holders of General Motors stock.

A number of other issues bounded upward more violently than Steel common yesterday, du Pont, for instance, showing a net gain of 15¼ points. Allied Chemical closed with a gain of 6¼ points, Freeport Texas was up 3½, Greene Cananea Copper, 5¾; International Silver, 4; National Supply, 4; Union Pacific, 3½, and Delaware & Hudson, 3¾.

FIRST PACIFIC FLIERS GET WELCOME HERE

URGE MANHATTAN AIRPORT

Say Fields Now Are Too Far Away and Suggest Roofing Chelsea Docks —Return to Posts Today.

New York welcomed yesterday Lieutenant Lester J. Maitland and Lieutenant Albert F. Hagenberger, the two army air corps officers who flew from San Francisco to Honolulu. They were entertained at luncheon by the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce.

Both men said that their flight was easily accomplished because of the careful preparations for it, and that they could have flown 800 miles further, as they had that much gasoline in their tanks. Several speakers at the luncheon said that the importance of the flight had been overlooked in the East because of the thrilling flights of Lindbergh, Chamberlin and Byrd, but that the Hawaii flight was perhaps the most memorable of all, largely because of its military significance.

Return to Posts.

Today the aviators will go back to work, not altogether sorry that there will no longer be occasions for them to make speeches. Lieutenant Maitland is aide to F. Trubee Davison, Assistant Secretary of War in charge of aviation, and Hegenberger is chief of the army's Bureau of Instruments and Navigation at Dayton, Ohio. They were accompanied to New York yesterday by Brig. Gen. James Fechet, Chief of the Army Air Corps.

The Pacific fliers, like the Atlantic fliers, believe that transocean passenger service is coming quickly. They believe that passenger air service to Honolulu will be possible in five years, and possibly all the way across the Pacific. Both expressed the opinion that New York should build an airport, preferably on Manhattan Island, and Lieutenant Maitland suggested that a field might be made by roofing over the Chelsea docks. Nearly every city which they passed through on their way East is talking of aviation and building an airport, they said, and while they were glad to see such an interest in aviation, they suggested that nothing be done without a carefully worked-out plan.

Suggest Field Near City.

The difficulty in choosing an airport for New York, said Lieutenant Maitland, is that most of the sites suggested are too far from the city. The only fields now available, Roosevelt, Curtiss and Mitchel, are so far from the city that an aviator can fly from Washington to the field sooner than he can get from the field to New York.

Grover C. Loening, designer of the most successful amphibian planes, was toastmaster at the luncheon, and paid a tribute to army aviation by saying that the army never started any long flight which was not carried out with conspicuous success, due largely to the preparations and to the personnel. The Honolulu flight, he said, was perhaps the most important of all the flights, as it had revolutionized theories of coast defense and was a masterpiece of navigation.

General Fechet also called it the greatest flight of all, and said it was the only one of military importance, since it had proved that in time of military necessity a plane could be sent to Hawaii. He told of Maitland's coming to him six years ago and urging that he be allowed to make the flight, but permission was refused because it seemed too risky with the planes and motors then in use.

Noville Praises Flight.

Lieutenant George Noville, who was with Commander Byrd on his transatlantic flight, agreed with General Fechet that the Honolulu flight was a masterly piece of work.

"The other ocean flights had Europe as their objective," he said, "and I don't see how they could have missed it. These men, however, had as their objective a dot in the Pacific Ocean, and if they had missed it they could not have gone on to China, at least not right then."

Anthony Fokker, designer of the plane, also praised Maitland and Hegenberger and the engineers at McCook Field who made the extra installations in the plane. Charles Lawrence, designer of the Wright Whirlwind engines which were used on all the flights, also came in for his share of praise.

Lieutenant Maitland told briefly of the flight and of circling about after they sighted land so that they would have daylight in which to come down.

"The flight was no stunt," he said, "and there are many officers in the Army Air Service who could have made the flight. There is great enthusiasm for aviation now, and it seems to me that it is up to the industry to keep its feet on the ground and continue to make careful preparations in everything attempted."

Describes Their Difficulties.

The navigation problems on the flight were mentioned briefly by Lieutenant Hegenberger. The radio beacon did not work so well as it should have, but he did not think this was the fault of the beacon, but rather some defect in the radio installation on the plane. There was some difficulty in getting drift, he said, as during the first part of the flight the sun was low and its glare was so great that he could not see the smoke bombs he dropped. Also the wind was blowing a gale across the course. His dead reckoning worked well with the instruments he had, he said, and he knew at all times where the plane was.

"The Hawaiian flight is a perfect example of what can be accomplished by cooperation between the Aviation and the Government Air services," he said. "The equipment represented products developed through several years. With a fine plane and engines and instruments, the flight was not difficult."

Clifford B. Harmon, who presented to the aviators medals from the International League of Aviators and certificates of their election as Vice Presidents in the American branch, told of some of his early flights, particularly the first long over-water flight in 1906 from Missala to Greenwich, Conn.

"We made the flight at the astounding altitude of 1,000 feet," he said. "Think of it!"

Lieutenants Maitland and Hegenberger, accompanied by more than 100 members of the Ancient and Secret Order of Quiet Birdmen, witnessed last night's performance of "A Night in Spain" at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre. During intermission R. R. Blythe introduced the fliers, who were warmly received by the audience.

Among those present prominently connected with aviation were Clarence Chamberlin, A. H. G. Fokker, Glenn L. Martin, William MacCracken, Eric Nelson, Morris Tittetington, Casey Jones, J. D. Hill, Lloyd Bertaud, Edgar N. Gott, Harry Guggenheim, Alexander Seversky, E. P. Warner, Guy Vaughan, Richard F. Hoyt, Kenneth Lane and O. W. Kerwood.

WILLIAMS PLANS TEST OF SPEED PLANE TODAY

Attempt to Make a New Record May Be Made if Seaplane Works Well on Trial.

PORT WASHINGTON, L. I., July 29.—If weather permits Lieutenant Alford C. Williams will test his new racing seaplane here tomorrow. The last connection of the 1,250 horsepower engine was checked and rechecked. Guy wires, struts, pontoons, landing gear, elevators, rudder and ailerons were tested late at night.

The ship will be placed this morning aboard the marine railway from Caleb Bragg's hangar and rolled into the water. Then, if sea, wind and weather are "just right" Lieutenant Williams will climb into the cockpit and start out down Manhasset Bay to try the plane at different speeds on the water.

When he goes into the air with this plane he will be unleashing mechanical forces that have never been united in an airplane of like size. He does not know what his twelve hundred horsepower engine will do to his little plane when the throttle is opened.

The plane has upper wing spread of 29 feet and a lower wind spread of 24 feet.

The fuselage of the racer is 22 feet 10 inches in length and from water line to top the plane is 6 feet 6 inches high.

The fuselage is twenty-one inches wide at its widest part. The top of the open cockpit is seventeen inches across. It was literally fitted to Lieutenant Williams by the designers in the factory.

To avoid resistance the radiator for the twenty-four cylinder engine is built on the wings in hundreds of separate brass channels. The fifteen gallons of water used for cooling will circulate through two miles of these channels. The pump will carry the cooled water through the engine at the rate of 130 gallons a minute.

If the plane shows up well under its first test Lieutenant Williams may take it at once over the three kilometer course off Harry F. Guggenheim's estate at Sands Point in an attempt to break the seaplane record of 255.8 miles an hour. To break it according to the rules of the National Aeronautical Association Williams must go 263 miles an hour.

NEW BEDFORD FAVORS COL. GREEN'S AIRPORT

Civic Bodies Support Him in the Project—Summer Folk Raise Fund to Fight It.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 29.—New Bedford is strongly on the side of Colonel Edward H. R. Green in the controversy that has arisen over the opposition raised by the exclusive Summer colonists of Nonquitt and Salters Point to Colonel Green's project to establish the largest airport in New England on his Round Hills estate.

The Board of Commerce and Rotary and Kiwanas Clubs indicated through officers today that they would lend their moral support to Colonel Green. Mayor Charles S. Ashley and Alderman Henry S. Winslow were both outspoken in their criticism of the protesting Summer residents, and the Aldermen have asked that a special meeting of the City Council be called to act upon a resolution commending Colonel Green.

Meanwhile some of the Summer residents have raised a fund of $25,000 to prevent the sale to Colonel Green of the four-acre strip of marshland owned by Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Swift of Boston and Mishaum Point, which still continues the barrier by which the Summer people hope to prevent the layout of the landing field. Yesterday Mrs. Swift said she would not sell at any price, but today she is quoted as saying:

"What's the hurry? There is plenty of time to think this thing over. As a matter of fact, I haven't given it much thought since yesterday and would want to talk it over with my husband."

Mrs. A. A. Houghton, sister-in-law of Alison B. Houghton, Ambassador to Great Britain, today identified herself with the opposition:

"This is just another of Colonel Green's strange whims," she said. "He will soon tire of it just as he did of his radio."

When informed that the opposition was threatening to appeal to the courts for a restraining order to prevent his laying out the field, Colonel Green said:

"Let them go to it. Let them do anything they want."

FINDS BERTAUD'S SHIP FIT.

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, N. J., July 29.—The Fokker monoplane, built for a flight to Rome, received its factory test this afternoon with Lieutenant Bernt Balchen as its pilot.

After putting the plane through several manoeuvres Lieutenant Balchen brought her down and enthusiastically told General Manager Noordyn and Superintendent McLean Gardener "she worked beautifully."

Lieutenant Bertaud, who is to be the navigator on the trip to Rome, got into the cockpit with Balchen for the second test of an hour's duration.

Tomorrow afternoon Lieutenant Bertaud will fly the ship to Curtiss Field, where it will be named Stars and Stripes. The plane will be a return trip to Teterboro Sunday afternoon, and it is expected that the Italian Ambassador will be one of the passengers then.

BUFFALO TURNS OUT TO GREET LINDBERGH

ENDS FIRST WEEK'S TOUR

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 29 (AP).—Completing the first full week of his national air tour, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh was welcomed here today by the greatest throng which had turned out for any event in the city's history.

The immense crowd, lining five miles of city streets and packing a vast open space in Delaware Park, was characterized by the youthful transatlantic flier as a fitting climax to the first full week of his trip. The trip so far has been an unqualified success, he declared, from the standpoint of promoting aviation interest.

The first real rest which Colonel Lindbergh has enjoyed since he started from New York City on July 20 began tonight after a formal dinner at the Hotel Statler and will last until Monday morning, when he takes off for Erie, Pa., and Cleveland, Ohio. The week-end will be spent at an unnamed spot several miles from Buffalo.

Rain pelted the Spirit of St. Louis, Lindbergh's famous plane, as he made his way from Rochester to this city early this afternoon, but just as he was flying over the business section of Buffalo the sun broke through the clouds. Passing over Batavia and Lockport, he circled above Niagara Falls several times before heading for this city.

An unusual spectacle was presented to the Colonel as he mounted the platform in Delaware Park, after passing through a half-mile lane of troops. Several thousand school children dressed in red, white and blue, formed a huge flag at the foot of the platform.

Colonel Lindbergh was escorted about the city by Mayor Frank X. Schwab and members of the City Council, who had greeted him at the airport at 2:06 P. M. After the dinner tonight, at which the flier spoke on the general subject of aviation, he was turned over to Timothy Burns, General Manager of the Lackawanna plant of the Bethlehem Steel Company, whose guest he will be until Monday.

The flier left Syracuse at 8:50 A. M. today and spent one hour at Rochester on his way here, addressing a crowd of 75,000 which had gathered at the airport to greet him.

TUCSON, Ariz., July 29 (AP).—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh will have a chance to test his eyes through the sights of a big game rifle when he visits Arizona on his national air tour.

The State has approved a special permit which will allow the transatlantic flier to shoot one of the seventeen bull buffalo in Kaibab National Forest. He also will be entitled to kill two deer.

$31,186 TO FLIERS' MOTHERS

A check for $31,186.44, the amount raised by the American Committee of the Nungesser-Coli Fund, was turned over to Paul Claudel, the French Ambassador, yesterday by C. Stanley Mitchell, treasurer of the fund.

Ambassador Claudel will transmit it to the President of the French Republic with instructions that one-half of it be delivered to the mother of Captain Nungesser and the other half to the mother of Captain Coli.

The raising of this fund was begun shortly after the two French aviators were lost in their attempted flight from Paris to New York. A large fund has been raised by popular subscription in France also.

It Will Be Given to the First Pilot to Cross the Atlantic With Plane Built in Germany.

BERLIN, July 29.—A prize of 100,000 marks (about $24,000) was offered today for the first Germans to fly in a German plane from the Fatherland to New York. The offer was made through the Aero Club of Germany and the German Air Navigation Society.

Two additional prizes of 75,000 and 50,000 marks are also offered for endurance flights beating the Chamberlin-Acosta record.

The name of the donator of these prizes will remain a deep secret until they are awarded.

The Germany-New York flight need not be without a stop. It must, however, be completed within eighty-four hours after the start and must be made with a plane of two or more motors. The take-off may be made anywhere on German soil or within the three-mile limit. The machine must be of German make and the motors built in the Fatherland, though they may be of foreign design. Two German pilots must make the trip carrying 330 pounds of baggage. The offer holds good until Aug. 1, 1928.

Besides the conditions mentioned a whole set of registration rules must be observed such as furnishing photographs of the plane and its pilots, with the history of both, the route the fliers propose to take and countless details, which probably account for the long period granted to the fliers in which to bring down their planes "within fifty kilometers of City Hall, New York."

Similar conditions surround the endurance flight trials.

Under the present rules it will be impossible for Herr Loose to win the endurance prize, since he is flying a single motor Junkers monoplane.

This pilot has announced his intention to begin again tomorrow his flight which was interrupted last week by a damaged pipe line leading from the reserve tanks to the motors.

Herr Koennecke, the Lufthansa pilot who is preparing to fly to New York without a stop, also is ineligible, his plane being of the single-motor type too.

It is explained that the transatlantic flight in the Western direction is not meant to establish new records, but to prove the practicability of such a journey by plane. On account of the unfavorable winds and other conditions hampering a western flight the prize-giver insists on more than one motor and also favors intermediate landing and does not restrict the number of such landings.

Herr von Tschudi, President of the Aero Club, predicts that all the prizes will be awarded before the end of this year.

BERLIN, July 29 (AP).—Of the present contenders for transatlantic honors, only Lieutenant Ernst Udet apparently can compete, without change of plans, for the 100,000-mark prize (about $24,000) which has been offered for the first German pilot to fly the Atlantic. Single motor land planes are barred from competition. Rohrbach's machines are hydro-airplanes and have two motors each. Each can carry two experienced pilots, besides camera men with full equipment.

14 Reserve Fliers Ordered to Camp.

Fourteen army reserve fliers of the 449th Pursuit Squadron, the third group of Air Corps Reservists designated for duty by Major Gen. James H. McRae this Summer, will report for two weeks of training at Mitchel Field tomorrow. The fourteen, eight of whom are from the metropolitan area, will replace reserve officers of the 353d Observation Squadron who complete their training at Mitchel Field today. The newcomers will report to Colonel Benjamin Foulois, regular army commandant of Mitchel Field.

SEES GRAVE BLUNDER IN NOTT'S REJECTION

Lawyers Did Not See Olvany.

On the delegation were lawyers of such prominence as William Nelson Cromwell, Henry W. Taft, Terence J. McManus and Henry Willard Bean. Mr. Cromwell, who sailed for Europe recently, is President of the New York County Lawyers' Association. Mr. Bean is Chairman of the Bar Association Committee on Inferior Courts of Limited Jurisdiction. The delegation had met at the home of Mr. Taft and talked the situation over in preparation for their meeting with the Tammany leader.

First an appointment was made for Friday, July 8. Later, Mr. Olvany suggested that the delegation call upon him the following Tuesday. The bar delegates met that morning in the lobby of the Hotal Belmont, and proceeded in a body to the law office of Mr. Olvany in Madison Avenue. After keeping them waiting for a long time, some say for an hour, Mr. Olvany sent word that he could not receive the delegation. He had been fully informed regarding the mission upon which the delegation had come to see him. Some of the delegates left in an angry mood, feeling that they had been the subject of intentional slight.

In a quarter close to Judge Olvany it was said yesterday that a letter expressing regret subsequently had been sent on his behalf in which it was asserted that the appointment had been made under a misapprehension regarding the purpose of the conference. A member of the delegation said last night, however, that there could not possibly have been any misapprehension.

Reprisals By Republicans.

There is reason to believe that when the Executive Committee of the Republican County Committee meets on Monday night there will be threats of retaliation when the Republican State Convention takes up the question of endorsing Governor Smith's appointee for the Court of Appeals, Associate Judge John F. O'Brien, who by that time in all probability will have been nominated for his present place by the Democratic whose convention meets a day in advance of the Republican gathering. The New York County Republicans insist upon standing by action between his situation centring in Judge Nott and the proposal for Republican endorsement of Judge O'Brien.

The Bar Association and kindred bodies, it was learned, while in complete sympathy with the Republican contention that Judge Nott was entitled to a Tammany endorsement, were not apt to take the Republican end of the argument relating to Judge O'Brien's candidacy, even though under a strict interpretation of the non-partisan rule he has no direct claim on support from both parties on the score of the service he has rendered.

It was learned last night that when the Democrats last year, at the solicitation of Chairman Morris of the Republican State Committee, according to the Democratic version, agreed to place Henry T. Kellogg of Plattsburg on the Democratic State ticket as candidate for Associate Judge of the Court of Appeals, it was with a distinct understanding that if Governor Smith should be defeated and the Republican candidate for Governor (Ogden L. Mills had not at that time been nominated) elected, the latter should appoint a Democrat to fill the vacancy on the bench to which the Governor early in January appointed Judge O'Brien. Moreover, it was said, the compact contained the additional agreement that the appointment should be an Irish Catholic, there being no Catholic on the Court of Appeals bench at the time.

Governor Kept His Promise.

Friends of Governor Smith declare that the Governor has kept his end of the bargain and that the Republicans are under at least an ethical obligation to back Judge O'Brien for election to his present appointive position, regardless of what Tammany has done in the situation affecting Judge Nott.

The Democrats contend that if the Republicans expect to make an issue that will hold water out of Tammany's rejection of Judge Nott they must give their endorsement to four prospective Democratic candidates for the Supreme Court in districts outside of the city, three of the four men now serving on the Supreme Court bench under appointment from Governor Smith. The four are Humphrey J. Lynch of Westchester, Townsend Scudder of Nassau, Harlan W. Rippey, Democratic leader of Monroe County, and Irving J. Goldsmith of Saratoga. Mr. Rippey of Monroe is the only one of the quartet who has not seen service on the bench.

The Republicans have no intention of endorsing either, contending, with some show of justification, that neither has served for an elective term, as required under the unwritten non-partisan rule, or for more than a few months, and that each holds his appointment from Governor Smith by virtue of being of the Governor's own party.

The New York Young Republican Club itself public a set of resolutions it adopted in which the action of the Tammany Executive Committee, in turning down Judge Nott is "deprecated and condemned."

PLAN TWO FLIGHTS WITHIN 5 MINUTES

Germans Will Take Off in Pair of Monoplanes for America Almost Simultaneously.

TO USE JUNKER MACHINES

North German Lloyd Line Takes Leading Part in Financing One of the Planes.

DESSAU, Germany, July 29 (AP).—Two Junkers W-33 monoplanes, each equipped with an L-5 Junkers motor, will start for America within five minutes of each other in the near future, according to arrangements completed today between the Junkers Works and financial groups in Bremen and Dessau.

The plane financed by Bremen interests, among which the North German Lloyd Line is prominent, is to start first. It will be piloted by Cornelius Edzard, an aviation Lieutenant during the World War and now in charge of the Lufthansa's airdrome at Bremen. He will most likely be accompanied by Johann Risticz, aviator.

The second machine will be piloted by Friedrich Loose and Captain Herman Koehl of Berlin. The latter is a Lufthansa expert on night flying and is credited with having devised the Lufthansa's lighted airway from Berlin to Koenigsberg.

Herr Edzard was born in Eastern Prussia in 1898. He arrived in Dessau today after taking leave of his wife and two little daughters, Marie, aged 4, and Margor, 1½ years old. Frau Edzard will join him in Dessau several days hence and will remain until the hop-off.

"I am unconcerned about who gets to America first," said Herr Edzard to The Associated Press today. "All hail to Koennecke or any other person getting there first. I am more concerned about getting the machine over in such perfect condition and with all the instruments working so perfectly that we can continue the flight if necessary. To bring the W-33 to New York intact in every detail is my highest ambition."

The two Junkers airplanes, when they hop off for America, will start on a specially constructed 2,500-foot runway. Workers have been feverishly engaged day and night in building it. Whether radio equipment will be taken along is not certain as yet. There is also the remote possibility that one newspaper correspondent may accompany them.

"When Loose and Risticz last Friday ascended in the hope of beating the record made by Chamberlin they took off with the wind in the rear," one of the Junkers officials stated. "This shows that our machines are practically emancipated from considerations of wind direction."

When asked what names will be given to the two planes, the official replied:

BEACONS FOR DOLE FLIGHT.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—At the request of the Chairman of the Dole North America-Honolulu Flight Contest Committee, the experimental radio beacons at Crissy Field, Cal., and on the Island of Maui, Hawaii, will be maintained until after the Dole flight, entries for which will be closed on Aug. 10.

It is the intention of the War Department then to transfer the radio beacon now installed on Maui to Wheeler Field, Oahu, for permanent installation. Radio beacons will be made available to civilian fliers whose planes are so equipped as to justify expectations for effective results.

The War Department does not guarantee operation or assume any responsibility in connection with use of the beacons.

JOINS AIRPORT COMMISSION.

Gen. W. C. Heppenheimer Named by Moore to Represent New Jersey.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., July 29.—Governor Moore announced today the appointment of General William C. Heppenheimer to represent New Jersey on the commission to study the possibilities of establishing a commercial airport for the metropolitan area.

General Heppenheimer is President of the Trust Company of New Jersey. The commission on which he will serve is being organized at the suggestion of Secretary of Commerce Hoover and will include representatives of New York City. The Port of New York Authority and other bodies interested in the advancement of aviation. General Heppenheimer is a member of the Airport Committee of the State Chamber of Commerce and has devoted much time to a study of the needs for an airport such as is contemplated.

GOVERNOR RESPITES THREE.

Grants Stay to Nappi, Albrecht and Mason Pending Hearings.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, July 29.—Three convicted murderers now in Sing Sing received respites tonight from Governor Smith. They were Adam Nappi, convicted in Rensselaer County and sentenced to be electrocuted during the week of Aug. 1; Charles Albrecht, convicted in New York County and sentenced to die during the week of Aug. 8, and James Mason Jr., convicted in New York County and sentenced to die in the same week. Nappi's respite is until the week of Sept. 19 and the other two until the week of Sept. 26.

Governor Smith explained that he was granting these respites because engagements made before sentence was affirmed in these cases by the Court of Apeals, made it impossible for him to hold the usual public hearings before the dates of execution. The Governor said he would fix hearings on all three cases later.

Nappi was sentenced to die for the murder of Joe Lee of Hoosick Falls, N. Y., husband of a woman who was convicted with Nappi and sentenced to serve ten years at Auburn Prison. Albrecht was found guilty of killing Veronica Dempsey, 7 years old, by cutting her throat in her parents' home, where Albrecht was a roomer. Mason was convicted for shooting James Hiss, a negro, in front of a negro cabaret on Lenox Avenue.

VARE BALLOT ISSUE GOES TO HIGH COURT

Recourse to the Federal Circuit Appeals Bench Is Allowed in Reed Committee's Fight.

PHILADELPHIA, July 29 (AP).—The way was paved today to carry the fight for possession of ballots cast in the Senatorial election in Pennsylvania to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

The Federal District Court for Eastern Pennsylvania, which recently refused to decide whether the Reed Senate Special Investigating Committee still existed after the dramatic fight in the Senate to continue its life, today allowed an appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals and followed this up with an order restraining custodians of ballots in Delaware County from destroying them or the records of the last election.

The Reed committee wants the ballots of Delaware and other counties in its investigation of the election contest brought by William B. Wilson, Democrat, against William S. Vare, Republican, who holds the certificate of election as Senator. Mr. Wilson alleged fraud.

WASHINGTON, July 29 (AP).—Even if the Senate Campaign Funds Committee succeeds in obtaining an additional order from the Federal Court at Philadelphia prohibiting the destruction of any Pennsylvania ballots in the last Senatorial election, the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee probably could obtain actual possession of them.

The Court order was understood here as not barring the officials from delivering the ballots to the Elections Committee.

Only the approval of one more Senator is necessary before Senator Watson, Republican, of Indiana, ranking member of the Elections Committee, can direct the Senate Sergeant-at-Arms to proceed to Pennsylvania and make demand for the ballots.

FISH ASSAILS CLOSING OF WEST POINT ROAD

Representative Says He Will Put the Matter Before Congress if Gates Are Not Reopened.

HIGHLAND FALLS, N. Y., July 29.—Representative Hamilton Fish in an address here tonight condemned the action of the West Point Military Academy authorities in closing the highway through the academy grounds to the public and said he would take up the matter in Congress unless the restrictions are lifted.

"I have come back from my vacation in Canada in order to cooperate with you and other interested organizations to help have the gates at West Point opened to the public, and in this I believe we will have the united support of the people of New York State and the country at large," said Mr. Fish.

"West Point belongs to the people of the United States, and not to those residing there temporarily. They are not the masters but the servants of the people of the entire country. The military academy is not a private institution, but both the property and buildings belong to the American people.

"In my opinion, the closing of the gates had little or nothing to do with the training of the cadets, but was due to the inconvenience and discomfort to the officers and their families caused by the automobiles in transit and by the headlights after dark, but only up to 11 at night.

"For years I have been urging the advisability of encouraging visitors to pass through West Point and I know of nothing which would be so harmful to the prestige of the army as this usurpation of the long established rights of transit through the military academy. I intend to present the facts before the Congress immediately on its convening unless these restrictions have been removed in the meantime."

PLEADS FOR CLIENT'S LIFE.

Senator Simpson Visits Judge to Ask Review of Merra Case.

Senator Alexander Simpson, counsel for Salvatore Merra, who is awaiting execution in the death house at Trenton, visited United States Circuit Court Judge J. Warren Davis at his home at Lawrenceville, N. J., last night and pressed his plea for a review of the case by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. He was accompanied by former Essex County Prosecutor John O. Bigelow, who obtained Merra's conviction a year ago and who is now opposing Senator Simpson in his fight in the Federal courts to save Merra from the chair.

Senator Simpson's request was made after Federal Judge William N. Runyon of Newark had refused a writ of reasonable doubt yesterday. Judge Runyon had handed down an opinion Wednesday in which he sustained the verdict of the State courts.

Ten days ago Senator Simpson applied to Governor A. Harry Moore at the Summer White House at Sea Girt for a thirty-day reprieve, which has not as yet been granted. Merra is sentenced to die some time next week.

CHARGED WITH NOVEL THEFT

Special to The New York Times.

GARFIELD, N. J., July 29.—Five members of an alleged gang of automobile thieves were arrested today in front of the American Building and Loan Association, on Wessington Avenue, as one of their number was about to cash a check for $1,000 received from the sale of an automobile, alleged by the police to have been stolen.

According to Lieutenant John Fyott, members of the gang obtained a number of new automobiles from a freight car, ran the speedometers up to about 1,000 miles and then sold them at cut rates as used cars.

The prisoners were arraigned before Judge Matsovitsky and held for a hearing. They described themselves as Harold H. Weber of 2,701 Hudson Boulevard, Jersey City; Daniel Lorey, Demarest, Street, Westwood; Phillip Sattenstein, Jersey City, and Joseph and Pasquale Morrise of Jersey City. The Morrise brothers were released in the custody of their attorney and the others furnished bail in amounts varying from $1,500 to $10,000.

Stole Pair of Pants, Gets 10 Years.

Charles Brier, 25 years old, of 311 Eighth Street, Brooklyn, was sentenced yesterday to ten years in Sing Sing by Queens County Judge Frank F. Adel. Brier pleaded guilty to third degree robbery in the theft of a pair of trousers from the home of Henry Bulkin at 147-28 Ninetieth Avenue, Jamaica. According to police records, Brier had been convicted of robbery three times before and has served terms in Elmira and Sing Sing.

LAY M'PHERSON ROW TO OUTSIDE CONSPIRACY

Both Pastor and Her Mother Trace Temple Quarrel to the Kidnapping Case.

LOS ANGELES, July 29 (AP).—Charges that "outside influences" were responsible for the troubles in Angelus Temple were added today to the recriminations which have been hurled in the controversy between Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist, and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, ousted business manager of the temple.

Mrs. Kennedy charged that there existed a "diabolical conspiracy" to oust both her and her daughter from the temple. She traced the alleged conspiracy back to the trial of her and her daughter last year on charges of attempting to frame a story to explain Mrs. McPherson's disappearance and reported kidnapping.

The mother pointed to a statement by the evangelist that "outside influences" had been working against her since her alleged kidnapping.

"That is what I have said from the start," declared Mrs. Kennedy. "I have known it for months."

Mrs. McPherson denied today that she intended to resign from Angelus Temple. She gave out a statement to the newspapers last night that she would leave. Her mother declared the resignation announcement was "a play for sympathy."

Marshall Craig of Des Moines, Iowa, arrived here today as an applicant for the position of business manager of the temple, according to Mrs. McPherson's secretary.

Meanwhile, attorneys representing Mrs. Kennedy on one side and her daughter and the church committee on the other conferred to settle the business tangle of the church.

"We hope to reach a friendly settlement," theyannounced, "but if we can not, the matter must go to the court."

ARMED WOMAN ROBS STOREKEEPER OF $100

Victim Faints in Pursuit and Is Unable to Tell of Loss Till Recovery in Hospital.

A well-dressed young woman armed with a revolver held up Jacob Siegel in his dairy store at 254 East Fourth Street early yesterday afternoon and escaped after taking $100 from the dairyman's pockets.

It was later learned that she had previously visited a butcher's shop in the same neighborhood, but the sight of a number of cleavers and knives on the cutting block evidently dissuaded her from attempting a hold-up in that establishment.

Siegel said that she came to the store and after examining some eggs walked over to him, drew a pistol from beneath her dress and warned him to keep quiet. Siegel said he obeyed the command while the young woman reached into his trousers pocket and took $100. Then warning him again to be silent, she walked slowly from the store and was lost to sight on East Fourth Street.

After she left the store Siegel ran out but fainted as he reached the sidewalk. Patrolman Marvin Murphy of the Fifth Street Station summoned an ambulance and the dairyman was taken to Bellevue Hospital. It was not until he had been revived by Dr. Youngman at the hospital that he was able to tell the police of the robbery.

Max Katz, who conducts a meat shop a few doors from Siegel's place, told Detectives Adamcek and Cowley that a woman answering the description of Siegel's assailant came to his store a short time before the hold-up and asked him in Yiddish if he knew anyone in the neighborhood by the name of Kaplan.

Katz said that she looked askance at his knives and cleavers and then walked away.

F. J. Cunningham Detained—No Explanation Made.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 29 (AP).—Frank J. Cunningham, senior examiner in the Transfer Tax Bureau of the State Department of Taxation and Finance, was being held in the custody of the District Attorney's office today pending an investigation.

A State trooper accompanied Mr. Cunningham to the Second Police Precinct Station yesterday at the request of David A. Wagner, Assistant District Attorney. No charges were made against Mr. Cunningham, and it was said that he had not been arrested, but no information was made public as to the reason for his detention.

Churches, residences and flagpoles were struck by lightning during the storm; trolley cars were disabled; telephone wires and branches of trees were blown down and in several parts of the city water ran several feet deep in the streets.

Several trolley cars were struck by lightning, causing panic among the passengers.

Earlier in the day temperatures running above 90, combined with the humidity, caused a number of cases of prostration.

KANSAS CITY, July 29 (AP).—Cooler weather came into Kansas and Missouri last night with refreshing showers, and brought predictions for another week-end of resort weather. Temperatures that have been running above 90 for several days were forced down into the 70's and 80's today.

All of Kansas, except the northwestern part, received rainfall, an inch to three inches in many sections. The moisture brought forth a prediction of an excellent corn crop from J. C. Mohler, Secretary of the Kansas Board of Agriculture.

NEW MILFORD, Conn., July 29 (AP).—Hail and wind, which accompanied a severe electrical storm in this section today, did considerable damage to tobacco crops. The northbound New York-Pittsfield express was forced to stop below here while the crew removed from the track a large tree blown down by the wind.

IS HONORED AT RECEPTION

Armour, American Champion, Shakes Hands With Him, but Jones Has Little to Say.

REST UNTIL AMATEUR PLAY

Says He Won't Enter Any Tourneys Before It—May Leave for Atlanta Today.

By BRYAN FIELD.

Robert Tyre Jones of Atlanta and St. Andrews may be a little tin god to several million divot diggers the world over, but he's just a street car conductor to Mae Murray. Bobby and Mae arrived yesterday on the Aquitania. Bobby, after winning his second British open championship in a row, and Mae after taking her fourth husband in a row. The fourth husband was what caused the remark about the street car conductor.

This is how it happened. The golf champion and the actress had not seen each other all the way over. But both weer at the mercy of ship news reporters and photographers on the boat deck of the Cunarder as she steamed up from Quarantine. Jones was being photographed and Mae interviewed. An agent provocateur among the ship news reporters said: "Miss Murray, there is a rumor that more than the Atlantic Ocean separates you and your husband." The Georgian Prince, David Divani, the fourth husband, be it known, had been left behind at Cherbourg.

Miss Murray choked, stamped, glared and exclaimed: "There is no truth in the scandal you imply. I love my husband. I'd love him if he were not a Prince. I'd love him if he were a street car conductor, even if he were Mr. Jones." The reporters gasped and, as pencils rattled to the deck, gazed, goggle-eyed at Bobby.

Beg Jones to Smile.

Mr. Jones of Atlanta and St. Andrews, all unknowing, went on with being photographed. Miss Murray flung indignantly down to her stateroom. But there is a sequel. After heeding several hundred cries from the photographers like: "This way, Mr. Jones; this way, please," &c., Bobby was importuned tearfully by one photographer to smile for him.

Bobby, in a rather bored voice, said: "There isn't much to smile about, is there?" The photographer said there was and told Bobby the story of the street car conductor, the Prince and Mr. Jones. Jones flashed back: "O. K., you win," and grinned from ear to ear.

After the ordeal on the boat deck Jones had to submit to another quiz from a contingent of sporting writers who stormed his stateroom. The man who has hung most of the golf crowns of the world over one or the other of his ears at various times and at various angles, refused to be taken by storm, however.

He stretched out languidly on his bunk in shirt and trousers and said: "Hello, how's the subway strike?" Bobby admitted that he was going to stay in New York only a day or two before going to Atlanta, but wanted to know whether or not the subway was going. He appeared more interested in what Mayor Walker accomplished than in what he had himself accomplished in turning in a 285 at St. Andrews, the greatest score ever made for 72 holes in any national tournament on land or sea, in Winter or in Summer, in Scotland or out of it.

And the Band Played.

If the newest Georgia peach wanted surcease from adulation he was doomed to disappointment. By this time the Aquitania was at her berth in the North River, a contingent of Atlantans, who stalled off the Mayor's silk-hatted welcoming committee on the ground that they wanted a quiet homecoming, started up a brass band as the gangplank hit the dock with "Hail, the Conquering Hero." Bobby hit the deck about as fast as any marine ever did.

He rushed into the arms of his mother and his wife and two score Dixie welcomers. A little further back was Major John S. Cohen of Atlanta and Clifford Walker, ex-Governor of Georgia. In the next wave were Commissioner Joseph Johnson, representing the City of New York, and Watts Gunn and Thomas B. Paine and any number of admirers and well wishers.

The entire group were gathered into the private office of Sir Ashley Sparks, lord high commissioner of the Cunard Line, to keep out the ordinary passengers who were pressing forward to shake, wave or call good-bye to the 25-year-old youngster.

Armour Greets Him.

The next stage in the welcome home was at the Vanderbilt. Here Tommy Armour, who won the American open championship from Bobby at Oakmont just before Bobby went to Scotland, headed the hand-shaking, back-slapping group. A buffet supper was served and after eating and drinking and swapping reminiscences the group broke up for the night. The party expects to go South by a special train today or tomorrow.

In discussing his golf and his glory and his future, in the stateroom, Bobby said he was going to do no playing till the amateur championship at Minneapolis, Aug. 22. Bobby was dubbed "Longfellow" on board because of the length of a ten-second speech he made. He had to be pumped to tell how he won at St. Andrews.

Finally Hurt and Kirkwood said that it was his putting and Bobby admitted that he guessed that was right. Questioned about "Calamity Jane," his famous putter, Jones said that what Jane didn't do in actual work she made up in inspiration. While talking of his iron clubs Jones revealed a very unusual local ordinance on the books of the town of St. Andrews. This provides a fine and jail term for any person driving off the first tee of the St. Andrews course with an iron club.

Bobby had previously said that the Scotch were not a dour folk, but after relating this incident had to admit that they did take their golf seriously. Apropos of laughter Bobby was reputed to have made laugh a Scottish terrier that had been presented to him by an English admirer. Those who believe this will believe that Jones can make the Statue of Liberty to do a highland fling. However, any number of golfers will tell you that turning in a 68 over the St. Andrews course is harder than either of these things, and Bobby did that.

The Rising Young Lawyer.

Questioned about his law practice, Bobby admitted that he looked forward to the time when the local newspaper would refer to him as "Barrister Jones, the rising young lawyer." After some thought, however, he grinned and said he guessed his law practice hadn't suffered much from his absence. Some one asked when he was going to get back to it and Bobby answered: "You mean when am I going to get to it?"

Father Jones explained this by saying that Bobby had been too busy hanging out new golf records to hang out his shingle. The new records that have been made by him in the last five years are still being counted up. Jones said that he did not think he would go back to Europe next year to defend his title, but said that he was just as much interested in the championships as he ever was.

Some one ventured that he must feel pretty much the lack of new golf worlds to conquer, but Jones said there was a new thrill in every match and new hope in every attempt at a new crown.

Among those who came from Atlanta and other places for the welcome home were John A. Brice, Herbert Ramsey, Secretary of the United States Golf Association; W. C. Fownes Jr., President of the association; Robert S. Woodruff, Henry S. Johnson Jr., L. W. Robert Jr., Harrison Jones, A. M. Robinson, R. K. Rambo, Charles Williamson, Scott Hudson, John K. Ottley, Charles T. Nunnally, Alex Meyer, Victor Allen, Harold Hirsch, Morgan Blake, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Heinz and others.

At the buffet supper and reception last night at the Vanderbilt Hotel, Mayor Walker dropped in for a few moments to congratulate the youthful champion. Among the golf stars who greeted Bobby were Jess Sweetser, Jerome Travers, Johnny Farrell, John Anderson and Watts Gunn.

Jones and the entire Atlanta delegation have been invited by Colonel Jacob Ruppert to be his guests at the Yankee Stadium this afternoon, but because of previous engagements, they probably will not be able to attend.

NEWS OF GOLF CLUBS IN METROPOLITAN AREA

Hydewood Golf Club, near Plainfield, will formally open its new course and clubhouse this week-end with a festive program. Although Hydewood has been in operation since 1897 it now is virtually a new country club as it has moved from within the city limits to about three miles out.

The golfing schedule includes a handicap tournament for members and guests all day today, and a women's approaching and putting contest at 6 o'clock in the evening. Tomorrow, members will divide into two sets of teams and play a thirty-six-hole match, medal score in the morning and match play in the afternoon. Sunday evening at 6 o'clock there will be a mixed doubles approaching and putting contest.

The activities of today will be followed by a dinner dance, and on Sunday after the matches the orchestra will render a special concert during dinner.

Spencer and Eddie Murphy, the brother professionals, who are now located at the Glen Oaks Club at Great Neck, are pointing to their course as a real test of golfing prowess. Although only 6,234 yards in length, its par of 72 still stands as master of all who have played the links, and that includes many of the district's leading amateurs and some of the country's foremost professionals. Leo Diegel managed to squeeze out an even 72 a couple of years ago and that is the nearest any one has yet come to beating par.

During the past month the Pelham Country Club has been in constant use by members for private parties. Some of the larger affairs there have included weddings, engagement parties, wedding anniversary celebrations and card parties. Country clubs are steadily growing in favor as places of private entertainment and celebration, and in most cases the clubs are desirous of such patronage as it helps to support a larger and more efficient house organization.

Yountakah at Nutley will put on a tournament Sunday for members in which only the scores at the nine odd holes will be taken. Last Sunday the nine even holes were used. Half the regular handicap will be allowed.

After next Friday when the women of the Westchester and Fairfield County Association will meet at the Wykagyl club in New Rochelle they will take a rest in tournament play for three weeks, resuming their weekly events again on Aug. 25 and 26 with a special two-day feature at the Greenwich Country Club.

Incidentally the women's schedule at Greenwich skips the month of August as far as their special tournaments are concerned, but in place of them there will be a regular weekly sweepstake event on Tuesdays.

Bobby Jones's Medal Shows Scots Know Only One Open

That there is only one open championship in all the world to a Scotsman was confirmed in an unusual way yesterday. There are open championships in America, in France and, of course, the British open, held this year at St. Andrews in Scotland. That the last is the only one in the world to a true Scot was shown by the medal Bobby Jones brought home. He left the cup at St. Andrews, but exhibited to friends a round disk of gold with the following inscription: "The Open Championship, 1927." Nothing more. On the other side was inscribed, "Winner," with a space for the winner's name and nothing else. Bobby is wondering how anybody would or could return the medal if he should lose it.

LOCAL STARS WIN IN SHAWNEE GOLF

NOW FAVORED TO WIN

Special to The New York Times.

SHAWNEE-ON-DELAWARE, Pa., July 29.—With three of the four survivors in the first sixteen from New York and New Jersey clubs this invitation golf tournament for the Buckwood trophy at the Shawnee Country Club continues to wear a metropolitan aspect.

On the upper side, Richard Clemson of the home club disposed of Harry Compton, the medalist from Elizabeth, this afternoon and as a result he will meet Chester Maxwell of Trenton in one of the semi-final rounds tomorrow. Bracketed in the lower half are Max Kaesche of Ridgewood who has figured in four Shawnee finals, and Maurice McCarthy Jr., the favorite from old Flatbush.

The bright spot in the day's play centred in the morning performance of McCarthy, who by exceptional putting assembled one of the best scores ever credited to an amateur on this course. He reached the turn in 36 and came back in 33 for a 69. He found it necessary to tap the ball only once with the putter on eleven of the eighteen greens.

This happened on six consecutive greens going out, beginning at the second, and was supplemented with a similar deadliness at the tenth, eleventh, thirteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth coming back. L. O'Neil, his opponent from Pocono Manor, ceased to figure in the match after the twelfth, having failed to win a single hole.

Sinks Thirty-footer.

McCarthy had chances for even a lower score, as twice his putter misfired, three putts being taken on the eighth and ninth greens. He saved himself by sinking a thirty-footer for his par three at the short sixteenth hole after overplaying his tee shot to the rough, but the only hole he really bungled was the seventeenth, where he had trouble all the way, beginning with a sliced drive to the long grass. It was there that the last of his series of first putts saved him from being charged with a 7.

His card:

Out	4	3	5	4	3	4	5	5	3—36
In	4	3	5	3	4	4	3	6	3—33—69

Although McCarthy played along in par figures in the afternoon his golf in the second round suffered by comparison. Even so it so overshadowed Skelly's game that the contest ended on the thirteenth green.

Maxwell In Top Form.

In surviving the two rounds, Maxwell displayed his best brand of golf and he is generally picked to reach the final where he ought to lock horns with McCarthy. However, Kaesche has been going well and he disposed of a tough man this morning in E. J. Capen, of Saucon Valley. To give an idea how keenly the battles are being waged it may be said that Dr. F. A. Steele, of Baltusrol, a former Shawnee winner had to play an extra hole to defeat I. B. McCullum of Ridgewood in their first round match of the second sixteen. A fine second shot close to the pin saved the match for the doctor at the nineteenth.

MARSTON ADVANCES AT SHENECOSSETT

WAS ONE DOWN AT 17TH

Upson and Bredin Other Local Stars Who Survive Two Rounds of Match Play.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW LONDON, Conn., July 29.—Max Marston of Philadelphia won his way to the semi-finals of the Shenecossett Country Club's eighth annual invitation tournament today. In doing so, however, he was forced to extend himself and display some of the most brilliant golf shown here in a long time.

He accomplished this by defeating John Sill Jr. of Wethersfield, 3 and 2, in the morning and by a brilliant victory over Kenneth B. Smith of Montclair in the afternoon, 1 up on the nineteenth.

In the morning round his medal score for the first nine holes was 35, one below par, while Sill had a 37. After the turn the former amateur champion played par golf on every hole save the tenth, where he required one over.

Hard Match With Smith.

Marston had a hard second round match with Ken Smith, who had him one down at the seventeenth, after a ding-dong battle from the eleventh hole, when Smith, who was two down at the tenth, started a rally, taking the eleventh, thirteenth and fourteenth to become one up.

Then Max won the fifteenth with a birdie 2 to square the match. The sixteenth was halved in 4s, when Marston sank a 25-foot putt.

Smith won the seventeenth, 4 to 5, and then Marston brilliantly took the eighteenth with a birdie 3 to square the match, and won at the nineteenth with another birdie 3. At both the eighteenth and nineteenth Smith had nerve-trying breaks when his ball rimmed the cup.

Upson Reaches Semi-Final.

Another man to come through to the semi-finals was Larry Upson of Englewood, who eliminated Sam Wilcox of Norwich, 5 and 4, and this afternoon defeated F. W. Knight of Atlantic City, 2 up. An idea of Upson's skillful play may be had from his medal score of 34 out, while coming in he had 33 to the seventeenth, leaving him 4 for a possible 71, or one below par.

Louis Bredin, Morris County, had two comparatively easy matches today, defeating W. H. Taft, Montclair, 3 and 2, and in the afternoon round taking the measure of B. W Ayers Jr., Springfield, 2 and 1.

WHITCOMB AND WRIGHT IN NEW ENGLAND FINAL

Come Through Third Round and Semi-Finals in Worcester Golf Play and Clash Today.

WORCESTER, Mass., July 29 (AP)—Wilton A. Whitcomb, Worcester Country Club, and Fred J. Wright Jr., Albermarle, will meet in the final thirty-six-hole match for the New England amateur championship at the Worcester Country Club tomorrow. Both came through today with victories in the third round and semi-finals.

In the third round Whitcomb won from David Whiteside, Reservation, 4 and 2, while Wright defeated W. F. McPhail, Norfolk, 1 up in a sensational twenty-hole match. In the semi-finals Whitcomb won from Herbert Jacques, the Country Club, 2 and 1, and Wright took the measure of A. M. Hoxie of Sandy Burr, 3 and 2.

Wright met his severest test in the morning. Until the second extra hole he could not shake off McPhail. It was only the latter's failure to get a fairly short approach putt close to the cup that paved the way for Wright's triumph.

In his second match Wright met Hoxie, who had triumphed over Rodman Russ of Braeburn in the third round. Both played steadily through the first 13 holes, but Wright won the next two, and, halving the sixteenth, became the winner, 3 and 2.

Whitcomb in his match with Whiteside was two down at the end of the sixth hole, but after that made a great recovery and did not lose an other hole. The end came when Whitcomb gained a birdie four at the long fifteenth. In the second match the Worcester golfer was more seriously extended, and it was not until he got down a sloping four-footer at the seventeenth green that his opponent, Jacques, bowed in defeat.

Third Round—W. A. Whitcomb, Worcester, defeated David Whiteside, reservation, 4 and 2; Herbert Jacques, the Country Club, Brookline, defeated Gerald Henderson, Weston, 6 and 5; A. M. Hoxie, Sandy Burr, defeated Rodman Rush, Braeburn, 4 and 3; Fred J. Wright Jr., Albermarle, defeated W. F. McPhail, Norfolk, 1 up, 20 holes.

SUNBEAM SEEN IN LEAD

By SEABURY LAWRENCE.

With a good sailing breeze from the west northwest sending them along on the first leg of the course, twenty yachts crossed the starting line here yesterday afternoon in the seventh annual Bayside-Block Island Auxiliary Handicap. It was the best fleet that ever started in the race, which is staged by the Bayside Yacht Club and most of the boats were of the husky, seaworthy type.

The course for the race takes the starters eastward on Long Island Sound to and around Block Island and return, a distance of about two hundred and fifty nautical miles. When they disappeared from sight the schooner Sunbeam had worked out quite a lead in the fresh breeze on the rest of the fleet but if there is any amount of windward work, the sloops in the race should fare better than the schooners. The race is on time allowance and is for yachts under 60 and over 29 feet over-all measurement.

The Race Committee, headed by D. C. Anderson, was on the power yacht Coronet and the starting signal was fired at 3 o'clock, Daylight Saving Time. The best starts were made by the sloop Seal, owned by C. K. Post and sailed by Sherman Hoyt and the yawl Sakana, J. H. Esser, which were almost on the line at the leeward end when the gun was fired. The rest, except Sunbeam, seemed a trifle gun-shy and crossed well bunched at the windward end quite well astern of the leading trio.

Sunbeam Gains Headway.

The Sunbeam was sailing faster than the rest and had pulled well clear of the fleet when she passed Stepping Stones light, two miles from the start. Her skipper may have decided to use a little gasoline in order to get clear of the others. According to the rules of the race each yacht is allowed to use a limited amount of gasoline on the long run and he may use his own discretion as to when it is best to turn on the power.

Sakana was the second boat to square away around Stepping Stones, with C. A. Marsland's sloop Azor close aboard, with Sarazen, another big sloop, next in line, and the little Seal dropped to fifth place and the schooner Kumalong, owned by J. W. Ripley, following with the remainder of the fleet closely bunched astern.

Besides those already mentioned, the starters included the schooners Tigress, George B. Drake; Northern Light, J. C. Smith Jr.; Camilla, O. Habeck; Valador, J. S. Dickerson; Shearwater, E. R. Downe, and Chantey, E. K. Service; the yawls Sagola, E. A. Hinman; Adelithe, P. E. Stevenson; Docani, P. Smith, and Toreador, P. S. Patton, and the sloops Caroline, W. J. Curtis; Valgerda, Mrs. W. H. Isom; Rambler, A. Girtanner, and Fore an' Aft, William Atkin.

If good sailing conditions prevail, the auxiliary fleet should finish early Sunday morning.

Craig Trophy Race Starts.

Yesterday morning three fast motor cruisers started from Execution Light, in Long Island Sound, on the New York Athletic Club's race for the James Craig Perpetual Trophy. The course for this event is eastward on Long Island Sound to Montauk Point, where the power boats turn westward in the Atlantic Ocean and head for the finish line off Manhattan Beach. The total distance is about 195 nautical miles.

The cruiser's to start were O. E. von Au's Idler, which was the scratch boat; H. M. Baker's Ranger and J. de F. Larner's Sea Dream, winner of the club's recent Block Island race. The committee, of which E. V. Tucker was Chairman, was on the power yacht Baby Claire and the trio were sent over the starting line at 10 o'clock, Daylight Saving Time. They are expected to finish some time this morning.

WELLS IS GOLF VICTOR.

Captures Ohio State Left-Handed Crown From 16 Other Southpaws.

LIMA, Ohio, July 29 (AP).—A. A. Wells of East Liverpool, brother of Joe Wells, former Ohio State amateur golf champion, is king of Ohio's portsided golfers. He captured the first State left-handed golf championship here today when he turned in a card of 82 for the final eighteen holes this afternoon, for a low score of 224 for the two days' play.

Elkins Brawner of Dayton was runner-up with a total of 227. He was tied with Wells at the end of Thursday's play, but dropped out of the picture on the final eighteen holes when he turned in a card of 85. In this morning's round he had taken the lead from Wells with a 79, but was unable to maintain the pace in the final round.

H. A. Elliott, Toledo southpaw, turned in a score of 75 during the afternoon play, the lowest score made in any round, to capture third position with a total of 231. He made the morning round in 84. C. E. Nixon, Columbus, was fourth with an 87 and a 77 today for a total of 235.

MORE RECORDS FALL IN SWIMMING MEET

MISS LAMBERT WINS 220

Equals World's Record of 3:11 and Sets New Mark of 1:30 1-5 for 110 Yards.

Special to The New York Times.

MASSAPEQUA, L. I., July 29.—Miss Martha Norelius and Miss Adelaide Lambert of the Women's Swimming Association each defended successfully one of her several titles and achieved record time in the third day of competition for the national A. A. U. outdoor aquatic championships over the 55-yard course of the Biltmore Shores Yacht Club here this afternoon.

Miss Norelius scored her third victory of the week in winning the 440-yard free-style event, as she captured the 100-meter and one-mile tests yesterday, and her time for the quarter-mile was 5:57 2-5, as against Miss Gertrude Ederle's listed universal long-course standard of 6:00 1-5.

Miss Lambert captured the 220-yard back-stroke classic in 3:11, equaling the world's record, considered by experts one of the greatest marks ever hung up by Miss Sybil Bauer. On the way to the full distance Miss Lambert reached 110 yards in 1:30 1-5, lowering the national mark of 1:32 2-5, held by Miss Eileen O'Mara.

Course Is Re-Surveyed.

It is worthy of note that the yacht club course has been re-surveyed and found to be a trifle beyond the claimed length, measuring 55 yards and 3 inches.

Both of today's national events required elimination heats, and they took place this morning, nine contenders reporting for the free-style and ten for the back-stroke fixture.

In the final of the quarter-mile championship Miss Norelius found against her Miss Ethel McGary of her own club, Miss Albina Osipowitch of the Boys' Club Auxiliary of Worcester, Miss Emma Shemaitis of the Illinois Women's A. C. of Chicago and the Misses

YANKS' BLOWS FAIL TO SUBDUE INDIANS

Their 14 Hits Are Useless as Hudlin Cuts Down Drives in Pinches and Wins by 6-4.

RUTH WASTES 3 SAFETIES

By RICHARDS VIDMER.

Count that day lost whose low, descending sun sees neither Ruth nor Gehrig hit a rollicking home run. Strange as it may seem, neither the Babe nor the Buster hit for all four yesterday at the Yankee Stadium. Still stranger, the Yankees lost. Taken all in all, it was an afternoon of surprises and disappointments.

Willis Hudlin didn't exactly stop the slugging tactics of the twin thrifters, but he dwarfed their efforts to singles and doubles, a moral victory, and he scattered the Yankees, fourteen blows to such an extent that he scored an official victory in the bargain, the Indians winning, 6 to 4.

The Yanks had five passes and a couple of errors to help them along the highway to success, and three times they filled the bases, but the punch in the pinch was somehow lacking and fourteen members of Miller Huggins's mighty ball-maulers were left stranded on the base paths through the innings.

George Pipgras, who was selected to keep the Indians off the warpath during their first day in the big city, allowed eight hits in the seven innings he served as master of ceremonies and was charged with the defeat. It was his first setback of the season, having been credited with five straight victories up to yesterday afternoon.

Shock Troops Called Out.

Ah, well, no one can win 'em all, and the Yanks didn't sink into the depths of despondency just because their lead in the American League race was slashed to a mere thirteen games. They still think they can stagger through ahead of the Senators, who crept up on them by winning yesterday.

It isn't often that Manager Huggins has to call in his shock troops and it's still less frequent that they fail to deliver, but pinch-hitters and runners were pressed into service through the last two innings and failed to turn the tide. Bob Shawkey relieved Pipgras after the first Indian tripled in the eighth and then gave way to a pinch-hitter, Miles Thomas worked the ninth for the New Yorkers.

As mentioned before, Mr. Hudlin didn't exactly stop King George Ruth and Prince Louis Gehrig, but merely dwarfed their efforts. As a matter of fact the Babe had what is technically known as a perfect day at bat, with two doubles, a single and two bases on balls in his five trips to the plate. That's a perfect day for normal ball players, but not for the Babe. There must be a homer or two mixed up in his assortment of socks to appease his hitting appetite.

Gehrig made only one single, but his opportunities were somewhat diminished through being hit by a pitched ball in the first inning and being purposely passed with men on second and third in the eighth.

A couple of errors didn't harm the Indians' cause in the second session and by taking advantage of the opportunities presented they jumped off to a three-run lead. Joe Sewell singled to start the festivities and Koenig fumbled Luke's grounder, making the bases two-thirds full of Sewell family. Eichrodt fouled out, relieving the situation to a certain extent, but Lutzke tripled and didn't pause at third when Lazzeri made a wild throw of a relay, all three runners crossing the plate.

Yanks Tie the Score.

Three singles, contributed by Gasella, Grabowski and Combs in the Yanks' half, cut the Indians' advantage by one run, and through various methods the New Yorkers pushed over two more tallies in the third to tie the count.

Ruth walked to start with, and after Gehrig forced him at second, Meusel singled, Lazzeri slapped one down the third-base line, which Lutzke messed up, and Gehrig crossed the plate. Then Meusel set the pace in a double steal with Lazzeri, and Gasella walked, filling the bases, with only one out. Meusel slipped over while Grabowski was being tossed out, but the rest of the aspiring base-runners made no progress worth mentioning, as Pipgras retired docilely.

Two more ambitious Yanks were stranded on the base paths in the fourth and the Indians became active again in the fifth, breaking the tie. Jamieson walked, went to third on Fonseca's double and scored on a sacrifice fly. Burns fouled to Gehrig for the second out, but Joe Sewell walked and Luke Sewell drove the patient Fonseca home with a single.

In the sixth the Yankees again filled the bases, but only one man was emptied into the home plate. Pipgras and Combs singled, but Koenig rolled to Fonseca and Pipgras was run down at the plate. Ruth was purposely passed, filling the bags, and Gehrig beat out a hit to Burns on which Combs scored, leaving the highways and byways still congested with traffic. Meusel hit into a double play.

A single by Combs, a double by Ruth and an intentional walk to Gehrig again put runners on each and every bag in the eighth, but there were two out by the time such a state of hopelessness was acquired, and Meusel forced Gehrig for the third. Altogether it was just one bursting bubble after another for the Yanks.

CHICAGO, July 29 (AP).—Chicago's feminine baseball fans turned out in force today and established a record for attendance for their sex at a baseball game in Chicago, if not in the country. The turnstiles registered 14,381 women, who took advantage of ladies' day to witness the final clash between the Giants and Cubs at Wrigley Field. Throughout the contest the women gave a noisy demonstration of cheering. Every avenue leading to the park was crowded with women and girls. The total attendance was estimated at more than 32,000.

HAINES STRONG ON MOUND

Allows Only Four Hits to Register His Fifteenth Victory of the Season.

ST. LOUIS, July 29 (AP).—The Cardinals made a clean sweep of the series with the Phillies, winning today's game, 6 to 3.

The Cardinals took the lead in the third inning by scoring four tallies on two singles, a walk and two doubles after two men were out.

In the eighth, Schulte tripled, scoring Southworth and Schulte for the other two counts.

RED SOX BEAT BROWNS.

Take First Game of Season From St. Louis, Winning, 8 to 2.

BOSTON, July 29 (AP).—Behind Ruffing's six-hit pitching effort, the Red Sox today won its first game of the season from the Browns. The score was 8 to 2. The Browns, before today, had won ten straight from the Red Sox.

Ruffing's hitting was as spectacular as his pitching. In the seventh the Sox bunched hits off Crowder for six runs. The feature of the big inning was a triple steal headed by Rothrock.

LOSERS TIE COUNT IN 8TH

By JAMES R. HARRISON.
Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 29.—The long-suffering Cubs turned on their tormenters today and beat the Giants in the tenth inning by the simple process of making two runs after the New Yorkers had scored only one in their half.

The score was 5 to 4 and thereby 32,000 Chicago taxpayers had their faith in humanity restored. The local customers were beginning to believe that a Cub victory over the Giants lay in the realm of the impossible.

Here was the hated enemy today battling up from behind, tying the score in the eighth and making another run in the tenth. But at this psychological moment the Cubs rared up and laid the Giants low with one fell blow.

Ott Gets to Second.

To start the inning Ott singled and was safe at second on Hornsby's bunt. Terry bunted safely to Hal Carlson, loading the sacks with none out. Charley Root relieved Hal and Jackson hit a long fly which scored Ott. The next two boys did not hit, which was too bad.

Virgil Barnes, who had replaced Henry, who had followed Larry Benton, was the victim of some queer antics in the tenth. With one out Adams walked and scooted to third on English's single. Reese dropped Harper's bounding throw, otherwise Sparky would have been a goner.

Then Scott rapped to Reese and Adams bolted for home. He tore into Jack Cummings like a thunderbolt and knocked the Giant catcher head over heels and made him drop the ball. What was even worse, Cummings's nose was broken in the collision and he will be out for some time.

After the clamor had died down Wilson singled off Jackson's glove, and with the bags full again, Stephenson singled between third and short and won the game. It still left the Giants with a two-to-one edge on the series as they departed for St. Louis tonight.

Hornsby Gets a Double.

English fumbled Ott's grounder with two down in the first and started a peck of trouble. Manager Pro Tem Hornsby slapped a two-bagger to the fence in left centre and Ott scrambled home, aided by slow fielding and a bad throw to the plate.

Terry drew transportation and Jackson started a fruitful day by singling to centre, scoring the manager pro tem. Harper ended the rally, as he did several others during the afternoon, by grounding to Beck.

The Cubs were not discouraged by the evil start and took the runs back one piece at a time. In the second Riggs Stephenson flayed a homer into the trick bleachers in right field, with the bases barren. Beck doubled in the third and advanced on Carlson's sacrifice, but was nabbed when Adams hit to Benton. Adams got to second during the excitement and scored on English's single.

Wilson opened the fourth with a triple to the left field wall. Lindstrom slipped on the low embankment there and fell flat on his back, injuring himself so much that he quit the game at the end of the inning.

Wilson Hurts His Leg.

Sliding into third, Wilson damaged his leg and had to go to the bench for repairs, after which he scored on Hartnett's single.

The Giants established connections with the tying run in the eighth. Mueller singled to centre and scampered around on Ott's triple, which dropped out of Webb's reach just inside the right field line. Hornsby was walked, and Terry rolled to Adams, who got Ott at the plate. Jackson's infield hit filled the bases, and the first three pitches to Harper were balls. Despite this promising beginning, George struck out.

Hornsby manoeuvred the Giants cleverly through a ninth-inning crisis. Stephenson led off with a double against Henry. Then Dutch fanned Grimm, who was so enraged over Quigley's decision that he talked himself out of the ball game.

After having whiffed Grimm, Henry was hopelessly discharged so that Barnes might pitch to right-handed batters. Zake passed Hartnett intentionally and Heathcote, batting for Beck, lined to Terry, whose throw doubled Stephenson at second.

SENATORS TRIUMPH BY RALLY IN 11TH

Bunch Three Hits and a Pass for Two Runs and Defeat the Tigers by 5 to 4.

LOSERS FIGHT TO THE END

Score Run in Tenth and Another in Final Frame, but Are Overcome —Zachary Shows Form.

WASHINGTON, July 29 (AP).—The Senators took the series opener from the Tigers today, 5 to 4, in eleven innings after thrice wresting the lead from Detroit. With the score tied at 2-2, the teams scored a run each in the tenth and Detroit repeated in the eleventh. The Senators in that frame, however, put over two markers after two were out with a walk to McNeely and singles by Tate, Harris and Speaker.

Zachary, pitching his second game for the Senators, held Detroit to six hits, but was taken out in the final inning when the first man up tripled.

The White Sox drove Jing Johnson out of the box in the fourth inning when they scored three runs on a double, two singles and a hit batsman.

Rickard Confident Bout Will Be Held in Chicago

CHICAGO BOUT SURE, RICKARD DECLARES

ONLY FEW DETAILS REMAIN

$40 Top Price Tentatively Set for 30,000 Seats—Scale Is to Start at $5.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 29.—Tex Rickard chose the luncheon table in the exclusive Chicago Club today for the scene of a brief and impromptu denial of the assertion of James A. Farley, Chairman of the New York Boxing Commission, that Rickard had promised to stage the Dempsey-Tunney fight in New York.

Rickard was the guest of honor at the luncheon. His host was James I. Bush, Vice President of the Equitable Trust Company, and a member of the Board of Directors of Madison Square Garden, New York. Rickard's companions at the luncheon were Presidents of Chicago banks, John Hertz, taxicab magnate, and a number of industrial leaders.

Bush introduced Rickard as the first speaker at the luncheon and Tex wasted no time answering newspaper reports of Farley's assertion that Rickard had promised to hold the heavyweight title bout in New York.

"Farley Is Mixed Up."

"Farley is all mixed up," Rickard began, "when he says I promised to hold this here title bout in New York. When I went before the commission to get permission to charge $27.50 for the highest priced seats at the Dempsey-Sharkey fight, Farley said:

"'Tex, if you get this $27.50 for the Sharkey-Dempsey fight, will you promise not to ask more than that for the championship battle?'

"Well, that was all right with me. I knew that if I tried to stage the title bout in New York I'd have a lot of trouble getting any more, anyhow. So I just said 'sure.'

"Now, what was there in that that promised the fight to New York? Those fellows down in New York are all mixed up. And I got it in writing to prove it.

"I'm having to stand a lot of gaff from the folks down East about my plan to put this battle on in Chicago. But I've given my word to George Getz and a number of other Chicagoans that if they can produce what they say they can I'll put Dempsey and Tunney in the ring in Chicago. And so far they've made good a hundred per cent. I intend to stand by my guns, no matter what New York does or says."

Beats Republican Convention.

Rickard followed his denial of the New York charges with a presentation of what he thinks the championship fight would bring to Chicago.

"These folks who come to this here fight will be spending lots of money and Chicago will get it. Why, I never in my life saw such interest in a fight as this here fight is drawing. Fellers are wiring me from everywhere asking for seats. Railroad Presidents are calling me up to find out the day. They say they'll be more special trains to Chicago for the fight than ever were sent to any other affair.

"And I just want to say one more word to you men. I want to put this here fight on in Chicago, and from the way things are shaping up it certainly looks like I'll be able to do it."

Following Rickard's talk, Getz, who has said he will handle the promotional end of the bout if it comes to Chicago, told the bankers there were no clouds on the horizon and that by Monday or Tuesday contracts for the fight should be signed.

Inspects the Stadium.

Rickard's bread-breaking with the bankers was the high point in his day. In the morning he went with Getz and a number of newspaper men to the stadium where he inspected the field and estimated that more than 130,000 seats could be placed.

John Righeimer, Chairman of the Boxing Commission, did not return today from a vacation trip to Michigan City. Rickard had planned to call on him today but was prevented by Righeimer's delay.

The attitude of the South Park Commissioners, who can either stop the fight or make it sure, is still uncertain. Friends of Getz and confidants of Rickard are certain the Park Board will be convinced by Monday, when a meeting is planned, that the people want the stadium leased for the battle. Others are not sure that two of the commissioners will vote for the plan.

But whatever happens, Rickard will continue to hold his daily conferences with the big men, and the statements that Chicago is going to see Tunney and Dempsey fight on Sept. 15 will continue to pour forth until Monday.

Price Scale Listed.

One result of the many conferences and inspections of the day was that a tentative agreement was reached on the admission prices. It has been decided to charge a top price of $40, with the cheapest seats at $5 each. If there are 130,000 seats, or even 140,000, it has been proposed that 30,000 be set aside to go at $40 each. It is understood that all parties have agreed to this and that the only change that could be brought about would be by recommendation of the Park Board.

Judging from his silence, Rickard is opposed to a two-day boxing carnival as has been suggested. There are some persons in Chicago who want Sharkey to be the main attraction of the first day's show in a bout against the winner of the Delaney-Paulino match. There would be other matches arranged for this day, but it is the belief of those close to the promoter and his Chicago aids that the plan is being frowned upon.

Says Bout Was Pledged Here.

If Promoter Tex Rickard takes the Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey bout away from New York, it will be regarded as an unfair and ungrateful act by the State Athletic Commission, Chairman James A. Farley declared yesterday at the weekly meeting of the Boxing Board. heavyweight championship here and also gave a strong intimation that the board would lift the $25 top price now fixed in this State if the battle were held at the Yankee Stadium.

Farley declared that Rickard had treated the commission unfairly by starting negotiations with Chicago without consulting the members of the commission first concerning a higher charge for tickets here.

He read from the minutes of the meeting on June 30, when the battle between Dempsey and Jack Sharkey at the stadium was approved, which he interpreted as recording a promise from Rickard that in exchange for the $25 top for the elimination battle here Rickard would hold the final here also. Rickard has previously said that he made no such promise.

Commissioner William Muldoon would not commit himself on the subject when asked for his views on the statements made by Farley. He did say he thought Rickard would be ungrateful to take the Tunney-Dempsey fight out of New York, but added that he was opposed to championship fights in ball parks, especially in the heavyweight division, because he regarded the seating arrangements that can be made unsatisfactory to the spectators as a whole, because too many are unable really to see anything of the fight.

STAY PETITION DROPPED.

Chicago Lawyer Writes Letter to Rickard—Ticket Orders Mount.

CHICAGO, July 29 (AP).—Withdrawal of a petition seeking to restrain Tex Rickard of New York from promoting the proposed Dempsey-Tunney fight here, was indicated in a letter tonight to Rickard by J. Kentner Elliott, attorney, who as a taxpayer filed the petition here last week.

Upon receipt of the letter Rickard said: "All opposition to holding the fight in Chicago is now apparently thrust aside, and, barring unforeseen developments, the fight will go to Chicago."

Elliott in his letter said, "In view of the public sentiment in favor of the fight," his action would not be pressed.

Mr. Rickard also received a telegram from the directors of Madison Square Garden today, which read:

"We are ready to back your judgment as to Chicago providing all arrangements are clear and satisfactory."

"I'm a happy, happy man tonight," Mr. Rickard told The Associated Press. "It certainly looks sure that Chicago has captured the big fight."

The New York promoter said he had already received three large orders for tickets today, totaling $190,000. One of the orders came from a group of Chicago bankers for $100,000, Mr. Rickard said.

SALMON KNOCKS OUT TWO.

Stops Lawson and Searles in Columbus Council Amateur Bouts.

Lemuel Salmon of the Salem Crescent Athletic Club won the feature bout at the weekly amateur boxing show of the Columbus Council, Knights of Columbus, by scoring two knockout victories last night. He first knocked out Eric Lawson, unattached, in the preliminary engagement of the 147-pound class and then knocked out Tom Searles in the final.

ALGER AND LA GRAY DRAW.

Fight Even Battle in 10-Round Feature at Long Branch Club.

Special to The New York Times.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., July 29.—Billy Alger, 143 pounds, of Arizona, and Joe La Gray, 141, of Deal, fought a ten-round draw in the feature bout at the Oceanview Athletic Club here tonight, according to the newspaper verdict. In the semi-final Billy White, 134, Jersey City, won on a foul from Jack Ryan, 141, Baltimore, in the sixth round.

In a six-rounder Ernest Saurics, 159, Philadelphia, knocked out High Hat McCullough, 153, Washington, in the fourth round. Abe Rosenthal, 158, of New York, knocked out K. O. Mandell, 150, of Newark, in the second round of a scheduled six-session fray. Tommy Riggio, 128, of Linden, won the opening four-rounder from Charlie Wells, 128, of Newark, by knocking out his opponent in the second round.

Risen in Ring Monday.

In the feature ten-round bout at the Dexter Park Arena on Monday, Charley Risen will clash with Paul Gulatto. The semi-final will be between Henny Goldberg and Billy Franklin. A third ten brings together Johnny Erickson and Mike Mollinski.

Legion to Keep Hands Off; Churches Hit Chicago Bout

CHICAGO, July 29 (AP).—The American Legion of Illinois will neither oppose nor support the movement to bring the Dempsey-Tunney championship fight to Soldier Field, Chicago, Ferre O. Watkins, State Commander, announced today. Commander Watkins's decision was made after a meeting with various local commanders.

A public protest against holding the Tunney-Dempsey fight in Chicago, "and especially against the sacrilege of allowing Soldier Field to be used for staging it," was made today by the Chicago Church Federation by its President, Dr. John R. Nichols. The denunciation of the proposed match compares it to a "pilgrimage to lay a wreath on the grave of Benedict Arnold," and recalls that on the same plot not long ago was the vast outdoor cathedral of the Eucharistic Congress of the Catholic Church.

More Blows Are Struck by Heated Fans Than the Contestants in the Ring, and Boxing Writers Receive Many Letters, Some Eulogistic and Others the Opposite.

The Dempsey-Sharkey fight is all over, but not so the shouting.

There never has been a heavyweight fight over which there has been so much shouting as the battle at the Yankee Stadium on July 21. The impending title bout between Dempsey and Tunney has not put an end to it. Generally one event is lost in another that comes on its heels, but not in this case. More blows were struck a week after the fight was over on account of it than were struck during the battle itself. One man was killed when a friendly disputant tried to prove his point regarding the mooted foul blows by striking him.

Those associated with boxing have never seen such a feverish aftermath as there has been to the Sharkey-Dempsey fight. As the event cools that fact stands out in conversation among them. Boxing writers do not recall when they have received so many letters as they have since July 21. Many of these letters are a caution; they are abusive, eulogistic and whatnot. They include everything from the most violent condemnation to the most violent praise.

Proves Interest in Boxing.

If there ever was any question of lack of interest in the boxing game the Sharkey-Dempsey bout has dispelled it. To be sure, there were many more persons present at the Tunney-Dempsey fight last September, but never has been more widespread interest. For example, the call for back numbers of newspapers has been greater than on any previous occasion. Requests for final edition accounts came in as late as a week after the fight.

A glance at the mail received by any person closely connected with the fight reveals an amazing lot of quirks of reaction to the event.

Before the fight took place, for example, a letter came in from the Podiatrists Association saying that Sharkey was sure to win because Dempsey had flat feet.

Another correspondent, this one a post mortem, devotes his time to an enumeration of the number of times that Dempsey and Sharkey respectively touched the ropes during their seven rounds.

A telegram is received by one boxing writer from a person totally unknown to him saying in effect that since the boxing writer knew so much and saw so much what odds will he offer on the result of the Dempsey-Tunney fight.

Perhaps the most astounding thing about the fight aftermath was the persistence of the rumor that Sharkey was seriously ill or dead as the result of the blows Dempsey struck. On the day of the fight newspapers received the usual number of queries about rumors that something had happened either to Dempsey or Sharkey. The day after the fight the rumors started concerning Sharkey. Such rumors follow every important fight, but in this case they kept up until they mounted to extraordinary proportions.

Questions Still Come In.

Some of the inquiries received on this came from sources that would ordinarily be expected to assume that in this day and age of reportorial activity a person in the limelight like Sharkey could hardly die without the press becoming aware of it. They kept up despite denials from Sharkey himself until four days after the fight with a stray question as late as a week after it was all over. They kept up despite the fact that Sharkey's condition of intestinal bleeding was nothing unusual. Carpentier suffered the same effect for four months after his fight with Dempsey.

The climax of the inanities that followed the fight came exactly one week after July 21, when a fan appeared at Madison Square Garden with a ticket to the fight, saying that he wanted his money back because he had been unable to get into the Yankee Stadium on Thursday, July 21.

HOLDS BERLENBACH MUST BOX LOUGHRAN

State Board Orders Paul to Show Cause Why He Should Not Fulfill Contract.

Paul Berlenbach, former light-heavyweight champion, was ordered yesterday by the State Athletic Commission to appear before it on Tuesday to show cause why he should not fulfill a contract to fight Tommy Loughran of Philadelphia under a contract that was made before Berlenbach retired prior to his recent come-back campaign.

Promoter Humbert Fugazy is prepared to promote this bout at Ebbets Field on Aug. 10, and Loughran is ready to go through with it. This indicates that Loughran or his manager, Joe Smith, got little satisfaction in their efforts to obtain a larger percentage for the proposed light-heavyweight battle with Mike McTigue. The commission rules are that the challenger get 12½ per cent. and the champion 37½.

Smith declared that he would not match Loughran on that basis, and his willingness to revive the old contract with Berlenbach indicates that he does not want the McTigue match for Loughran any longer. When Jack Delaney relinquished his title and the commission awarded it to McTigue, the provision was that McTigue defend it within thirty days. This would not be possible if Loughran fights on Aug. 10.

It is notable that Fugazy has chosen the day before the Delaney-Paulino fight at the Stadium as the date for the proposed Berlenbach-Loughran fight, showing that he is keeping up his "war" with Tex Rickard.

While Fugazy was before the commission he explained that he had been holding up Paulino's check for his match with Harry Wills recently, because he had advanced Paulino $8,540 before that bout. The 25 per cent. coming to Paulino for his match with Wills amounted to $8,882.66, which leaves a balance of $342.40 due Paulino. The commission told Fugazy to have the Ebbets-McKeever Company, which operates Ebbets Field, make out a check for that sum to Paulino and present it when the commission meets on Tuesday. At that time Paulino or a representative of his, will be advised to be present to effect a settlement.

Jess McMahon, matchmaker for Tex Rickard, completed the supporting card yesterday for the battle between Jack Delaney, who relinquished his light-heavyweight title last week, and Paulino, the Basque Woodchopper, at the Yankee Stadium Aug. 11.

The main bout, of course, is over the fifteen-round championship distance. The semi-final of ten rounds will be between Dave Shade, who was Dempsey's chief sparring partner while he trained for Sharkey, and Joe Anderson, Pacific Coast middleweight. Hilario Martinez, Spanish lightweight, who has been making a strong impression recently, will meet Sammy Vogel of Harlem in the other ten-rounder. A preliminary of four rounds will be between Felix Sportello and Dick Fullam.

McMahon went before the State Athletic Commission yesterday and received permission to scale the prices from $2.20 to $16.50. He had asked for a $22 top. The bleachers will not be used.

Al Mayer, manager of Paulino, stated yesterday that Paulino had started light training at Summit, N. J. Incidentally, the Garden mail yesterday contained a unique communication for the Spaniard. An envelope arrived upon which was written Mr. and New York. That was all the writing, but a picture of a man had been pasted upon the envelope. It was of Paulino, and evidently a boxing fan in the Postoffice recognized the Bounding Basque and directed the letter to the Garden.

A telegram was received at the Garden yesterday from Pete Stellly, manager of Delaney, saying that Delaney had grown one-half inch around the chest and that he weighed 178½ pounds yesterday. Delaney is training at his camp in New Hampshire.

Early betting on this fight is 6 to 5 in favor of Delaney, although there is some wagering at long odds that Paulino will knock out the French-Canadian.

WINTER AND HILL CAPTURE BIKE RACE

Charley Winter, New York City, and Norman Hill, San Jose, Cal., won the 100-kilometer (62½ miles) team race at the New York velodrome last night from a field of twenty-two teams. Winter and Hill were not looked upon as having a chance, but the two youngsters, riding consistently, scored points with great regularity. The race was not decided until the last sprint, when Winter beat out Cecil Walker and won the race for his team.

Winter and Hill took first place with 72 points. George Dempsey and Anthony Beckman finished second with 70 points; Cecil Walker and Bobby Walthour, third with 64; Reggie McNamara and Harold Smith, fourth with 44; Alf Grenda and Harry Horan, fifth with 22, and Bill Penn and Bill Hanley, sixth with 17 points.

The time of the race was 2:15 3-5.

There was a wild jam in the race before twenty miles had been covered and this lasted for about fifteen minutes. During the jam eight teams lapped the field. Walthour and Walker, Coburn and Croley tried hard for a lap after this jam but failed. The jamming stopped when Coles, Hill, Walthour, Piani and Young took a nasty tumble. Walthour landed on his head and was badly shaken up, but was soon riding again.

100-Kilometer (62½ Miles) Team Race (Professional)—Won by Charley Winter, New York City, and Norman Hill, San Jose, Cal. (72 points); George Dempsey, Australia, and Anthony Beckman, Secaucus, N. J. (70 points), second; Cecil Walker, Australia, and Bobby Walthour, Newark, N. J. (64 points), third; Reggie McNamara, Newark, and Harold Smith, Australia (44 points), fourth; Alfred Grenda, Tasmania, and Harry Horan, Plainfield (22 points), fifth; William Penn, East Orange, N. J., and William Hanley, San Francisco (17 points), sixth. Time—2:15:00 3-5.

KOCHANSKY BEATS GOULD.

Gets Verdict After Six Rounds Before 2,500 at Long Beach Stadium.

Special to The New York Times.

LONG BEACH, L. I., July 29.—Johnny Kochansky of Bayonne gained the decision over Benny Gould of Canada tonight at the Long Beach Stadium in the feature six-rounder before a crowd of 2,500. Kochansky rolled up a lead in the first four rounds, knocking down his opponent in the second. Gould rallied toward the close, but Kochansky had too big a lead for him to overcome. The winner scaled at 133¼ and the loser at 131½.

In the semi-final encounter Harry Thompson, 147, of Elizabeth knocked out Wally Ekew, 146½, in the first round. Thompson knocked down Ekew three times in the opening session, the referee stopping the bout. In another six Jack Mason, 134¾, of Elizabeth triumphed over Danny Flynn, 136¾. Frisco Bautista, 128, of New York won the opening six from Jack Levy, 127, of Brooklyn. In a four-round engagement Joe Spatola, 133, of Long Island City knocked out George Werner, 130½, of Brooklyn in the fourth round. In the opening four-rounder Randolph Rash, 118, of Harlem won the decision from Eddie Gesler, 118½, of East New York.

MARTINEN STOPPED IN 3D BY HOFFMAN

STARS AID AHEARN FUND

Walker, McTigue and Others Referee Bouts—9,000 Attend Vacation Camp Tourney.

Amateur boxing proved that it is a capable magnet when used for a charitable purpose when the card of bouts between amateur stars from Boston, Pittsburg, Philadelphia and New York attracted a near capacity crowd of 9,000 fans to the Queensboro Athletic Club last night. The occasion was the monster amateur boxing tournament for the benefit of the John F. Ahearn East Side Vacation Camp Fund.

The large attendance included a number of well-known pugilistic stars, who donated liberally to the fund. Among these were Mickey Walker, world's middleweight champion, and Mike McTigue, light-heavyweight champion. Walker and McTigue acted as referees. Johnny Dundee, Mushy Callahan and Charley "Phil" Rosenberg also took their turn as third man in the ring.

Martinen Is Stopped.

George Hoffman of the Holy Name Club, national light-heavyweight champion, went out of his class to knock out Billy Martinen, unattached, in a lively battle. Hoffman fought craftily at the start, but soon was finding Martinen's jaw with accurate rights. The latter was unable to get any telling blows through Hoffman's defense, meanwhile leaving himself a target to Hoffman's heavy blows. The bout was stopped in the third round, with Martinen hopelessly outclassed.

Morris Axelrod of Philadelphia turned in a good performance by defeating Danny Levine of the Seward Gym in the 126 pound class. Levine was always on the aggressive and earned an even break for three rounds. In the extra session, however, Axelrod gained the verdict by his heavier punching.

Tommy Lown, national 145-pound champion, scored a victory over Jim McTiernan of Pittsburgh in the final bout. McTiernan rushed Lown steadily throughout the battle and earned a draw through his aggressiveness in the three regulation rounds. Lown opened up in the fourth and caught McTiernan time and again with sharp right clips to the jaw to gain the verdict.

Toner Scores Victory.

Tom Toner, metropolitan heavyweight champion, outpointed Robart Boyd of Pittsburgh in a rough four-round battle. Boyd was by far the better boxer and put Toner down for a count in the first session. The bell saved him. Toner rallied in the next two rounds and the bout was forced to an extra session. The crowd booed the decision rendered in Toner's favor.

The vacation fund was enriched by $20,000. The sum taken in at the box office was augmented by considerable donations made as the night wore on.

FUNERAL FOR WELSH TO TAKE PLACE TODAY

Young Griffo Among Those Who View Body of the Former Lightweight Champion.

Many famous figures of the ring and the sporting world in general viewed the body of Freddie Welsh, one-time lightweight champion of the world, at the undertaking establishment of Edward Devlin, 408 West Fifty-second Street, yesterday. Welsh was found dead Thursday in his room at the Hotel Sidney. The funeral will be held today at the Boyertown Chapel, Forty-third Street and Eighth Avenue, at 2 o'clock and the body will be cremated at Fresh Pond, Queens.

Among those who called at Devlin's establishment yesterday was Young Griffo, a famous lightweight in his day, who is now a familiar figure along Broadway, shabby and far from the boxer he once was. Joe Lynch, once bantamweight champion, also called.

Many of the more prosperous in boxing circles denied yesterday the accusation made by Brahms Weinstein, Welsh's widow, that former friends had deserted the one-time boxer when he was "down and out." They said he had made no appeals to them for help and that he had been too proud to do so. Lynch, for example, said he had met Welsh a few weeks ago and the boxer had not told him he needed money.

Promoter Humbert Fugazy retained Devlin to take charge of the funeral and has made arrangements for the services and burial.

When you say—

"Give me a quart of oil"

you're inviting—

A noisy engine

A noisy engine keeps you guessing. You wonder what's up. Is it carbon? Or is wear threatening to lay up the car? What will repairs cost?

50% of all engine wear comes straight from poor lubrication. Every repair man knows that.

Many oils wither under the heat of 1500 to 2000 explosions per minute. These are the oils you probably get when you say, "Give me a quart of oil."

When you turn to Gargoyle Mobiloil you erect a scientific safeguard against thumps, knocks and all other wear-noises. You use the same oil that most automobile engineers prefer for their private cars.

No Wear in Lindbergh's Engine

PATERSON, N. J., U. S. A.

Office of the President

61 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

GENTLEMEN: — Colonel Lindbergh's WRIGHT WHIRLWIND engine which was recently disassembled at our plant for inspection was found to be in perfect condition. No perceptible wear was found in any of the parts and all bearings were in excellent condition indicating perfect lubrication throughout approximately 90 hours of flying, including his epochal flight from New York to Paris. As Mobiloil "B" was used exclusively in this engine, the engine's condition is a splendid indication of the lubricating qualities of Mobiloil "B".

Very truly yours,

(signed) Charles L. Lawrance, President

You can get the same high quality Mobiloil in the correct grade for your car that Colonel Lindbergh depended on when he flew from New York to Paris—the oil that the U. S. Army Fliers used when they flew around the world and to Hawaii.

The correct grades of Gargoyle Mobiloil for engine lubrication of prominent passenger cars are specified below. If your car is not listed here see the complete Mobiloil Chart at your dealers'.

You can buy Mobiloil at most dealers' who are not controlled by gasoline refiners. The Gargoyle Mobiloil sign is a mark of the independent dealer.

Gargoyle Mobiloil is not a by-product in the manufacture of gasoline. It is a specialized lubricating oil. For a quiet engine don't say, "Give me a quart of oil." Ask your dealer for Mobiloil—and specify the grade your car requires.

FAVORITES REIGN AT YONKERS TRACK

RED SPIDER IS IN FRONT

Scat Comes Up Strong at Finish Only to Lose by a Head—Dubric Lone Outsider to Win.

Public choices had a good day at Empire City yesterday, and, though the cards were cut a good deal by scratching and were not very brilliant in any event, the racing was excellently contested and provided close finishes in all but one of the numbers. There were no featured events, but most attention was paid to the fourth and fifth races. In the former the original field of eleven was reduced to five and the public took a very decided leaning toward F. W. Barlow's Salta, playing the colt heavily and keeping his price at even money right up to post time.

Salta justified this extensive popularity by winning, but did not have a scamper, by any means. In fact, this race provided one of the close finishes, for when the wire was reached Salta had just a head advantage over Orbit, and gained that much of a margin only by a very stout-hearted drive through the stretch. Benny Breuning had the leg up on the colt, and broke him on the outside at the snap of the barrier, jumping into a momentary lead. Up came Orbit, however, and the two of them raced it out.

Orbit Coming Up Fast.

Turning into the stretch, Orbit was in front by a head, with Salta leading St. Lawrence by three lengths. The latter then caved in, and Salta at just that moment was let down and flashed past Orbit. Orbit displayed a lot of courage and plenty of speed and held on nicely, but couldn't get up with the fast-going Salta. Tamiani Trail came up from last to snatch the short end of the purse. The race was a claiming affair and the winner was claimed by C. Koerner for $4,000.

In the fifth race opinion was divided regarding the merits or chances of Red Spider and Scat. The Kearns stable, the colors of which were carried by Red Spider, was noised about as having sunk a considerable amount on its representative and the public also seemed interested, as was reflected by the odds of 4 to 5. But Eddie Arlington's Scat drew much attention also and was the second choice at 7 to 5.

The distance was a mile and seventy yards. The fact that it wasn't just a bit longer kept Scat from winning. At the finish Red Spider won the verdict by a head, but Scat was going much the faster of the two and in another jump would have triumphed.

Blackburn, up on Red Spider, held the Kearns gelding off the pace and rated him well back. Scat was under stout restraint back, and Graet Houes, apparently holding forth just that, set the pace at the top of the stretch and then was overcome as Red Spider came wig-wagging up with Scat at his shoulder. Turning wide, the three spread out across the track and Red Spider, on the outside, came winging in with a great burst of speed and won.

Scat Tries Too Late.

While Scat had the best speed, at the end he was moved up too late. Great Hopes finished third in the field of only four, for Lucky Beggar was lucky to finish at all, being fifteen lengths back of Great Hopes at the end.

The third number provided a neck finish when Just Folks came up from nowhere in particular to beat out Last Bite by a neck. The latter was made the favorite by the late betting but after chasing Vie and Mikado didn't have enough left to stave off Just Folks's sterling finish, which, incidentally, was greatly aided by C. Zoeller's excellent ride.

The only outsider to win was Dubric in the second race. Quoted at 8 to 1 and backed to 6 to 1, Dubric came up out of the field eight in the last 100 yards and won by a half length from Alita Allen, the favorite, thus upsetting a considerable number of calculators who had entirely oxerlooking his posisibilities as a winner. Johnny Campbell, a hot tip as the field went to the past, could finish no better than third.

Miss Jacobs Conquered by Miss Wills, 6-1, 6-2, in Manchester Final

MISS WILLS REPELS MISS JACOBS EASILY

VICTOR PLAYS SUPERBLY

Special to The New York Times.

MANCHESTER, Mass., July 29.—Miss Helen Wills of Berkeley, Cal., Wimbledon champion and former American titleholder, gave a superb exhibition of tennis in vanquishing Miss Helen Jacobs, also of Berkeley, 6—1, 6—2, in the final round of the third annual Essex County Club invitation tournament here this morning. It required thirty-four minutes for "Helen the First" to subdue "Helen the Second" and more than 2,000 persons witnessed the sizzling encounter, the largest crowd ever gathered here for a tennis match.

It was tennis of the highest quality with Miss Wills gaining the ascendancy through her greater control, superior steadiness, the severity of her strokes and her ability to vary her game as the occasion demanded. Not at any time during the match did Miss Wills permit her more youthful adversary to gain her balance, for the former American champion realized how dangerous her opponent could become.

In a sense today's match was of prime importance because it not only marked the first meeting of the two on a grass court, but it was also to determine how well Miss Jacobs could stand up under pressure.

Both players were enthusiastically welcomed as they entered the court to start play, with the Wimbledon champion accorded the larger share of applause. They were applauded frequently during the course of play.

Miss Jacobs Wins Only Fifth.

In the first set, Miss Jacobs did not break into the scoring until the fifth game, which she won at love from Miss Wills's service. This set was speedily completed, with but one game, the second, going to deuce. Miss Wills scored five placements against four for her opponent.

It was a driving game from the base line that both players employed. Miss Wills seemed to be putting more top spin on the ball and the bound was undoubtedly affecting Miss Jacobs's accuracy. The devastating backhand which enabled Miss Jacobs to conquer Mrs. Mallory several days ago was not in evidence. This may be explained by the forcing tactics employed by the Wimbledon champion. Miss Wills had her game perfectly in hand and was able to work her opponent out of position to score with clean placements.

Miss Jacobs began the second set with the same determination that characterized her play during the first set, and bringing her powerful service into action, won the first game with the loss of but two points. They lead Miss Wills short-lived, for she won the next four games.

The fourth game of the set brought about the best tennis of the match. Not until deuce had been called five times did Miss Wills gain the ascendancy, two successive cross counter drives being put out of reach of Miss Jacobs's racquet. Miss Wills broke through to win the seventh game, to bring the count to 5—2.

Match Ends on Error.

As the two players changed courts Miss Wills resumed her service only to see a lead of 15—40 against her. She rallied to knot the count and forced Miss Jacobs to an error for the point and the match.

Gains Second Leg on Bowl.

Miss Wills's victory in the singles final gave her a second leg on the Essex Bowl, which was in play for the third year. Miss Wills first captured the Essex County championship in 1926 and gained her first leg on the trophy. Because of her illness she was prevented from competing last year.

Today's clash was the second meeting between the Berkeley girls. The first occurred in 1925 in their home city, Miss Wills winning, 6—4, 6—1.

In the ladies' doubles final, the team of Miss Wills and Mrs. George Wightman, seeded No. 1 in the draw, triumphed over Mrs. Doris Corbiere and Mrs. William Endicott in straight sets, 6—2, 6—3. The winners had little trouble in disposing of their opponents and were always ahead. Miss Wills was in invincible form after winning the singles final from her sister Californian in the morning, and scored repeatedly on her accurate placements.

Triumphs for Ex-Champions.

It was a triumph for the national doubles champions of 1924 and was accomplished despite the first raindrops of a heavy rainstorm. Dark clouds had threatened to unloose a deluge during the course of the match and play had to be hurried in order to finish ahead of the storm. The crowd started to leave when the first raindrops descended, but the two teams held the court until the match was completed. Miss Wills served the final game in the rain.

One other match was played today and that was in the mixed doubles, in which Miss Margaret Blake and Lawrence Ogden defeated Mrs. Godfrey and Frank Lane in straight sets, 6—4, 6—3. All of the seeded teams will play in the semi-finals tomorrow morning.

Fathers of the Two Helens Both Satisfied Over Result

BERKELEY, Cal., July 29 (AP).—Miss Helen Jacobs is a "very fine player and she should consider it no disgrace to be defeated by Miss Wills," declared Dr. C. A. Wills, Helen Wills's father, today, when he heard the result of the Manchester final.

E. H. Jacobs, father of Helen Jacobs, was not surprised over the outcome.

"That is about the way I figured it would end," Mr. Jacobs said. "Helen Wills is too experienced for our Helen just yet. She has not had tournament experience, nor has she played over about three weeks on grass courts, whereas Helen Wills has played about three months on grass."

HUNTER STOPS RUSH OF MANGIN TO FINAL

LOSER MAKES GREAT SHOTS

Brings Gallery to Feet by Back-Hand Drive in Last Game—4 Doubles Teams Advance.

By ALLISON DANZIG.

Gregory Mangin of New York, nineteen-year-old runner-up for the metropolitan clay court title, made a beautiful fight in the semi-final round of the metropolitan turf court championship yesterday, but found in Frank Hunter too powerful and too experienced an adversary to overcome.

In as brilliant an exhibition of hard, clean driving and spectacular shot making as the tournament has witnessed, the Wimbledon doubles champion defeated the Jersey youth on the Crescent A. C. courts in Bay Ridge, 7—5, 7—5, 6—4, and advanced to the final round.

The other semi-final match between John Doeg of Santa Monica, Cal., national junior champion, and Dr. George King of New York, tenth in the national ranking, will be put on this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The final in both singles and doubles will be played tomorrow.

Four teams were left in the doubles at the conclusion of play last night. In the upper half were Wilmer Allison and Louis Thalheimer of Texas and Alan Herrington and Ralph McElvenny of Stanford. The brackets in the lower division are occupied by Fred Anderson and Edward Feibleman and Fred Baggs and James Quick. They will meet in the order named this afternoon following the singles match.

Doeg Loses in Doubles.

Herrington and McElvenney gained their place in the semi-finals at the expense of Doeg and Bobby Seller of California, coming through in five sets after dropping the opening chapter. Thalheimer and Allison also had their hands full in getting by Sidney B. Wood Jr. and Harold Blauer. The junior pair carried the attack to the Texans and threatened all the way in each of the four sets before yielding, 6—4, 9—7, 5—7, 7—5.

Baggs and Quick took three love sets from James Mallen and Lauren Chapman, while Anderson and Feibleman put out William Aydelotte and Perrine Rookefellow, 7—5, 6—3. This match being decided by the best two sets out of three.

Hunter, as throughout the week, was right on top of his game yesterday and it was well for him that he was, for Mangin was playing such sound and thoroughly aggressive tennis that anything less than the New Rochelle player's best hardly would have sufficed to win. The Jersey youth has come up the tennis ladder rapidly this year and has a backhand that is amazingly effective under stress. Time and again yesterday when hopelessly out of position, Mangin confounded Hunter with one of these back-hand drives down the line or across the court, the ball barely clearing the net.

Hunter Fiercest Attack.

It was in the final game of the match that Mangin was to make the greatest of these shots. Hunter, pressing relentlessly with savage forehanders to first one corner and then the other, had his young opponent reeling. But Mangin, with bulldog courage, drove his tired legs across the turf to keep the ball in play, until finally he found himself wide of his forehand corner. Hunter, waiting at the net for the return, volleyed across court to Mangin's backhand corner.

Nine players out of ten would never have tried for the shot, but Mangin, turning like a flash, made a mad dash across the base line and let go with his backhand while on the run. It was a perfect passing shot, clearing the net by an inch, as it streaked across court wide of Hunter's racquet. As Mangin picked himself up off the ground and the next court the gallery stood up and cheered.

The fact that the Jersey youth was called on to make so many of these spectacular recoveries is a testimonial to the pressure applied by Hunter. The Wimbledon doubles champion, using his greater experience and knowledge of tactics, did not have to work nearly so hard to maintain position, opening up wide gaps with his forehand that put the burden upon his opponent and gradually wore him down.

From the start to the finish it was always Mangin who was fighting to hold on, except in the second set when he took four games in a row to lead at 5—3. Hunter was not forcing matters quite so much during this stretch, and Mangin enjoyed a brief breathing spell, of which he was sadly in need after the first set, a bitter struggle all the way. His lead in the game was speedily dissipated once Hunter aroused himself, and Mangin got only one game out of the next seven.

Mangin Fights in Vain.

In the final set the younger player hung on grimly, scoring on service aces and keeping Hunter away from the net, as he had throughout the match, but the raggedly built New Rochelle man had too much power for him and forged ahead at 5—3.

Mangin won the next game and in the tenth gained a lead of 40—0 with the aid of his breath-taking backhand shots. But the effort took too much out of him and he was unable to take advantage of his opportunity, falling off in control as Hunter pressed the attack to pull up to deuce and then win the game and match.

THERE is a mistake somewhere. In a studio on the outskirts of Detroit is a heroic statue of Tyrus Raymond Cobb. Those who have seen it say that it is a really fine statue and so like Cobb that if they put it on a ball field it would undoubtedly come down off its pedestal and start an argument with an umpire.

It was done by a Russian sculptor who now claims that he has been "done" by some person or persons unknown. He wants the mystery cleared up and the statue unveiled at Navin Field or along Woodward Avenue somewhere. He isn't particular, as long as the statue is set up and the money is set down. The money? Ah, there's the rub!

It seems that the fans of Detroit have had another change of heart. When Ty Cobb was manager of the Tigers last year the fans had no thought of honoring him except with a wreath of wild raspberry.

But that was before the intimate correspondence with Dutch Leonard was exposed to view. Somehow that episode made Cobb a sudden hero in Detroit, and when he was sent to the Athletics the good people of the automobile city were overwhelmed with grief for their lost idol.

It mattered not that they had spent considerable time and energy showering him with abuse while he was working hard to win ball games for Detroit, they pined for him when he departed.

The Happy Gathering.

When Ty Cobb made his first trip to Detroit this Spring as a member of the Athletics, the whole city turned out to do him honor. He was the hero at a big luncheon and the recipient of endless encomiums and many gifts more substantial. The Mayor was there. The City Council turned out in force. Big business men fought to shake his hand. Humble fans adored from a distance. It was a great occasion.

Somebody thought it would be a great idea to have a statue of Ty Cobb in Detroit. The notion was carried unanimously. And forgotten.

It was forgotten until a short time ago when the sculptor appeared at the Mayor's office and said:

"Mr. Mayor, where shall we put this statue?"

No Appreciation of Art.

"Who is going to pay me for this statue?"

Well, the Mayor wasn't particular about that, either. In general he thought it a good idea that statues should be paid for, but he could answer only for himself and he had all the statues he wanted at the time.

"Ask me another" countered the Mayor.

"Well, who ordered this statue?"

Gentlemen, that was a puzzler! The Mayor didn't know. The sculptor didn't know. The Chief of Police put his best detectives on the trail and nobody knows yet who ordered the heroic statue of T. R. Cobb. It must have been John Doe Russell.

A Similar Outrage Against Art.

This brings to mind the plight in which the famous G. Herman Ruth once found himself. It will be remembered that in 1921 the Babe set a record of 59 home runs for the season.

In appreciation of this great feat the fans banded together and had a home run crown fashioned for the home run king. It was a real crown, though slightly over-size to fit the Ruthian brows. There were fifty-nine little gold baseballs circling the top of the crown to represent the fifty-nine home runs made by Ruth. There were crossed bats worked into the design and perhaps a few diamond chips here and there. It was a work of art and Mr. Ruth prized it highly.

One day a stranger stepped up to Ruth and said:

"I'll trouble you for that crown."

"What crown?"

"That home run crown."

"What league are you in?" asked Mr. Ruth. "How many did you hit?"

The Abdication of King George.

"Listen, big boy," said the stranger. "Get that crown and make it snappy. It ain't paid for and it's gotta go back or somebody goes to jail. Here's a writ of replevin if you'd like to look at it."

Nobody likes to look at a writ of replevin. Mr. Ruth didn't care to see it. He had seen other writs and they were no cure for sore eyes.

He got the crown and gave it to the stranger.

"Here, take it," said the Babe, "but I never thought I would lose my home run crown to a guy with a derby hat."

The Team for the Master Mind.

Here's another item which may be of interest to baseball fans. We quote:

"The French Academy of Sciences has admitted to its list of foreign associates Leonardo Torres y Quevodo, Madrid mathematician who has just described to the savants the workings of a 'mechanical man.' The 'man' or machine is said to play chess with precision, even to the point of detecting cheating on the part of its adversary."

If Senor Quevodo can manufacture a "mechanical man" to play chess, why not a "mechanical man" to play baseball? John McGraw has been looking for such a "mechanical man" for years and years but he has been unable to eradicate the human element to date.

With Senor Quevodo's assistance, the Giant manager might be able to pull this year's pennant out of the fire. It is hereby suggested that the Madrid mathematician make a complete set of mechanical ball players including one mechanical pitcher. The pitcher must be good. Then J. J. McGraw can set the combination, push his mechanical men out to their positions, throw the switch and sit back triumphant as the victories roll in.

KINSEY VANQUISHED IN DAVIS CUP PLAY

JAPAN WINS TWO MATCHES

Three Hours Consumed Before Ohta Finally Subdues Kinsey, Then Harada Downs Unda.

ST. LOUIS, July 29 (AP).—Players representing Japan won the first two matches from Mexico in the American Zone Davis Cup tennis contest at the Triple A Club here today.

Yoshiro Ohta of Japan defeated Robert Kinsey of Mexico in a thrilling five-set battle. The scores were 2—6, 1—6, 6—4, 6—1, 8—6. Takeichi Harada added another point for Japan by defeating Alfonso Unda of Mexico in straight sets, 6—2, 6—3, 6—3.

Three hours were needed to complete the match. Play was stopped for twenty-five minutes by rain in the third set.

Kinsey's Chop Stroke Puzzles.

Kinsey opened a puzzling chop-stroke attack in the first set which bewildered Ohta. The second set was somewhat similar to the first, although Ohta showed some improvement, his overhead smashes being more accurate.

In the third set Ohta was leading 5 to 1 in games, and Kinsey had taken the first point of the fourth game when rain stopped the match. Resumption of play marked the turning of the tide in favor of the Japanese player.

Ohta launched a varied attack consisting of net play and hard cross-court drives to the corners of Kinsey's court. He won the third set, 6—4, Kinsey trying in vain to overcome the Japanese player's 5—3 advantage.

Kinsey Rallies in Vain.

In the fourth set, Kinsey's chop strokes lacked their usual effectiveness. Ohta gained an early lead in the final set and despite Kinsey's brilliant effort to win, the Japanese player took the set, 6—2.

Harada of Japan took the second singles match from Unda of Mexico rather quickly. While some games were close, Harada held the advantage throughout.

Tomorrow there will be a doubles match between Harada and Captain Zenzo Shimizu of Japan against the Mexican combination of Robert Kinsey and Claude Butlin. Kinsey and Butlin held five titles in Mexico and have yet to suffer defeat as a doubles team.

The Japanese team was expected to be Harada and Teiso Toba, but Captain Shimizu elected to participate in the play tomorrow.

Richards and Hunter Play Today.

Vincent Richards and Francis Hunter, Wimbledon and Olympic doubles champions in 1924, will compete against each other this afternoon at 2:30 at the Westchester Biltmore Country Club in an exhibition game. Hunter won the Wimbledon title with William Tilden this year and reached the final in the metropolitan championship yesterday. Richards will play again on Sunday in an exhibition, but his opponent has not been named.

Sir George Thomas of Great Britain won the first prize for the best individual score. He did not lose a game.

Miss Menchik Wins World's Title.

LONDON, July 29 (AP).—In leading the women contestants at the international chess tournament, Miss Menchik attained the title of woman champion of the world. Mme. H. Beskow of Sweden was second with nine games won. Miss Menchik played her first game at Moscow at the age of 6. She is now 21 years old and has lived at Hastings, Eng., for six years. Her mother is English and her father is Czechoslovakian, but she spent her early years in Russia. Her chess teacher was the Hungarian master Marocsy.

Play today in the uncompleted thirteenth round resulted as follows: Hungary beat Finland; Germany beat France, Austria beat Sweden, Italy beat Argentina, and Holland beat Spain, all by 2½ games to 1½; Denmark beat Czechoslovakia, 2½ to ½; Yugoslavia and Switzerland were drawn, Great Britain beat Belgium, 3-1.

In the fourteenth round Holland beat Hungary, 2½ to 1½. The other games of this round had already been played.

Great Britain beat Germany, 2½ to 1½; Denmark and Belgium were drawn; Finland beat France, 3-1; Sweden beat Italy, 3-1; Switzerland beat Austria, 2½-1½; Hungary beat Spain, 3½-½; Czechoslovakia beat Argentina, 4-0; Holland and Yugoslavia were drawn.

DR. HARVITT IN FINAL.

He and Kahn to Meet in Public Court Match Tomorrow.

Sid Kahn and Dr. Harvitt reached the final round in the Brooklyn public courts handicap championship at the Kingston Tennis Club yesterday. Kahn disposed of Ben Braunstein in straight sets, 6—1, 6—4, while Harvitt had a more difficult time in triumphing over Louis Cohen. This required three sets, 6—11, 6—3, 7—5. The final will be held tomorrow.

TILDEN IS FORCED TO 6 SETS TO WIN

Rallies to Beat Brown and Gain Illinois State Tennis Final, 3-6, 6-4, 8-7, 6-0, 10-8.

HENNESSEY UPSETS CHAPIN

Sweeps Past Defending Champion by 6-1, 6-4, 6-0—Mrs. Chapin Scores in Women's Doubles.

CHICAGO, July 29 (AP).—William T. Tilden, Philadelphia, and John Hennessey, Indianapolis, finalists in the national clay court tennis championship last week, will meet again, this time for the Illinois State singles' title, Sunday, at the Skokie Country Club.

Hennessey went to the final today by soundly trouncing Alfred R. Chapin Jr., Hyannis, Mass., defending champion, 6—1, 6—4, 6—0. Tilden came from behind to defeat Wray Brown of St. Louis, 3—6, 6—4, 8—7, 6—0, 10—8.

Hennessey's defeat of Chapin, who ranks seventh in the country, was expected, but the decisiveness of the victory was startling. The Hoosier lad was on top of his game and excepting for a brief spurt in the second set when Chapin led 4—2, the Eastern star was never in the match.

Chop Strokes Bother Tilden.

Brown's steady chop strokes bothered Tilden considerably and the Mound City star played a cautious, accurate game that was not to Tilden's liking. Brown took the first and third sets and was trailing 5—3 in the final set when he suddenly knotted the count at 5—5 and then forced ahead to lead 6—5. Tilden, however, played carefully as only Tilden can, tied the count and then Brown tied it again at 7—7 and again at 8—8.

Tilden was bothered by Brown's carefully placed shots and accurate net game, but won at 10—8.

Chapin and Clarence Griffin of San Francisco advanced to the semi-finals of the men's doubles by defeating Jack Harris and Jerry Weber of Chicago, 6—3, 7—5. The victory put Chapin and Griffin in the same half with Tilden and Sandy Weiner of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Chapin a Victor.

Mrs. A. H. Chapin and Miss Marion Leighton went into the semi-finals of the women's doubles by defeating Miss Kate Waldo and Mrs. L. E. Bailey of Chicago, 6—2, 6—2. Mrs. Faith Rieos of Kinsey, Mich., and Miss Marion Pearsall of Detroit eliminated Mrs. Prentiss Sears of Boston and Mrs. W. C. Hubbard of Chicago to enter the semi-finals opposite Mrs. Chapin and Miss Leighton, 6—2, 6—2. Miss Doris Kinsel and Mrs. Bohrer won from Mrs. J. H. Mitchell and Mrs. Hale Holden Jr., 6—1, 6—1.

Walter T. Hayes, Chicago, one of the ten ranking players ten years ago, and Emmet Pare, youthful Chicago star, upset Harris Coggeshall of Des Moines and Wray Brown today to enter the semi-final round of the doubles. The scores were 3—6, 6—3, 6—0. The match was held over from yesterday when darkness halted play after each team had won a set.

Mrs. Chapin Advances.

Mrs. A. H. Chapin Jr., Hyannis, Mass., defending her singles title, went into the final round with an easy victory over Mrs. Ruth Ries of Saginaw, Mich., 6—2, 6—4. In the other woman's semi-final Clara Zinke of Cincinnati won the right to oppose Mrs. Chapin for the championship by defeating Mrs. Hale Holden Jr. of Chicago, 7—5, 6—3.

In the men's doubles, quarter round, Walter Hayes and Emmett Pare, Chicago, defeated Harris Coggeshall, Des Moines, and Wray Brown, St. Louis, 3—6, 6—1, 6—0; Lake Williams, Chicago, and John Hennessey, Indianapolis, defeated Leroy Weir, Chicago, and J. H. Oliausen, Philadelphia, 6—4, 6—3.

Tilden-Wiener in Final.

Tilden and A. L. Wiener of Philadelphia won their semi-final men's doubles tilt after a bitter five-set struggle against A. H. Chapin Jr. and Clarence Griffin of California, 6—4, 4—6, 6—3, 6—7, 6—4.

In the other semi-final doubles match Lucien Williams, Chicago, and Hennessey, holders of the national clay court title, defeated Walter T. Hayes and Emmet Pare, Chicago, 6—1, 6—4, 6—1. Williams and Hennessey will face Tilden and Wiener in the championship round in the doubles tomorrow.

Mrs. Chapin and Marion Leighton, Chicago, went into the final of the women's doubles play, defeating Mrs. Ruth Ries and Marion Pearsall, Detroit, 6—3, 6—1. The other semi-final in that event will be played tomorrow between Clara Zinke and Olga Weil, Cincinnati, and Doris Kinsel and Mrs. Vorelia Bohrer, Chicago. The women's doubles finals will be played Sunday.

PALESTINE ELEVEN READY.

Will Meet Hispano Soccer Team at Hawthorne Field Tomorrow.

Tomorrow at four o'clock at Hawthorne Field in Brooklyn the Maccabea soccer team from Palestine will play the Hispano eleven of New York, winner of the State championship this year. The Maccabeans defeated the Odicia eleven, finalist in the State tourney, last Sunday, but expect an even harder battle tomorrow against Hispano.

Palestine has been hitting a fine pace in its recent games and on Monday night, the game tomorrow should be replete with fast soccer and thrilling scrimmages. Palestine will compete in only one more game before going home, as it is expected there will be a large crowd at the game tomorrow.

Pan-Hellenic Games Tomorrow.

The first athletic games of the Pan-Hellenic American Athletic Club will be held tomorrow at Ulmer Park. According to an announcement made yesterday. More than three hundred athletes, drawn from all parts of the country, will compete. The competition will be held with the aid of the Grand Americana A. C. of this city.

Hagenlacher Scores Again.

Eric Hagenlacher defeated Joe McDonald in an exhibition match of 18.2 balk-line billiards last night at the Fourteenth Street Academy, 300 to 64 in six innings. Hagenlacher had a high run of 127, while MacDonald's best run was 37.

TENNIS IS JUST FUN, SAYS MISS BOUMAN

HAS DRILL AT FOREST HILLS

But Is Fatigued by Host After Tilt With Mrs. Hawk—May Enter Seabright Tourney.

A friendly invader from the smiling little kingdom of Holland arrived in New York yesterday on the steamship Rotterdam with the avowed intention of taking back to her native land the cup emblematic of the woman's tennis championship of the United States. She is Miss Kea Bouman, champion of Holland, and the first Hollander, whether man or woman, to come to America to play in a tennis tournament.

Not only will she compete in the singles at Forest Hills but she will also play in the doubles, her partner being the present national titleholder, Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory. In order to get used to American courts and to help get acclimated Miss Bouman will probably be one of the contestants in the invitation tournament at Seabright, starting Monday.

While she has always been able to hold her own at singles, the doubles play is not very familiar to Miss Bouman. The reason for this is the surprising lack of high-class women players in Holland. The net result is that she has never been able to practice with competent partners and has never competed in the doubles in a major tournament.

Another handicap which Miss Bouman had to overcome is a dearth of adequate facilities in her home town of Almelo, which is located near the German border. Although most of the villages and cities throughout the country can boast fine courts, Almelo had to be content with a cement one.

Conquered Her Father.

This was Miss Bouman's principal training ground. There she played with her father since she was a little girl. Occasionally the daughter was taken to The Hague, the tennis centre, which is a four hours' train ride distant. Finally came the day when she could beat her father without trouble and then followed trips of a week's duration to The Hague, and at last she got the practice she needed.

At The Hague Miss Bouman clashed with the leading men players and her game began to show marked improvement. The other women players were soon out of her class. She is now the first and only Dutch woman who is an internationalist.

Another thing which had to do with her improvement was the fact that two years ago she was placed under the tutelage of a coach. Prior to that the Dutch girl played, as she herself remarked, "just for fun." Even now she does not take it as seriously as many other stars. In September her racquet and tennis accessories are put away and she never touches them again until early in April.

All the Hollanders take their tennis in the same spirit. They play tennis for the enjoyment they obtain from it and spurn the tournaments which attract the Americans, the Englishand the French. Whenever they do play away from home they are handicapped by the grass courts on which practically all of the matches are held. There are none but clay courts in Holland, with the exception of a few cement ones.

Tries Out Courts Here.

Although tennis vies with football for popularity and although nearly all the people are interested in the sport, few of the Dutch players can be considered of international calibre. Of the three foremost Dutch racqueteers two are young enough to make a mark in the tennis world and the other is beyond the peak. The two youngsters are M. Timmer and C. Bryan and the veteran is Diemer Kool. Timmer is 20 and Bryan 22, while Kool is about 34.

Timmer had intended to take part in the Dutch invasion of America, but at the last moment was forced to change his plans. He was taken sick and at the doctor's orders stayed at home.

Miss Bouman lost no time in trying out the American courts yesterday. She managed to get in a practice round at the West Side Tennis Club at Forest Hills with Mrs. Hawk. No score was taken and the players merely volleyed. The Hot Spell fatigued Miss Bouman greatly. It was even more oppressive to her than to her American opponent, since she just left Holland where the weather was not so hot.

And now, with her calm and easy-going style of tennis, the girl who plays "just for fun" will attempt to make her trip a success by taking back to Holland an American tennis crown.

HAKOAH OFFICERS RESIGN.

Jewish Club May Disband Because of Financial Crisis.

VIENNA, July 29 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—A serious crisis has developed in the Vienna Sport Club Hakoah. The entire board, including the President, Dr. J. H. Koerner, has resigned.

The crisis is due to the heavy indebtedness of the club and the difficulties with which the board has had to contend in securing the further existence of the organization. The failure of the last issue of the Hakoah in the United States has precipitated the crisis.

A general meeting of the club had been called in order to attempt a reorganization.

The Vienna Jewish pride stirs expression to its regret that Hakoah may be forced to discontinue its activities, pointing out that through its many victories Hakoah has enhanced Jewish prestige and was a great factor in rejuvenating the Jewish race.

Rochester Defeats Syracuse.

AUBURN, N. Y., July 29 (AP).—Rochester's International League team defeated the Syracuse Stars of the same circuit, 13 to 10, here today before 5,000 fans. The game, an exhibition tilt, was served limelight on account of rain.

RADIO SHOW HERE PLANNED AS BIGGEST

OPENS SEPT. 18 FOR WEEK

Completed Receivers to Be Shown—Makers Plan Standard Sizes for Interchangeable Sets.

A record-breaking radio show was predicted yesterday by Clayton Irwin, manager of the Radio World's Fair, which will be held the week of Sept. 18 in Madison Square Garden.

"More than 99 per cent. of the exhibition booths, in which manufacturers will display their new radio receivers and accessories, have already been contracted for, and the show is still seven weeks away," said Mr. Clayton. "We will have many more features this year for the entertainment of the guests. Probably the most interesting will be the 'theatre of wonders,' in which several leading experimental laboratories of the country will exhibit and demonstrate many pieces of apparatus that are used by investigators in their never-ending researches in pure science.

"About 70 per cent. of the space allotted to exhibitors in the Garden will be used by the manufacturers of completed receivers. The balance will be utilized by the manufacturers of radio accessories.

"An outstanding development this year is an agreement between several manufacturers of sets and cabinets in regard to certain standard sizes. This departure will make it possible for radio dealers to stock a minimum number of the different receivers and consoles, and at a moment's notice combine the set with the cabinet to suit the individual taste of the purchaser. Such a move toward definitesized sets and cabinets, which is almost a necessity today, is probably an outgrowth of the standards movement started in the industry by the Radio Manufacturers' Association."

Mr. Clayton explained that the radio trade show held in Chicago in June enabled the dealers and manufacturers to ascertain, by actual contact with prospective purchasers, the type of sets that will be in demand during the coming Fall and Winter.

"Alternating current operation," he said, "through the use of radio tubes designed for such power, or alternating current operation through the utilization of power packs to replace the conventional batteries, will be largely the choice this season if the preference of many thousands of visitors to the Chicago show can be relied upon as a criterion."

Franklin Ford, manager of WHAP, said yesterday that their transmitter would be established in its new location outside the city by Oct. 1. The site which has not been definitely decided upon, cannot be indicated at the present time, he said.

PENSIONED TEACHERS TO GET THEIR CHECKS

Retirement Board Row Over New Secretary Will Not Delay Pay for 2,500, Prial Says.

Payment of their pension checks to the 2,500 retired city public school teachers will not be deferred because of the controversy between the teacher members and the other members of the Teachers' Retirement Board over the election of Irving Crane as its secretary. This was made clear yesterday by Deputy Controller F. J. Prial, one of the nonteacher members of the board.

Teacher members of the board hold that Mr. Crane was not legally elected to his office on July 8. On July 21 they obtained an injunction from Justice Mahoney restraining Mr. Crane from acting as secretary or drawing salary, but the final order of the injunction is yet to be signed by the Justice. Mr. Prial said he understood from the teachers' attorney that this final order would permit Mr. Crane temporarily to maintain his status as acting secretary, but that he would hold the position without pay.

"The city is going to appeal the decision of Justice Mahoney to a higher court," said Mr. Prial, "but if this final order, to be announced by the Justice in the next few days, reads as counsel for the teachers says it will read, then this office will promptly pay the teachers their pensions. The reason is that the checks have to be signed by the board's secretary before they can be issued."

Mr. Crane said he would have no statement until the Court made known the final order of the injunction. He remains on the job, however.

BOYS WIN SCHOLARSHIPS.

Two Sons of Policemen Get Prizes of Holy Name Society.

The university and high school scholarships granted annually by the Holy Name Society to the children of members of the Police Department between the rank of second grade detective and sergeant, inclusive, were announced yesterday.

In the competitive examinations, just finished, John J. Hayes Jr., whose father is a sergeant at the East Thirty-fifth Street Station, ranked highest and won a four-year scholarship to Fordham University. The society has already paid the $600 tuition. Young Hayes has just finished his preparatory education at Regis High School, Eighty-fourth Street and Madison Avenue. He lives with his family at 258 East 142d Street, the Bronx.

The preparatory school scholarship was won by Francis X. Tiffany of 154 West 101st Street, whose father, Thomas J. T. Tiffany, is a sergeant of Traffic D. The scholarship valued at $800, calls for four years at St. Francis Xavier High School. The boy recently finished his elementary course at the Holy Name Parochial School.

SEE STEPS TO PEACE IN PACIFIC SESSIONS

MUTUAL PROBLEMS AIRED

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HONOLULU, July 29.—A better understanding of individual and mutual problems of the nations with a view to maintaining permanent peace in the Pacific area was put forth as the aim of the Institute of Pacific Relations at its final forum session last night.

President Ray Lyman Wilbur of Leland Stanford Jr. University, speaking for the institute, Sir Frederick Whyte for the British group, Dr. Yusuke Tsurumi for the Japanese and William Hung of Peking University for the Chinese all agreed that the establishing of friendly contacts here was a great step forward in progress in the Pacific. They declared that mutual problems were now more understandable and that aid and cooperation could be expected from each other in the future.

Dr. Wilbur, summing up the work of the past two weeks and the possibilities of the future, said that the new trend of thought was leading to a better mutual understanding of relative needs in the Pacific. He declared that the "International machinery" was inadequate and that the great problem was to establish contacts that would bring the peoples to a realization of their common necessities.

Defines Purpose of Institute.

"The world is so interdependent now that all must recognize that no such thing as absolute liberty exists," Dr. Wilbur said. "Mutuality in associations and recognition of each others' needs is essential. The world needs volunteers in this work, which is the true purpose of this institute."

Specific points advanced by Dr. Wilbur included realization by the world that a new China was arising and that the nations have common interests in China. He expressed a sense of confidence in the outcome of the present development for China.

The problem of overpopulation in Japan had been brought to the fore, he noted, but he was convinced that emigration was not the solution, hence Japan would need the help of all to solve her national difficulties. There was a realization that one delicate problem exists in Manchuria, with Russia, China and Japan involved; hence this needed consideration.

The members of the conference, he believed, were awake to the power of public opinion and to the fact that the public must be acquainted with facts on world problems.

Sir Frederick Whyte, for the British delegates, declared that the institute was a great success in accomplishing the purpose of defining world problems so that an ultimate solution would be nearer. Sir Frederick also warmly praised the Shotwell "Pacific Locarno" treaty plan and said that the Washington four-power compact should be extended into a great permanent agreement. He also spoke of the work done by the League of Nations.

Chinese Expresses Optimism.

Dr. Hung, speaking for China, declared that the Chinese were overjoyed at the chance to bring the attention of the world to their country and the situation therein. He was optimistic as to the outcome for China if it had the understanding and aid of other nations.

Dr. Tsurumi for Japan asserted that his nation was becoming internationally minded. He said the Japanese greatly appreciated the sympathetic view taken by the other delegations for their country's problems.

A resolution was adopted by the whole body thanking the Honolulu hosts and the officials of the institute for making the sessions a great success.

In a statement issued following the round table discussions, the members declared for cooperation with the press henceforth as a vital factor in the scope of the conference work. The statement urged the advisability of securing the attendance of more business men and labor leaders. The promotion of research into Pacific problems, particularly those related to the maintaining of peace and the solution of economic issues, was to be encouraged, it declared.

Institute Is Organized Permanently.

The institute today adopted a permanent constitution for the organization and elected officers for two years. Dr. Wilbur was re-elected as Chairman. The Japanese division will choose the First Vice Chairman and the Chinese the Second Vice Chairman.

The next meeting, it was announced, is expected to be held in the Orient, probably in Tokio or Shanghai.

The constitution states the object of the institute as to "study the conditions of the Pacific peoples with the view to improvement of their mutual relations."

Staff members re-elected include Manton Davis as Secretary. The new constitution was signed by F. W. Eggleston for Australia, Sir Frederick Whyte for Great Britain, Mr. Currie for Canada, David Z. T. Yui for China, Viscount Ishii for Japan, Mr. Nash for New Zealand and Dr. Wilbur for the United States.

Governor Farrington of Hawaii, in a farewell speech, pointed to the success in Hawaii of the Americanization of different races and said the harmony between the races here was an example of what was possible in the world at large. He cited the prosperity of Hawaii and also the great advances made by other Pacific countries in commerce and industry.

DOG SAVES 7 FROM FIRE.

Ignores Commands to Stop Barking as Bayonne House Burns.

Special to The New York Times.

BAYONNE, N. J., July 29.—Nellie, a small house dog owned by Joseph Freedman of 215 Prospect Avenue, probably saved the lives of the seven members of the Freedman family this morning by ignoring commands to cease barking.

Mrs. Freedman got up to see what ailed the dog, and found smoke curling under a closet door in an adjoining room. She called Mr. Freedman, and together they got their five children out of the house and turned in a fire alarm. The firemen quickly extinguished the blaze.

'NANTUCKET FOLLIES' RECALL WHALING DAYS

NANTUCKET, Mass., July 29.—Authors, actors and artists participated with old-time whaling captains and sailors who have pursued Moby Dick through the seven seas in Austin Strong's presentation of "Nantucket Follies" at the Nantucket Yacht Club's new theatre this evening. A feature of the show, in which the author of "Seventh Heaven" and other Broadway hits contrasted the present times with those of whaling days, was the enacting of scenes by Nantucket persons who had notably lived them.

"Dog Watch," one of a series of living scenes from old-time Nantucket and one of the most thrilling numbers, was on the quarterdeck of the whaler St. Nicholas. The quarterdeck was a veritable reproduction, to the last rope strand of that once well-known ship. Captain B. Whitford Joy, who commanded the vessel tonight, is the sole surviving square-rigger captain in this port. He formerly was master of the famous whaler Samuel D. Carleton, of the Rickard Parsons and of the St. Nicholas, all of which, after trips around the Cape and into far seas, brought in cargoes of sperm oil.

The mate, George A. Grant, born in Apia, Samoa, and taken aboard his father's whaling ship, sailed in the Niger and many other round-the-world ships in quest of whale. Benjamin F. Williams, the cook in tonight's production, 85 years old, and dancer of this St. Nicholas crew, sailed as a youth in the whaler Milton. The "Bosun," William Appleby Robinson, and his mate, John S. Cross, also have been whalers.

The "Dog Watch" act depicted life aboard the whaler, from sighting of a whale to the harpooning, all with typical cries, songs and chanteys. Other acts, with authentic settings from Old Nantucket time, included "The Sailor's Farewell," "The Captain's Walk," "The Mast," "The Cradle" and "The Captain's Return."

All of these acts were originated and staged by Mr. Strong.

Samuel Merwin, author, and a group of the Concord Players, presented as a typical Follies number an original act, "Pinafore'n'at." The cast included Mrs. Ralph E. Hewitt as Buttercup, George F. Root as Ralph Rackstraw, Mason Garfield as the captain, Mrs. Seabury T. Short as Josephine Ralph E. Hewitt as Dick Deadeye, and Mr. Merwin as Sir Joseph Porter, K. C. B.

Other features were a talk by Robert Benchley, writer; "One-Handed Marionette," by Toney Sarg, and the one hundredth presentation of Mr. Strong's pantomine, "The Man About Town," in which he was assisted by Theodore E. Steinway, Henry Clapp Smith and Henry Bennett, all of New York.

Percy MacKaye, the poet, who is spending the Summer here, read a quatrain on Nantucket, which he had written by request.

GIVE CHAUSSON SYMPHONY.

Philharmonic Musicians Perform Work of Cesar Franck's Pupil.

Ernest Chausson's Symphony in B flat major was the outstanding work at the Philharmonic Orchestra's Stadium concert last night in a program that included excerpts from Charles Sanford Skilton's "Primeval" suite, performed for the first time at these concerts; Bizet's overture to "La Patrie," and the Bacchanale and finale to the "Tannhäuser" overture in Mr. Stock's own arrangement.

The Chausson symphony remains today, after thirty years, a monument to one of the outstanding pupils of César Franck as well as to the period of French music in which it was composed. It is a work of poetic beauty, deeply emotional and eloquent. The performance was in every way satisfactory—sensitive, dramatic and full of vitality.

The Skilton suite draws its inspiration from tribal themes of the Winnebago, Rogue River and Sioux Indians. Four of its six numbers were played last night. The themes are said to have been kept unchanged by the composer, but their harmonic garb seemed often to have taken away much of their native character and color, especially in the first and third sections.

Mr. Stock brought all his ripe experience and authority to the "Tannhäuser" music, which was played with fine effect. There were two encores, the familiar "Liebestraum" of Liszt and the "Blue Danube Waltz" of Johann Strauss.

MAE MURRAY RETURNS.

Miss Mae Murray, film actress, who in private life is Princess Mdvini, returned yesterday on the Cunarder Aquitania from a five months' pleasure trip abroad during which she visited the principal cities of Europe and also Egypt and the Holy Land.

When asked about her plans the actress said that she had nothing definite at present except that she was going immediately to California.

"I have bought the most wonderful book for a screen play," she said. "but I do not wish to talk about it until I have seen my manager. When I went abroad I left instructions that I was not to be worried about business for five months."

She said the Prince accompanied her as far as Cherbourg and then went on to Paris to attend to some business matters for her. "He will follow me to New York in four weeks," the film star said. She wore a white costume with hat to match and a feather boa round her neck. She posed for pictures on the deck of the ship and also on the pier.

LATIN OPERA FOR VIENNA.

VIENNA, July 30 (AP).—An opera in Latin is to be produced at the State Opera here next year. It is "Oedipus the King," by Igor Stravinsky.

Stravinsky long had contemplated writing an opera with words in a dead language. He decided that Greek was too dead, and finally selected Latin as the language which is the most exact, appearing in the phraseology of law, medicine and other sciences.

Orchard Beach Campers Win Again.

The application of James A. Tobin of City Island for an injunction to bar campers from Orchard Beach, Pelham Bay Park, was denied yesterday by Justice Gibbs of the Bronx Supreme Court. This is the third decision to be handed down in connection with the litigation, but Mr. Tobin announced yesterday that he would seek a permanent injunction.

DENY SENOR LATOUR PLANNED SUICIDE

FOUND IN LEGATION STUDY

Envoy Is Expected to Recover—Was Sued by the Former Husband of Wife.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Senor Francisco Sanchez Latour, Guatemalan Minister to the United States, who was erroneously reported early this morning as having killed himself, is at the Emergency Hospital with a bullet hole in his chest, sustained when he shot himself at the legation. Señora Latour, who is an American; Delfino Sanchez Latour, the Minister's brother and Acting Guatemalan Consul General at New York, and Ralph H. Chase of Chevy Chase, Md., a nephew of Señora Latour, declare the shooting was accidental and occurred while Señor Latour was examining an old revolver.

He was reported out of danger today, the bullet having missed the heart and lungs and made a clean wound with no internal bleeding.

Reports that the act might have been a deliberate one were denied when Mr. Chase declared the Minister, finding it too warm to sleep last night, began going through some personal files in his study and picked up the old pistol. While he was inspecting the weapon, which he had not seen for about a year, it was discharged, according to Mr. Chase. Señora Latour heard the shot and rushed into the study where she found her husband unconscious on the floor.

Mr. Chase added that the Minister had no domestic or financial worries and that there was nothing of a political character in Guatemala to disturb him. Captain Taddeus Bean and Sergeant Guy Burlingame of the Third Precinct stated there appeared to be no grounds for a police investigation.

Brother Issues Statement.

"Why did you come?"

Delfino Latour issued the following statement:

"My brother was wounded accidentally by a broken pistol which he believed unserviceable. The unfounded suspicion advanced in the morning papers that my brother in any way attempted suicide is so obviously a distortion of fact that it needs no further comment.

"The doctors assure us that, fortunately, the bullet did not pierce any vital organ and unless unforeseen complications arise there is small probability of it proving fatal.

"My brother, I am told, has rested comfortably since last night and at no time lost consciousness. This morning he was apparently regaining strength. At present I find no great cause for uneasiness regarding his speedy recovery.

"My brother and I spoke of personal matters, which, aside from a discussion of the accident, concerns no one."

Señor Latour has been Minister from Guatemala since May 23, 1922, but had represented his country here for some time previously as Attaché and Chargé d'Affaires. He first came to the United States in 1908 as Secretary of a special mission from Guatemala.

Last December James Armstrong, former husband of Señora Latour, filed a suit against the Minister to obtain letters alleged to have been written by Señor Latour to Mrs. Armstrong in 1909. According to the suit, Mrs. Armstrong divorced her first husband in 1918 and married Señor Latour. Mr. Armstrong said that charges of libel previously preferred against him by Señor Latour had been nol prossed in February, 1919. Some months after the suit over the alleged letters was filed the case was dismissed.

Many Latin-American diplomats and officials of the Pan American Union called at the hospital today. Secretary Kellogg, in a personal message to Señor Latour, said:

"I was very much grieved this morning to hear of the accident which befell you last night, but I am now more than pleased to learn that it was not serious and that your condition indicates a speedy recovery.

Grieved by Crumpacker Suicide.

WASHINGTON, July 29 (AP).—The recent suicide in California of Representative M. E. Crumpacker of Oregon, who was a friend of the Guatemalan Minister, Sanchez Latour, was believed by some friends to have depressed him. Señora Latour said today that the suicide had grieved her husband, "but I cannot believe it suggested suicide to him." On the contrary, she said, "he could not understand how Mr. Crumpacker could commit suicide, leaving behind a wife and children."

REIBURN CLEARED IN COURT.

Magistrate Dismisses Larceny Charge Against Ex-State Senator.

Michael E. Reiburn, a lawyer and former State Senator with an office at 1,440 Broadway, was exonerated of a grand larceny charge yesterday be Magistrate George W. Simpson in the Tombs Court. Reiburn was arrested on June 21 on complaint of Alexander Graham, a jewelry salesman of East Orange, N. J., that Reiburn had obtained from him two diamond bracelets, worth $5,000, to sell.

Graham told the magistrate that soon after he made the charge the bracelets were returned. In dismissing the charge the magistrate said there was no ground for criminal action, and added:

"With Senator Reiburn's high standing, I have not the slightest idea that the jewelry was taken with felonious intent."

TWO BATHERS ARE DROWNED

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 29.—Alice Hess, 18 years old, was drowned this afternoon in the Tuckahoe River, Belle Plain, while her mother and little brother were unable to aid her. Their screams were heard by several persons in an automobile, who recovered the body.

With her mother, Mrs. Walter Hess, and her seven-year-old brother, Melvin, Miss Hess went to Belle Plain to bathe. She was unable to swim. She got beyond her depth and disappeared.

FINDS CHURCH RANKS ARE LOSING HEAVILY

Statistician Estimates Decline of 500,000 Yearly in Protestant Membership.

WORLD WAR IS BLAMED

Thirteen Faiths to Unite in Seeking Remedy—Presbyterians Show Biggest Loss of 50,000.

The losses to church memberships of the larger Protestant communions during 1926 were "appalling," according to the report submitted by the Continuation Committee to the Interchurch Conference and made public yesterday by Dr. Henry K. Carroll of Plainfield, N. J., church statistician, who is secretary of the committee. All the churches suffering losses are expected to unite in preventive measures, Dr. Carroll made his study following a meeting of the statisticians of the different communions on April 19 at Presbyterian headquarters in Philadelphia.

"In thirteen communions," says Dr. Carroll, "with a grand total of 15,160,170 members, the losses aggregate 268,065. As the total of evangelical membership is upward of 29,000,000, the total yearly loss, if other communions besides the thirteen were included, would approximate about half a million. The pruning of church membership rolls is not new to the churches which keep them; it has always been done, periodically or occasionally, but never on such a scale as in the past few years.

Two Main Causes Cited.

"Two causes are chiefly responsible for the sudden and alarming increase: migration between States and communities and failure in church attendance and church obligations.

"Probably all will admit that the World War with its profound political, social and industrial disturbances, has had a disastrous effect upon the Christian Church, well-nigh overwhelming Christian civilization, with its appeal to brutal instincts, its lowering of moral tone, and its benumbing influence upon the spiritual life of Christianity. To this must be added the deadening character of the materialistic movement of the age, which has brought influence, neglect and disregard of religious obligation to the very altars of the Church.

"While the Church coffers have not seemed to suffer dimunition, they have nevertheless given forth an unholy sound of the careless dropping of gold and silver as though material offerings could make up for the diminishing sense of spiritual gifts."

The report discusses in some detail the loss by denominations, saying:

"Beginning with the Congregational churches, which body has a separate list of absent members since 1863, the Rev. Frederick L. Fagley, Secretary of the Commission of Evangelism, estimates that the losses from a list reaching 100,000, averages 30,000 yearly.

"The Methodist Episcopal Church, according to its statistician, the Rev. Dr. Oliver S. Baketel, editor of The Methodist Year Book, shows that from 1915 to 1926, the total of non-resident inactive members reached 406,000 in round figures.

Presbyterians Lose 300,000 in 6 Years.

"The Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., the oldest and largest of the Presbyterian branches, reports a loss of 300,000 members in the last six years.

"Curtis B. Haley, statistician for the Methodist Episcopal Church South, reported that the net gain of this communion, which has 2,900,000 members, was only 4,190 in 1926.

"The Rev. Dr. Charles A. Walker, editor of The American Baptist Year Book and statistician of the Northern Baptist Convention, writes that the losses of the latter body are 'appalling.'

"The Rev. Dr. G. L. Kieffer, statistician of the United Lutheran Church and of all the American Lutherans, finds that the annual losses between 1919 and 1924 average 9,264.

"The Protestant Episcopal Church, according to Mr. Frederick C. Morehouse, editor of The Living Church Annual, suffers an annual loss of 23,000, which he says is a minimum figure.

"The Reformed Church in the United States, formerly German, according to the Rev. J. Rauch Stein, stated clerk, lost by erasures in the last triennium term, 36,000—an annual average of 11,000.

"For the Reformed Church in America, formerly Dutch, the Rev. Dr. John A. Ingram, secretary of the Progress Council, states that the annual loss by dismissal was 3,416 in 1926, in a total membership of upward of 145,000.

"The Church of the United Brethren in Christ, according to the Rev. Dr. S. S. Hough, executive secretary, has been receiving in the past four years 26,000 annually, of whom 15,000 passed out of the 'back door' marked as 'removed without letter' or 'irregularly withdrawn.'

The report points to the "discovery that members are straying from the flock while church and pastor are busy with matters of far less moment" and that "the wanderers are increasing at an alarming rate." It declares that "this must seem a grievous thing demanding immediate attention from those still of the fold."

Mr. Tuttle told Judge Anderson that the defendants, while pleading guilty, claimed that Paragraph 3 of Section 500 of the Internal Revenue act of 1926, under which they and the Alexanders were indicted, was unconstitutional. He said that claim would be determined by the Alexanders' appeal, and if the conviction of the Alexanders were reversed the twenty-three others indicted would have the right to withdraw their pleas of guilty.

Will Punish Violations.

He said that, in the event of a violation of the stipulation, he would move for immediate sentence and ask for imprisonment as well as a fine. To retain jurisdiction and make sentence possible at any time Judge Anderson, at Mr. Tuttle's request, extended the present term of court for eighteen months and granted Mr. Tuttle the privilege of moving for a longer extension if need be.

The stipulation, read in court by Mr. Tuttle, declares:

"1. Where tickets can be obtained from the place of amusement at not more than the box office price the defendants will sell the same at not more than 50 cents advance, plus 2½ cents, representing the 5 per cent. tax.

"2. Where tickets cannot be obtained from the place of amusement at not more than the box office price they will report to the United States Attorney the name of the place of amusement, manager, box office man or other employe who is exacting an excess charge, whether the same be termed a concession charge, bonus, commission or gratuity, or be designated by any other name. They will also report the amount of such exaction. In such case, and until the withdrawal of such exaction, they will sell any such ticket at not more than 50 cents in excess of its actual cost to them plus tax; and in each case will deliver to the purchaser a written memorandum showing the amount of such exaction and the manner in which the price to the purchaser is calculated. The premium, if any, paid by any agency or agent to a seller other than the place of amusement will not be included in the price charged to the purchaser.

"3. The defendants will keep books and records as provided in the regulations adopted pursuant to the Internal Revenue act of 1926, and will not destroy any such books or records save as provided in such regulations.

To Deposit Taxes Since June 1.

"4. Pending final determination in the Alexander case, the defendants will pay into a bank or trust company to be designated by the United States Attorney the full amount of the 50 per cent. tax imposed by said Section 500A, Paragraph 2, of the Internal Revenue act, upon tickets sold since June 1, 1927. The said payment is to be in escrow. If the said tax is ultimately adjudged unconstitutional in the Alexander case the sum is to be returned to the paying defendants. Otherwise it is to be paid over to the Government. As to taxes accruing prior to June 1, 1927, the defendants will immediately take up with Mr. Hugh McQuillan, Chief of the Intelligence Unit of the Internal Revenue Department, the settlement and mode of payment thereof. Mr. McQuillan tells me that the amount of these arrears for the fourteen months is at least $637,000.

"5. Within the next two weeks the defendants will pay into the registry of the court the sums set opposite their respective names in a schedule which I hand to the Court and make part of the record to be held for the purpose of application to any fines which may ultimately be imposed upon the payers respectively. If, however, conviction in the Alexander case is reversed, the defendants may withdraw the said sums. The amounts of these sums are not to be deemed to be limitations upon any fines or other sentence which the court may impose.

"If the defendants faithfully observe the foregoing stipulations, I am willing to take such observance into favorable consideration, in the event the conviction in the Alexander case is affirmed and thereupon the defendants move for a suspension of such prison sentence in the present case as the Court may then impose, or move to be pieced upon probation under prison sentence. In such case also I would think it right to request the Court also to give favorable consideration to such observance by the defendants of the foregoing stipulations.

"I sincerely trust that these arrangements, which are intended to provide the public with security against further gouging and also to assure to the United States Government proper payment of its taxes, will commend itself to the Court.

"If they do meet with the approval of the Court, then it will be my purpose to write to each of the theatrical managers setting forth what has been done here, and asking that, in the interest of the public, they see to it that such tickets as they may sell to these agencies they sell strictly at box office prices and terminate any other exactions, whether by themselves or by their box office men, and whether such exactions be termed concession charges, commissions, bonuses, gratuities or otherwise.

"In view of the fact that the agencies now stand securely committed to a principle of not advancing 50 cents over cost, the responsibility for any greater charge by them to the public than 50 cents over the box office price must rest solely upon the manager who makes such additional exaction or permits any one of his agents or employes to do so. In such case, I shall feel it my duty by every penalty which the law provides to enforce the 50 per cent. tax upon any such additional exaction.

"In all this, there is nothing hostile to any plan which certain managers are formulating for a central agency. Such agency is not yet in operation, and until it may come into operation there seems to be no reason why the managers should not sell their tickets at box office prices to such agencies as they may deal with.

"I shall also write to all the principal clubs, asking their cooperation and requesting them to see to it that their members do not in any event pay more than the slight advance of 50 cents, and that the plan in vogue in certain clubs of receiving commissions from the agencies either for the club itself or some of its employes be discontinued."

Judge Anderson told Mr. Tuttle he agreed most heartily with all his suggestions and the stipulation. He referred to the latter as a "capable, valuable and constructive piece of work." Before he left for Lake George, N. Y., yesterday afternoon, Mr. Tuttle wrote to several of the city's leading clubs, the names of which he did not make public, and also to theatre managers asking their cooperation in the manner outlined.

Samuel Berger, of counsel for the twenty-three indicted agencies, said they had all tried to aid Mr. Tuttle's investigation. He explained a part of the stipulation as follows:

"A theatre ticket, the box-office price of which is $3.30, will be sold by these agencies to the public at an advance of only 50 cents above $3.30, plus 2½ cents tax, total $3.83½. If, however, a box-office man or other individual connected with the theatre exacts a gratuity, bonus or commission of, say, 25 cents, then the 50 per cent. tax law becomes operative and the customer is stung to the tune of 60 cents more than if the box-office man had not exacted the '25 cents' charge, without a cent extra profit to the broker who, in either case, makes a profit of 50 cents gross."

Shubert Method Explained.

At a brief hearing in Mr. Tuttle's ticket investigation before United States Commissioner Cotter yesterday, Ira Helstein, treasurer of the Shubert Theatre Corporation, testified that for the fiscal year ended June, 1926, about $55,000 had been paid by ticket agencies to the Shubert box offices in the form of concessions. He said the corporation expected the box-office men to turn over 50 per cent. of their bonuses from agencies and that they had paid over about $12,000. These bonuses, he said, had started in October, 1926, and had continued until the present time. Earlier payments were in the form of concessions.

Mr. Helstein said about 50 per cent. of the orchestra seats in the Shubert Theatre Corporation's theatres were sold to ticket brokers.

The only other witness was Arthur Hammerstein, producer, who said that a central theatre ticket agency was the only solution to the gouging problem. The next hearing in Mr. Tuttle's investigation will not be held until a date in September yet to be selected.

NAVIES AND PURSE-STRINGS.

Whether an agreement is finally reached at Geneva or not, it is evident that all of the naval Powers involved in the conference will come out of it with a program for building more ships. Whatever the alleged basis of it—be it parity, supremacy, security or capacity—the way will be open to add more ships to all the navies. But will freedom to build mean resolve to build? The world used to ask the question, "Who will pay the bills of socialism?" Today the more pressing question is, "Who will pay the bills of militarism?" With the budgets of all nations, particularly the leading naval Powers, strained to the utmost to provide the funds needful for paying interest on war debts and carrying on the Government, it is not to be supposed that swollen naval appropriations will be enacted without good reason.

On this point the British Chancellor of the Exchequer made some sensible and significant remarks a couple of weeks ago at the Lord Mayor's banquet in London. Discussing the general question of the economic outlook, and of Government revenue and expenditures, Mr. CHURCHILL was at pains to point out that public finance in England had not yet recovered from the effects of the coal strike last year. This upset all his budget plans. He had to resort to temporary and questionable makeshifts, such as raiding the road fund and compelling the payment of certain taxes in advance, in order to make his budget balance at all. But, as he explained at the time, those expedients were at an end. He could not make use of them again. The argument for prudence and economy in all Government outlays was becoming stronger and more imperative every day.

Passing directly to the question of military expenditures, he declared that there are two ways in which national armaments can be kept within reasonable limits. One is by international agreement, the other is by each nation remaining free to determine its own needs but "making only a very moderate use of its freedom." Mr. CHURCHILL said that he was still very hopeful of a useful measure of agreement at Geneva. But if that could not be attained, there would be compensations. He thought they could be found in a sort of common-sense behavior by all concerned, if "the difficulty of regulating the minor classes of vessels by international agreement proves insurmountable at the present time."

> None of the three great naval Powers ought to be discouraged; still less ought they to allow themselves to be disquieted. It may well be that the best we can do will be to proceed step by step and from year to year, each Power building the smallest program of minor vessels compatible with its needs. Such a lack of agreement, accompanied by a slow rate of building, would certainly be preferable to a complete agreement which bound the three great naval Powers for a long period of years to build feverishly up to the highest standards just because they were fixed by treaty.

Similar considerations would obviously be of special weight with the Government of the United States. Under Mr. COOLIDGE'S persistent direction, it has preached and sought to practice national economy. Even if there is a failure at Geneva, there is no reason for abandoning or even seriously weakening that policy. We will still retain the power of the purse. The people are yet to be heard from before the Administration need embark upon an ambitious scheme to build up naval strength to a point not dreamed of a year ago. Naturally, we shall consult our own interests and endeavor to supply our own needs. But these will be carefully and closely studied. No mad and hasty plunge into unlimited building of cruisers and other auxiliaries need be looked for, provided the Government keeps cool and Congress is not stampeded. No one, either at Geneva or anywhere else, will limit our right to build as many warships as we please. But once assured that we have freedom there is no occasion to abuse it. We are at liberty to contract for twenty-five cruisers of 10,000 tons, if that is our mind. But such a course would be so foolishly expensive that the biggest Big-Navy enthusiasts cannot expect it to be followed.

"POLITICALLY MINDED MEN."

Some time after the visit of the future EDWARD VII to this country, EDWARD EVERETT HALE wrote a story called, if we remember, "Did She Dance With the Heir Apparent?" The Boston she in question was sure she didn't. A young woman of high musical ideals, she was emphatic that "the blood royal never asked for Strauss." We may be equally positive that Mr. COOLIDGE never asked former Governor MCKELVIE of Nebraska, editor of a farm paper, to rebuke FRANK LOWDEN. It is true that Mr. MCKELVIE had been admitted to the presence. He had "discussed" the farm problem with Mr. COOLIDGE. That is, he had monologued on it. He had "outlined" his speech to Secretary SANDERS, a gentleman who is suspected of having a problem of his own; so that the "outlines" of other people's problems may sometimes be blurred a little in his mind.

Mr. MCKELVIE must have spoken for himself; and he did it beautifully, deliciously. For example:

> At a conference of political farmers recently, the Hon. FRANK O. LOWDEN showed quite clearly how far afield most politically minded men go when they begin prescribing for the "relief" of the farmers.

Mr. MCKELVIE relieved himself; and his suave compliment to Mr. LOWDEN and the statesmen of the St. Paul Conference will be registered where every day they turn the leaf to read it. His distinction between Codlin and Short ought to become a classic. All McNary-Haugenites are political farmers, politically minded. Mr. COOLIDGE and all true Coolidgians insulate farm relief from politics. They put it in a non-partisan vacuum and contemplate it dispassionately as economically minded men should. For the purposes of this "problem," they are disinterested scientific inquirers, not politicians. This is good to know. On a day like yesterday it soothed the temper and contributed to weather relief.

In the McKelvian philosophy, outside of the theory of non-political farm relief, there is nothing startling, nothing definite. The American farmer "is the most efficient "in the world, but only half as efficient as industry, measured in "horse power." By cooperation we thrive. Count your happy farm-marketing associations. "What the "farmer wants, and all he wants, "is such assistance and encouragement as the Government can give "him to help himself. This the Government stands ready to do." Some farm papers have been telling the farmers this for a long time. Yet a lot of them are dissatisfied with these vague, if improving, observations. They "want" a particular plan of farm relief. They likewise appear to "want" the too politically minded Mr. LOWDEN.

The Sioux City Journal ghoulishly chuckles that the Iowa delegation is "all sewed up" for LOWDEN. These exasperations may be mollified. Nature may "go Republican." There are prognostications and signs of it. Still, Mr. MCKELVIE and other Republican men of science ought to take notice that at present there is practically no demand in the Northwest for parsnip-butter. "Trust not for freedom to the Franks!" cries our Nebraskan in effect to the farmers. Mr. COOLIDGE is capable of sending up a trial balloon, but he never would send up a bombing plane.

BUS FRANCHISES AT LAST.

Mayor WALKER has given new point to the adage that nothing succeeds like success. Fresh from his victory in the settlement of the subway strike, he brought the Board of Estimate to his way of thinking on a number of issues of outstanding public importance, notably buses. It cannot be said that this particular controversy was settled wholly on its merits. When the Mayor told Mr. BYRNE of Brooklyn, as he is alleged to have done, that the city was demanding action he conveniently ignored the protests of those newspapers and public bodies which had argued that to dispose of buses ahead of subways was putting the cart before the horse. Buses should be regarded as auxiliaries to other transit facilities rather than as competitors. This principle is now recognized in the Bronx, but repudiated in Brooklyn. It is plain that political considerations counted heavily, and Mr. UNTERMYER'S castigations of the B. M. T. during the transit hearing may have contributed to Mr. BYRNE'S change of mind. He denies that the Mayor's support of the $450,000,000 subway program for Brooklyn had anything to do with it.

The Transit Commission has yet to pass on the franchises. Operation of buses on the scale proposed, if approved by that body, will be in the nature of an experiment. The franchises are for short terms. No vast outlay is required. The Equitable Company has assumed a heavy responsibility to the public. If its buses plying the streets of New York give real service, theoretical objections to its entry into the New York transit situation will soon be forgotten. One of the strong objections to the original plan has already been met. For the present, at least, the longitudinal routes in Manhattan have been left out. This was in response to the fear that they would only add to the present congestion in the midtown area.

For a midsummer session, Thursday's meeting of the Board of Estimate set a notable record. The climax of the long bus controversy was only one of its spectacular features. The adoption of the subway building program for Brooklyn was a recognition of that borough's genuine needs. That so many Brooklyn civic bodies were able at last to reach a unanimous agreement with the city authorities on the details of the program is an achievement that Manhattan must envy. The Mayor also saw his housing plan advanced. Before it becomes effective, however, it must be approved by the voters, in accordance with the Home Rule act. By no means of least significance was the action of the board looking toward the purchase of new park sites in Queens and Richmond. Appropriation of a few million dollars for parks is dwarfed by the hundreds of millions spent on subways, but it is something, and advocates of parks will be grateful for these crumbs from the rich city's table.

POLITICS AND POSTMASTERS.

The Chairman of the Federal Civil Service Commission believes that the heart of the Postmaster General is pure. Mr. DEMING, speaking in Mr. NEW'S home State, remarked that if he were to wake up some morning and find that through a manifestation of magic or Divine Providence all postmasters had been classified under the civil service law, he "would be as happy as "when he learned that LINDBERGH "had arrived in Paris." Maybe so, but somehow we don't quite picture the Postmaster General in transports of just that kind of joy.

Nearly every President for twenty years has advocated classifying all the postmasters. "In accordance "with the views expressed by the "President in his annual message to "Congress," writes Mr. NEW, making it perfectly clear to his old friends in the Senate just who is responsible for his fall from grace, "the department favors the enactment into law of this measure." So have other Postmaster Generals before him, but somehow, somewhere, their recommendations get pigeonholed. The "Presidential postmasters" remain amphibians, neither wholly in the waters of patronage nor wholly on the dry land of the merit system—a most unstable and vulnerable breed. Mr. DEMING would lead them out on terra firma.

He would also like to see the four-year term abolished. And why not? Why should we limit a postmaster's term to four years any more than we should limit an engineer's term, or a traffic manager's, or that of any ordinary business executive? The postoffice is, or should be, a business enterprise. Why carry over into it the taboos and traditions of politics? Mr. DEMING discloses that after the commission has turned over to the department the names of three eligibles, the department consults the Congressman whose district is affected. It is known in advance that this will be done, and frequently a favorite who has rendered faithful service to the party is groomed for the job in the hope that he will be rated among the highest three. In that event he is practically sure to be selected. "This "custom is common to both parties, "and is not, under present conditions, illegal." But it plainly tends to demoralize the service. So long as politics rules appointments, the department can hardly hope to reach the standard of efficiency which the public has a right to demand.

RUSSIA QUARRELS ABOUT CHINA.

Comrade STALIN'S twelve-column blast against a world that has "eaten the bread of wickedness and "drunk the wine of violence," and is therefore thwarting Soviet reform everywhere, is obviously meant for home consumption. In a new form he has again conjured up the picture of the innocent fatherland threatened with extinction by rapacious neighbors. England is plotting to use the armies and navies of the world to invade peaceful Russia. England induced CHANG TSO-LIN to raid the Soviet Embassy in Peking. English spies are everywhere, and English gold is pouring forth a steady stream of corruption. The only cheerful sign on the horizon is the prospect of war between England and America, America and Japan, Italy and France and France and England. The line-up is distinctly interesting, as it implies that England, Japan and Italy will have to fight France and the United States.

More interesting than these fulminations is STALIN'S analysis of the Russian campaign in China, its methods, its failure, and its future. Although for long Russia indignantly denied any complicity in the Chinese situation, and insisted that if Russians were active there they must be members of the Third International, STALIN is now at pains to show that LENIN had outlined three stages to be worked for in fomenting the Chinese revolution, and that his directions had been scrupulously carried out.

In the first stage the Soviets were to use any and all Chinese, even including the bourgeois—who might further Russia's interest. This was done. In the second stage, which would be characterized, by the inevitable desertion of the bourgeois, the Russians should work for mass action. This they were doing when the Chinese (although STALIN does not confess it) came to their senses. The third stage was to be characterized by the choice of the psychological moment in which to proclaim the actual or "Bolshevik" revolution, in which the workers and peasants would establish their Soviets and the revolution would be an accomplished fact. This moment, he insists, has not arrived. It is necessary to permit the "traitorous" groups to kill each other off.

It is difficult to see just where the Chinese profit in this genial process of destruction. Had we not been so often assured that Russia's actions were wholly disinterested, and that Russia was striving to help China save herself from the hands of the rapacious imperialist powers, we might be inclined to conclude that she was more concerned about Russia than China. But since the wickedness of the world is concentrated outside Russia, it is to be presumed that her motives were of the purest.

The cynical may regard STALIN'S explanation that the time has not yet come to inaugurate the "real" revolution in China as a somewhat lame attempt to excuse the failure of the Russian campaign in China. If it means more than this, it is a warning to the world that Russia has not yet given up her hopes of fomenting strife in the unhappy Celestial Empire, and that her withdrawal from the field of active participation is only temporary. This is bad news for all who believe in China's right to determine her own future without interference from foreign nations.

THE SUMMER VIGIL.

"In any republic worthy of the name," said President GARFIELD, at the opening of the seventh annual session of the Williamstown Institute of Politics, "its citizens must be eternally vigilant." The institute, through the discussions conducted by men gathered from many countries and in the presence of an intelligent local audience, supplemented by a reading public that is daily kept aware of what is being said, prevents somnolence on the part of many citizens during several weeks of every Summer. One wonders now at the provincialism of even a quarter of a century ago, when few went abroad and when those who stayed at home gave no thought to what was happening beyond their own domestic political and social horizons. Whatever wakefulness there may have been during the sessions of Congress and the Winter seasons of lectures and debates, when international matters sometimes made their appeal, the Summer was generally a period of molluscan torpor, broken only by the speakers at Chautauqua assemblies. Even the universities and colleges, where current world affairs were beginning to receive some attention in term time, lapsed into complete dormancy.

The "institutes of politics," of which the Williamstown Institute (now an "institution") is the pioneer, is one type of the Summer school which is now keeping the minds of hundreds of thousands active in the Summer weeks and preventing their snail-like Summer sleep. So, too, the reports of addresses and interviews by President BUTLER and other Americans visiting in foreign capitals stir the silences with information that may lead to expression and action. But these institutes are now perennial and have become so because they are rendering an essential service in a democracy that is coming into world responsibilities.

These organizations do not pass resolutions or urge action upon Congresses and Legislatures. They are merely "fact-finding" and "truth-seeking" conferences which become informative, and so formative of enlightened public opinion. It is a slow process, as President GARFIELD confesses, but an essential one. This has never been more impressively stated than by Mr. ROOT in urging the people to acquaint themselves with international as well as municipal and national problems, since it is their attitude that is ultimately to determine what our relations with other peoples are to be. It is a great obligation that we have incurred by the very reason of our strength, and such institutions as that at Williamstown, which remembers Lord BRYCE as once its leader, are performing a high patriotic service not only in keeping our minds alert to the questions which arise but also in helping to develop an informed opinion.

The Summer vigil of such groups of people as now gather in the halls, classrooms and dormitories of Williams College in the weeks of the long vacation is so valuable in its contribution to what is purchased only by eternal vigilance that it is already coming to be felt that "Summer's leave has all too short a date" and that such fact-finding and truth-seeking conferences and discussions should extend through the year. The proposed Johns Hopkins School of International Relations is but such an extension of the Summer vigil that President GARFIELD instituted.

OUR MINISTER TO THE FREE STATE.

Wednesday was a momentous day in Irish-American relations, marking the presentation to President COSGRAVE by Mr. FREDERICK A. STERLING of his credentials as the first American Minister ever accredited to the Irish Free State. Thus not only was the honor done the United States by the appointment of Mr. SMIDDY as Irish Minister in Washington reciprocated, but direct ties were established between the two nations which so long have owed so much to each other. Millions of Americans number among their ancestors one or more children of Erin. However remote the association, it carries with it a touch of affectionate warmth and a feeling of kinship for the Irish people which has ever constituted one of the principal bonds between the United States and Ireland.

This traditional friendship is part of Mr. STERLING'S heritage. It will stand him in good stead in these early days of his residence in Dublin, for his arrival coincides with a period when political passions are momentarily tempestuous. The heaviest squall has blown over and the sun is again peeping through the clouds, but storm warnings are still displayed. To the credit of the Irish Government, it has made plain its determination to tolerate no further outrages such as the recent assassination of Vice President O'HIGGINS. In fact, it was reported that one reason why such a large body of troops was called out to take part in the reception of the American Minister was to show the people how well equipped the Government now is to maintain order. Spectators commented on the fine appearance of the troops and on their excellent discipline.

Fortunately for Mr. STERLING, not only does his official position preclude his intermixing in Irish politics, but he is free from ties of family relationship which might be played upon to interest him in affairs which are not his concern. The President and Secretary of State were wise in refusing to accede to the demands of some of the professional Irish-American groups who wanted one of their number appointed Minister. It is the virtue of Irish loyalty to clan and party that their enthusiasm for their friends makes them work for them even in this country. But this very virtue would be a defect in the official representative of the American Government, whose duty is first, and last, to serve the American people.

It so happens that the best way in which Mr. STERLING can serve the United States in Ireland is by cultivating the friendship and good-will of the Irish rulers. There are between the two peoples no outstanding quarrels or ancient grudges. It is to the interest of the United States to see the Irish Free State prosperous and peaceful. Inasmuch as this is the interest of all Irishmen except those few fanatics who would wreck the Government in order to wreak private vengeance, it may be said that for the moment, at least, Ireland's well-being is the concern of the American Minister. The warmth of the reception accorded him by the Irish people indicates that they recognize in him a true friend.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

West Point and Automobiles.

Since Sunday, July 17, automobilists have been allowed to enter the West Point reservation by permit only. Signs on the main highway both north and south have been posted, which read, "Traffic through West Point suspended." This military order naturally caused excitement in Highland Falls and adjoining communities, where meetings of protest have been held and resolutions adopted.

A permit to build a new road to the west and high above the present road had been given by the Federal Government to the New York Commissioner of Public Works. But before work could be begun upon it the plan was definitely disapproved by the Acting Superintendent of West Point. Automobilists feel, therefore, that they have been forced to make a wide detour, and are proposing to appeal to the courts and give the whole question "a national aspect."

In fairness, the reasons given by the Military Academy and by the General Staff of the army for their decision to bar automobilists out of West Point ought to be stated. There is no desire to prevent the public from seeing and knowing West Point. Nor is there any wish to keep the cadets from meeting their friends. But there has been congestion on the reservation as a result of using it too often and on too large a scale as a picnic ground. It was believed by the authorities that this interfered with the legitimate privacy of the cadets and with their own facilities for recreation.

If these are the two sides of the whole case, it would seem that a way of adjustment might easily be found. Loitering and picnicking might be forbidden, while tourists, until the new road is built, might be permitted to pass quietly through the grounds.

Now It Is "the Movie Irishman."

popular pastime among Irishmen used to be the concerted attack on their caricature on the stage. What glorious get-together meetings they used to have! After vehement discussion of how they were wronged by that false creature, with his carrot top, his incredible brogue, his drinking and swearing and wife-beating, they wrote letters to the papers, the theatres and the comedians and then felt better.

Now that they are deprived of that amusement, they are turning to the movies for similar complaints. Two pictures recently screened are described by members of Irish organizations favored with a private showing as vulgar and vicious. One they found "revolting to the religious beliefs of the Irish people, and the characters are socially and morally depraved." The other is an "abominable caricature."

In the conference of the indignant spectators it was agreed that no amount of revision of the pictures would alter their verdict. With uncompromising fidelity to their ideals, they "conceded" that unless the pictures were withdrawn "the Irish people will take the law in their own hands, regardless of the consequences, and create such a riot" that it will be a lesson to picture producers in the future.

There is so much natural fun in the Irish that it is not surprising to find searchers after comedy using them in plays and movies. But it is a pity that they take their own magnificent humor so solemnly.

Something in a Name.

Concerning the suggestion of admirers that Mont Blanc be named Monte Mussolini, there is this to be said: It won't be binding on any but Italians. The Swiss and the French can continue to call their slopes Mont Blanc or Mont Poincaré or anything they choose, and the Austrians can name their slope Berg Strauss. The adjacent hotel keepers will refer to it according to the nationality of the guest, but the neighboring mountaineers will probably continue to say Mont Blanc as before.

That is the way with mountains. You can name them for geographies but not for their neighborhoods. Sheep Mountain out in South Dakota, which is now officially Mount Coolidge, is still undoubtedly Sheep Mountain to those who were born to know it as that, and on another slope it probably is known as Old Fuzzy or Old Baldy or Old Cow-Tail. MOHAMMED went to the mountain for reasons much like the above, and O'ANNUNZIO took the name of Monte Nivrose instead of trying to change the hill's name to Monte Gabriele.

A city or a building is easier to play with. Leningrad is getting pretty well established; so is Oslo. If Il Duce ever decides to change the name of the great church to San Benito, he may get away with that. But when his admirers trifle with the name of Mont Blanc they won't make any impression beyond the Italian geographies.

Little Reading and Less Writing.

America enjoys a surfeit of stories about men who have won recognition by educating themselves to fill high positions. England goes us one better by bringing forward a man who is ranked as one of London's leading theatrical managers and producers without the bother of being educated or educating himself. He can neither read nor write and he considers all education, with the possible exception of arithmetic, as quite useless in the theatrical business. "It's just a question of using your brains."

On the subject of manuscripts, he said: "Authors read them to me. If all managers had plays read to them by the authors there would be fewer failures." Undoubtedly there would be also fewer productions. How many managers, busy as they are, could find time to listen for several hours to any author reading any play? We suspect that the illiterate manager must engage others to weed out the worst of the plays submitted.

American theatregoers would also be inclined to doubt the reality of a 100 per cent. illiterate theatrical manager. They have sat through too many hoaxes like "The Spider" to swallow, without a pinch of salt, any prodigious play or person in the theatre. But whether or not he can read or write, it is certain that a man who can make $150,000 in the theatre has a good eye for figures or an eye for good figures.

Hammock for Children's Shelter.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Children's Shelter of Manhattan, Inc., 220 West 113th Street, has the care of little ones whose mothers are in hospitals.

We need a couch hammock, faded or worn, to be put on our roof garden. A reader of THE TIMES, who will send us one, will be helping us to keep our children cool and happy.

REFLECTIONS.

We grub for the Truth—it is not in the ground;
We look in the skies, but it cannot be found.
We are like those who fish for the moon in the pond!
It is there! There it glistens! 'Tis ever beyond!
'Tis not at the bottom, nor yet at the top.
Though we drain out the pond to the uttermost drop!
Yet the water reflects the moon's pallid face,

Continued Rate War Is Seen as Means to Beneficial End.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The idea of a taxi Locarno is entirely at variance with the American doctrine of competition and the theory of economics known as supply and demand.

During the past few years New York has witnessed a phenomenal growth in taxicab traffic. Most cabs are not owned outright, but are purchased on time payments. The purchasers of these cabs usually have worked in a larger company before buying their own cars. They knew of prevailing conditions and accepted them. Consequently, if sufficient revenue is not realized it cannot be said that the drivers-owners were not aware of the reasons therefor.

It is far better for the public that a rate war is in progress. Eventually the non-efficient individuals and companies will be frozen out.

The taxi business resembles surface-car and subway lines in its relation to the public welfare of the city. As such, it should not be in the hands of reckless, irresponsible individuals. Only too often are taxi owners and drivers former or incipient criminals who still retain all their ignobie and dangerous traits.

Strict police supervision has to some extent lessened the dangers to the public from these questionable characters. But the task is tremendous and the cost to the city very great.

How much simpler were there several large companies to operate their own cabs. Efficiency would be assured. Dangers to the public would be greatly decreased, for no company will employ a questionable character or reckless driver. There would be no incentive for long hours or recklessly fast driving. The operators would gain nothing thereby but dismissal. Cabs would be given thorough, systematic inspections and prompt repairs. Police work would be lessened in that there need be no special investigation and registration for the chauffeurs. The companies would look into that phase.

Lastly, the public would benefit in that road congestion would be much less, walking and driving would be safer, service would be better; there would be uniform rates, greater safety in transit and better all-around police protection due to the liberating of desk and clerical men for patrol duty.

HEAT FOR AIRPLANE WINGS.

Exhaust Gases Are Said to Be Better Than Electrical Current.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In letter of H. O. DuBois of July 2 in regard to heating of wings of airplanes, it seems to me that the use of electricity for that purpose would not only add weight but would use considerable engine power to generate the necessary electrical current, whereas using the engine exhaust would add no weight, would use no engine power, but on the contrary, as the exhaust gases would expand in a partial vacuum caused by the very large radiating surface (at least 500 square feet) of the wings, the resistance of the atmosphere to the expansion of the gases would be removed and it might reduce the noise of the exhaust.

In regard to Mr. DuBois's criticism of soft fields, I attended an airplane meet some years ago—previous to 1912—at Loch Arbor, N. J., where the planes started on a single rail or track made of wood, and it seems to me that starting tracks should be part of the equipment of all flying fields, as by so doing the danger to heavily loaded planes in taking off would be very much reduced.

The plane could be placed on a car or cradle, which could be started by compressed air or other device when the plane was ready to go, and by assisting its start it would only have to taxi a short distance, on the principle that it might take a 100-horse-power motor to start a loaded elevator, but after starting a 10-horse-power motor would continue it in operation. Warships are compelled to start planes from their decks by an assisting device, such as a catapult, owing to limited space available.

"Fine Writing" in the Newspapers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is delightful to note that THE TIMES appreciates "fine writing" in its news dispatches and permits it.

Being an old-time newspaper man, who broke into daily journalism more than a generation ago on the strength of being able to deliver copy which did not need the attention of the copy reader, I note with the greatest pleasure the improvement now apparent in newspaper writing.

We expect good writing in editorials, and in papers like THE TIMES we seldom are disappointed. The prevalence of fine writing in all sections of the paper persuades the critical reader that it results from editorial policy. Manifestly the blue pencil is not so drastically used now as formerly it was. Manifestly better writers are selected and given the privilege of making their "stuff" readable.

I happen not to be a sport or a theatrical fan, but I read the leading articles of those departments with relish because they are so well written. The dispatches from abroad are linguistic delights—some of them.

This more or less recent habit of the big newspapers to allow good writers to write well in their reports and summaries is one of the significant developments in the application of the printed word to the great task of convincing the human animal that he has a mission on earth and that that mission is immediately concerned with getting acquainted with his fellows.

The Late Dr. A. A. Hamerschlag.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The death of Dr. Arthur A. Hamerschlag, a few days ago, removed from the community an outstanding educator and engineer. His more recent attainments as President of the Carnegie Institute of Technology and as President of the Research Corporation of New York are widely known. Although one of his ability would have attained prominence and success in any line of endeavor, the road toward technical and engineering work was early given to him at the Hebrew Technical Institute, which he attended from 1886 to 1890, graduating from the electrical course in 1890. Based upon his early training at the institute, his later education and subsequent work may be said to have developed logically and to have made him the prominent figure that he was in various lines of the engineering field.

WHEN IS A FIGHT "BOXING"?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

John W. Desbecker, in his letter to THE TIMES, is confronted with the necessity of referring to the Dempsey-Sharkey fiasco as "boxing." He says: "Boxing can be described accurately with no more compunctions about the squeamishness of the audience than one would have in relating the progress of a stubbornly fought football game with its familiar 'Time out for Jones. He has been knocked out and is just coming to.'"

The weakness of this argument is that the exhibitions under the aegis of the Boxing Commission are not boxing at all. Moreover, the knock-out of Jones in the football game is an incidental accident, whereas the K. O. of the prize ring is the sole objective.

What Dempsey and Sharkey indulged in was no more boxing than a struggle for mastery between two enraged bulls. The danger of this sort of savagery is the brutalizing influence which it exerts. When young boys and girls see this sort of thing depicted in the neighborhood movies and when they realize that each participant has received hundreds of thousands of dollars for the exhibition, it is apparent that the effect can be no other than demoralizing.

The fact that many reputable people attend these exhibitions and pay an amount which would give an unfortunate city child a two weeks' vacation in the country adds nothing to the decency of the "sport."

We have a law, Section 1710 of the Penal Laws, which in letter and spirit prohibits a ring or prize fight or a public or private sparring exhibition where an admission fee is charged; but, of course, in this material age, where we have gotten back to the Roman practice of "bread and games" for the rabble, and the rabble votes, anything goes, if not in strict accordance with the law, then by legal legerdemain.

A Suggestion.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In a letter to THE TIMES John W. Desbecker complains because the coarser details of the Dempsey-Sharkey fight were kept off the radio. Personally, I should think that the whole performance was sufficiently disgusting to be kept out of both sight and hearing.

It appears that two men punched each other until one fainted and had an intestinal hemorrhage. What is particularly interesting about that?

Why not bring some lions into the arena and let them chew up a few champions? I should think that would be a much more exciting spectacle, and much more desirable. A fight is not nearly so bloody as that would be.

Fights and Funds.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The White Plains clergyman who deplores the fact that 80,000 persons paid to witness the Dempsey-Sharkey bout but doubts if they gave to the Flood Relief Fund does not delve very deeply into human nature. Doesn't he know that these 80,000 would contribute liberally to the relief fund if the need could be made as graphic as was the bout? We read daily of frightful catastrophes and we become more or less immune to suffering, but let a case arise within our immediate ken and there is no delay in loosening our purse-strings.

He continues: "And if true womanhood means gentleness, are those women who were present worthy of respect as true women?" I am sure they are worthy, and, furthermore, it is quite within reason to believe that they came away from this spectacle with a better understanding of human nature. If the good clergyman would peer a little deeper into the motives of the 80,000 he would detect a tremendous power for good, and incidentally acquire more tolerance.

Battles for Religion.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A clergyman in a letter to THE TIMES referring to the Dempsey-Sharkey bout asks: "Was it a spectacle for Christianity or Judaism to be proud of?" I would answer No; it was never intended so to be.

An exhibition boxing match is a sporting event designed to test the physical powers and mental and muscular agility of the contestants. It is quite free from ill-will, and, barring accident, no permanent injury is done to either artist. The fights that religion has been proud enough of to chronicle were real fights to the death. I beg leave to quote I Kings, xviii, 40:

"And Elijah said unto them, Take the prophets of Baal, let not one of them escape. And they took them and Elijah brought them down to the brook of Kishon and slew them there."

A LAYMAN.

A New Parking Nuisance.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It seems a new sort of garage has been installed in the streets of New York. One cannot park his car unless he assigns the duty of watching it to a boy or a man. Although one locks the car, puts on the brakes, turns on the lights and does everything possible to make the car comfortable, still, before one leaves a boy or man hustles up with an "All right, boss, just leave it to me. I'll watch it for you."

I carry insurance for theft and fire, and when I lock my car with a good substantial key why should I worry about any one stealing it? A garage charges 5¢ for parking and these hold-ups charge 25 cents. Sometimes I park for half an hour; sometimes for an hour; according to my day's business. There are days when I park my car at eight or nine different places, and you can figure for yourself what that amounts to in a week.

It is a shame that such young children are permitted to indulge in such an illegitimate business, but what can one do? If you don't pay, you come back to a punctured tire, or broken glass.

FOG DELAYS THE AQUITANIA.

Cunarder Reports Suicide of Passenger on Last Trip East.

The Cunarder Aquitania arrived yesterday from Southampton and Cherbourg with 1,000 passengers and mails. She was delayed six hours through having to reduce speed because of fog encountered between Sable Island and the Ambrose Channel Light Vessel.

Officers of the ship reported that on July 12, on the last eastward voyage, Marco Valacco, a ranchman from California, who was a passenger in the second cabin, jumped overboard and was drowned.

The ship was stopped and a boat lowered after the alarm was given, but no trace of the man could be seen. After 45 minutes the liner resumed her course.

ARMENIAN GIRL DETAINED.

Immigrant Cannot Give Address of Father in Los Angeles.

Siranouch Davidian, a 16-year-old Armenian girl, who arrived last Wednesday on the French liner France, is being detained at Ellis Island by immigration officials pending location of her father, Elbach Davidian of California. The girl told the immigration inspectors on the ship that her destination was Los Angeles, but as she had only $15 in her possession they had to send her to the island.

She did not have her father's address in Los Angeles, and so far the Federal authorities have not been able to get in touch with him. An Armenian, Michael Davidian, who went to Ellis Island Thursday afternoon to seek his wife and daughter, was questioned by the officials if he was a relative of Elbach Davidian, but he said he never had heard of him.

MRS. PULITZER DIES IN FRANCE AT 74

AIDED RED CROSS IN WAR

Helped Young Artists to Win Careers—Gave Much to Charity —Did Much Entertaining.

PARIS, July 29.—Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, widow of the former editor and publisher of The New York World, died at her home, Villa Romaine, in Deauville, late this afternoon, after an illness of only three days. Her age was 74.

Her youngest son, Herbert Pulitzer, was at the beside when the end came.

Up to a few days ago Mrs. Pulitzer apparently had been in good health. She had been seen frequently, enjoying the social life of the Normandy resort and receiving friends at her villa. Her illness began with a cold and complications developed.

Plans for the ceremonies are as yet undecided. The body will be taken to New York on the Mauretania, which will sail on Aug. 6.

Mrs. Pulitzer married Joseph Pulitzer on June 19, 1878, in Washington. She was the former Kate Davis, daughter of Judge William Worthington Davis and the former Catherine Louise Worthington, and a second cousin of Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederate States during the Civil War.

She spent much of her time in Europe during the later years of her life, as her health necessitated the taking of frequent French and German cures. While abroad she made her home at Cap Martin, Deauville, or at the Chateau de la Garoupe, near Nice, one of the show places of the Riviera. At the last named place she had a private bathing beach and a flower garden of more than an acre.

Mrs. Pulitzer had helped many young artists and musicians to start on their careers. Her collection of Flemish lace is in the Metropolitan Museum. She supported many charities and helped the Red Cross to raise large sums during the World War. Moreover, she turned over her home at 7 East Seventy-third Street for use as a Red Cross workshop.

Mrs. Pulitzer was born in Georgetown, D. C., in 1853. She is reported to have been a typical Southern belle in her youth, and throughout her life she was noted for her charm and her hospitality.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Pulitzer went to St. Louis, where they shared the difficult early years of the founding of The St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Five years later they came to New York, Mr. Pulitzer having purchased The World.

Mrs. Pulitzer entertained much at Bar Harbor, Me., where she spent many of her Summers, as well as in New York.

She was a member of St. Thomas's Church.

Mrs. Pulitzer was the mother of seven children. Five are now living. Ralph, the editor of The World; Joseph, the editor of The St. Louis Post-Dispatch; Mrs. Edith Moore, wife of William Scoville Moore; Mrs. Constance Ellsalie, wife of William Gray Ellsalie, and Herbert Pulitzer, who is associated with The World and The Evening World. Lucille, the second child, died in 1897 and Katherine, the third, died in 1894.

Mrs. Pulitzer will be buried in the family plot in Woodlawn Cemetery.

CAROL IS NOT RESIGNED TO AN INACTIVE LIFE

PARIS, July 29.—Prince Carol of Rumania continues to pass the days quietly in his villa at Neuilly. But it is not believed that he has resigned himself to a life of inactivity and given up definitely all hope of playing a rôle in the affairs of his country, of which he would have been King today had he not renounced his rights to the throne last year.

Those who know the Prince best have never taken at their full value the stories that he quit because of sentimental reasons. They have always contended that he left Bucharest for reasons which were more political in origin than otherwise. Also those who know him say that Prince Carol expected then that his father, King Ferdinand, would live for many years and that there might evolve changes in Rumania before the succession became open.

There is no doubt that, despite official declarations from Rumania, Prince Carol has a good number of partisans in his country, not only in the army and in politics, but among the peasants, who form 60 per cent. of the population, and who, it is said, do not entirely understand why their Crown Prince was not made King.

It is not thought that Prince Carol has formulated any definite plans. Perhaps he does not regard the present situation as apt for that course, but there can be no doubt that he has not banished from his mind all thoughts of returning to Rumania some of these days, and, naturally, when he does go it may be impossible, even if it were his wish, to go back as a completely private citizen. Furthermore, he is still mourning the death of his father.

COW'S STOMACH AIDS PROGRESS OF SCIENCE

'Window' Has Been Cut in Penn State College Animal, Which Gets No Vitamin B.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., July 29 (AP).—Jessie, the famous Pennsylvania State College cow that has been robbed of her gastronomic privacy through a door to the largest of her several stomachs as a contribution to science and human welfare, was the centre of attraction for the group of vitamin and nutrition specialists attending the final session today of the Institute of Chemistry of the American Chemical Society.

A little incubator in Jessie's stomach has been found to give evidence of one of the most important vitamin and nutritional discoveries of the times. She was found to have ability in this incubator to manufacture in wholesale lots the highly valuable vitamin B.

Jessie has never been given any feed that contained vitamin B. It has been kept from her mother before her, and she has a calf of her own, the third generation to be deprived of this valuable material.

But Jessie's milk, as well as that of her mother, contained vitamin B, and Dr. H. I. Mechdel of the Penn State Dairy Department, had a window cut into Jessie's second stomach, or rumen. Samples of the stored and partly digested food were taken out, analyzed by Professor H. C. Knutzen of the college bacteriology department and found to be literally alive with vitamin B bacteria.

Professor R. Adams Butcher and Dr. Anna Honeywell of the college biochemistry department, fed some of Jessie's ration to one group of rats and some of the bacterial culture from Jessie's stomach to another group. The rats receiving the vitaminless feed withered away; those fed the samples from the cow's stomach grew large and fat. So far as known, the cow is the only animal that has ability to thrive on feed lacking in the necessary vitamin, a discovery made here little more than a year ago by Dr. Mechdel.

Jessie is as lively and contented as before she had a doorway cut into her stomach, showing no visible effects of lack of the material.

BENJAMIN F. BUSH, RAIL EXECUTIVE, DIES

BEGAN CAREER AS RODMAN

He Was Once Head of Three Western Railroads—An Authority on Coal Problems.

ST. LOUIS, July 29 (AP).—Benjamin Franklin Bush, former President of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, died here early today. Death was due to cerebral arterio-sclerosis. Mr. Bush was 67 years old and had been in ill health for several months.

Mr. Bush was born at Wellsboro, Pa., on July 5, 1860, and began railroad work at 22 as a rodman on the Northern Pacific. He became a division engineer of that road and then took a similar post with the Union Pacific. He headed several associations of coal operators before he was elected President of the Western Maryland Railroad in 1907. He was considered an authority on coal problems.

He was elected President of the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain Railroad in 1911 by the Gould interests, whereupon Kuhn, Loeb & Co. withdrew their support. Two years later he was made President of the Denver & Rio Grande and also the Western Pacific. He found the direction of the latter two lines too great a task, however, and in 1915 he retired to devote his entire attention to the Missouri Pacific.

When the Missouri Pacific & Iron Mountain went into a receivership in 1915 Bush was named as sole receiver, a position he held until the lines went out of the receivership in June, 1917. At that time the name "Iron Mountain" was dropped, the entire system organized under the name of the Missouri Pacific, and Bush was elected President.

When the United States Government took over the railroads in 1918 Bush was named as regional director of the Southwest region. He held that position until the railroads were returned to corporate control in 1920.

In April, 1923, Bush was made Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Missouri Pacific and was succeeded by L. Warrington Baldwin in the office of President. After a year Bush retired from the chairmanship of the board, being succeeded by W. H. Williams of New York. After his retirement from active railroad work Bush entered the banking and farming business, but continued to be a member of the Missouri Pacific directorate. He took an active interest in public affairs here. He married Catherine Hawkins in 1888.

CLEVELAND, July 29 (AP).—Caesar Augustin Grasselli, 77, Chairman of the board of the Grasselli Chemical Company, died late last night at a hospital following an operation and an illness of less than two months.

CRIME IN BROOKLYN SHOCKS GRAND JURY

Presentment Arouses Judge—Calls Borough the Most Law-Abiding in Country.

91 INDICTMENTS RETURNED

The Kings County Grand Jury in a presentment handed up yesterday to County Judge Franklin Taylor decried the "prevalence of depravity" in the county, and declared that "degeneracy among human beings is almost unbelievable." This brought instant response from Judge Taylor, who expressed his opinion that Brooklyn was the "most law-abiding large community in the country."

The Grand Jury, the foreman of which was John Egan of 765 Carroll Street, heard evidence in 130 cases, thirty of which were dismissed, ninety-one resulted in indictments and nine were sent to the Court of Special Sessions.

"The continuous presentation of cases of assaults, robberies, thefts of automobiles, hold-ups, and a few atrocious murders was depressing, and the considerable number of assaults on very young girls was especially shocking," the Grand Jury said.

The presentment expressed gratification over the fact that a substantial appropriation had been made by the Board of Estimate for improving conditions at the Kings County Hospital. No action was taken by the Grand Jury to determine the cause of the hazing of Jewish internes at the hospital, for, the presentment said, the whole matter was now in the hands of Mayor Walker.

Danger in Overcrowding.

A report was made of a visit to the hospital, however, which said the conditions there were "deplorable" and in some of the wards "highly dangerous." Overcrowding in the wards of the old buildings was deplored, and note was made of the fact that the old Stewart Building is still without an elevator, and that the structure, which is "propped up by three flimsy braces," is a menace to the twenty-two patients which it accommodates. The Grand Jury said that it has been convinced by Dr. Mortimer B. Jones, the Superintendent, that another assistant superintendent was needed.

The Grand Jury praised the police, especially Inspector John J. Sullivan, Acting Captain George F. Bishop and Detectives Jordan and White, for their work in arresting Ludwig Halversen Lee, who was indicted in connection with the so-called cellar murders at 28 Prospect Place.

In receiving the presentment, Judge Taylor said:

"The Borough of Brooklyn, with the largest population in the greater city, has hardly more than one-third the indictments found in our sister Borough of Manhattan. I believe Brooklyn to be the most law-abiding large community in the country."

Sees Decrease in Crime.

"The extremely low criminal record of Brooklyn in the last few years is one of which we can well boast. Lately it has been helped further by a substantial increase in the Police Department and by a group of new crime laws providing more drastic punishment for burglary and robbery and abolishing parole on life sentences of hardened offenders.

"The manner in which the work has reacted on you must convince you of its effects on the Judges of the criminal courts who have to sit ten solid months a year in trial of felony cases. It is the most disagreeable work a Judge can be called on to do."

Judge Taylor pointed out that when he first went on the bench of the County Court 2,700 indictments were found in one year, but that within the last few years the number of indictments returned annually had dwindled to approximately 1,800.

"An up-to-date criminal calendar," he said, "is one of the most potent causes for decrease in crime. The underworld loses some of its fearlessness when it knows arrest means a speedy trial."

FINDS MORE CRIME IN WEST.

Surety Official Says Pittsburgh Is One of the "Cleanest" Cities.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 29.—Among the most crime-ridden cities in the United States, as reflected by the comparative premium rates on burglary insurance, are Los Angeles, Kansas City and Detroit, while Pittsburgh ranks as one of the "cleanest" cities, said R. A. Algire of New York, of the National Surety Company, at its convention today at the Ambassador. Mr. Algire is chief of the Department of Burglary Insurance.

Surety companies record about 52,000 robberies and burglaries in the United States each year, he said, but this represents only about 10 per cent. of the actual number, as most of the crimes are not covered by insurance.

"While the time is yet too short to pass judgment on the Baumes law as a final help toward crime reduction," he said, "it has been efficacious to an appreciable extent so far; but we must remember that crime is always one step ahead of agencies to prevent it."

McKENNA AIDE SENTENCED.

Nannery Gets 12½ to 25 Years for Part in Reid Hold-Up.

With the sentencing yesterday of James Nannery to twelve and a half to twenty-five years in Sing Sing by Judge Nott in General Sessions, the last member of the "Red" McKenna band of gunmen was disposed of.

Nannery, who is 22 years old, formerly kept a speakeasy in East Ninety-second Street, near First Avenue, the rendezvous of the gang. He had pleaded guilty to participation in the hold-up of the Reid Ice Cream Company's plant in West 145th Street on July 25, 1926, in which $6,000 in cash and $3,000 in checks were obtained after Michael (Red) McKenna had shot and mortally wounded Cecil Linderman, a driver.

Two of the gang were arrested when their automobile was wrecked at Third Avenue and 122d Street. McKenna was captured several weeks later. While a prisoner in the Tombs on Nov. 3 McKenna and two other gunmen shot and killed themselves when they failed to escape.

Nannery was named in the first degree murder indictment returned against McKenna and the others, but because of lack of sufficient evidence Judge Rosalsky quashed this. Nannery had a reputation as a killer, although the police had never been able to obtain sufficient evidence to convict him on three previous charges.

MORAN BACK FOR NEW TRIAL.

Slayer of Two Brooklyn Policemen Greeted by Other Prisoners.

Thomas (Red) Moran, youthful gang leader and confessed slayer of Patrolman Edward T. Byrns and Frank Daskiewiscz in Brooklyn, to whom the Court of Appeals recently granted a new trial, arrived at the City Prison in Brooklyn yesterday afternoon in custody of Deputy Sheriff James Shortell, who brought him from the death house at Sing Sing Prison.

Moran was placed in the cell he occupied while awaiting his first trial, which resulted in a conviction of murder in the first degree.

As Moran passed along the corridor on the way to his cell he was recognized by three or four youths who were prisoners there when Moran was waiting trial. "Hello, Red," the young prisoners cried. Moran replied to each with a slight nod. The keepers at the jail said Moran seemed to be much better physically than when he left the jail to go to Sing Sing.

BUMPER CROPS UP-STATE.

Wyoming County Alone Will Harvest 300,000 Bushels of Wheat.

PERRY, N. Y., July 29 (AP).—Within the next few days farmers in this section of the State will begin harvesting the largest Winter wheat crop in recent years. L. H. Woodward of Warsaw, Farm Bureau Manager, who has made a survey of the entire county of Wyoming says the yield will average in excess of 30 bushels to the acre, which is five bushels heavier than reported in Livingston County.

More than 10,000 acres of Winter wheat will be harvested in Wyoming County alone. The normal yield is twenty bushels to the acre.

There is so much hay that farmers are filling their barns to overflowing and stacking the surplus. The quality is unusually high and almost entirely free from weeds. Buyers are paying $12 a ton for the old crop, pressed, which nets the farmers about $7 after paying the hay presser and for delivery.

GASOLINE WAR ON UP-STATE

UTICA, N. Y., July 29 (AP).—Gasoline dropped to 16 cents a gallon at some independent filling stations here today, representing a 5 cent decrease in the last twenty-four hours.

The cut followed an announcement by the Standard Oil Company of New York that its filling station price would be 19 cents, a reduction of 2 cents.

The prevailing rate for Utica and surrounding towns for the last four months has been 21 cents.

Last week an independent company opened stations retailing at 18 cents. Other stations cut to 19 cents. Yesterday the independent station dropped to 17 cents.

PROVIDENCE HAS MILK RISE.

Retail Price There Mounts as Producers Ask 9 Cents a Quart.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 29 (AP).—Retail milk prices will be increased ½ cent here on Aug. 1, distributing companies announced today, as the result of notification by the New England Milk Producers' Association of an advance from 8½ to 9 cents in the wholesale price on that date. A similar increase was made here July 1.

MOOSUP, Conn., July 29 (AP).—Milk producers of Eastern Connecticut, who send 50,000 quarts daily to the Providence market, today were notified of a half-cent rise to 9 cents a quart, effective Aug. 1.

ATTORNEY RIDICULES OCEAN GROVE COURT

Fined for Illegal Bathing, He Hints That Justice Studies Law in Telephone Books.

SWEARING BECOMES ISSUE

Special to The New York Times.

OCEAN GROVE, N. J., July 29.—The roving eye of Patrolman Charles Brouwer, seeking violators of the many ordinances of the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Association, alighted last night on Raymond L. Sloat as the Newark attorney moved toward the beach.

Many times lately persons have tried to break the rules of the resort, where even motor cars are banned on Sunday, and to the mind of the patrolman Mr. Sloat was attempting a violation almost uheard of.

Apparently scornful of the eye of the law the lawyer was parading toward the surf with a pair of trousers over a bathing suit. There is an ordinance against any one donning bathing suits except in the bath houses provided by the association. Brouwer arrested Mr. Sloat and the attorney was arraigned today before Justice of the Peace Kenneth W. McWinney.

Mr. Sloat, who is the son of a Methodist minister, brought some law to bear on Mr. McWinney, who is not a lawyer.

"There is no proof here," he said, "that I did not don the bathing costume in a bathing house."

The Justice of the Peace cast a glance toward Patrolman Brouwer, who said that he had not discovered the actual place of donning the bathing suit. However, Mr. McWinney fined Sloat $10 and assessed costs at $4.25. Mr. Sloat was angered.

"I think I'll go and get some telephone books so you can study the law," he remarked to Justice McWinney.

"Now," he said, "I think you are a big saphead to stand there and talk like that. You know that there can be no contempt proceedings in my court, and that's the only reason you dare to say such things. What you ought to have is a book to teach you some of the elements of common courtesy."

Mr. Sloat smiled and said that he had been convicted before he came into court.

"There you go," said Mr. McWinney, complainingly, "casting more reflections on my court."

"I'd like to make a charge of disorderly conduct against this officer," said the lawyer. "He used profane language in making the arrest. He said he would 'knock my damned block off.'"

Mr. McWinney considered that one for a moment.

"'Damn' is not a swear word," he said, "and I am glad that we haven't any more of your kind around here."

The Rev. Dr. Melvin E. Snyder, Superintendent of the association, was standing by. Dr. Snyder is the chief protector of the traditions of the resort, the leading foe of automobiles and the determined champion of the right of Ocean Grove to go its quiet way, unmolested by the rest of the world.

"Does 'I'll knock your damned block off' constitute swearing in Ocean Grove?" said Mr. Sloat, turning to Dr. Snyder.

The clergyman's face flushed and he seemed disturbed.

"I don't know all the ordinances in Ocean Grove," he said.

Mr. Sloat later had the patrolman arrested on warrants alleging disorderly conduct and atrocious assault and battery. The lawyer said that he would appeal from the conviction and would bring civil actions against Patrolman Brouwer and the Camp Meeting Association.

Atlantic City Bather Arrested.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 29.—The police made today the first arrest in two years for violation of the ordinance which compels bathers to wear outer garments going to and from the surf. Mrs. Dorothy Harriff, 25 years old, of 10 South Delaware Avenue, was arrested at Delaware and Pacific Avenues by Patrolman Louis Berber. He said that she had refused to return home for a wrap to conceal her bathing suit. She was held in bail of $50.

COUNTS CASH THREE HOURS

Police Officer Tallies Two Bushels of Money Seized in Gambling Raid.

Police Lieutenant Joseph Goldstein of the West 135th Street Station regretted for three hours yesterday the responsibility that attaches to a desk job in the Police Department. He had to count two bushels of coins and $1 bills in a temperature of 87 degrees, and, since it belonged to two negro prisoners, he had to make certain his count was correct. The addition amounted to $1,210.91 for the coins and $1,386 for the $1 bills.

The money was seized by four detectives of Inspector Thomas Ryan's staff who raided Emma Jones's apartment on the second floor of 507 Lenox Avenue and arrested her and Samuel Grey, 24 years old, of 237 West 142d Street, who were charged with gambling in operating a "policy game"—a form of lottery conducted in Harlem, according to the police, so that every honest player loses. The police said they also found several hundred "policy" slips and some whisky in the apartment. The woman and the man will be arraigned today in the Washington Heights Court.

NIAGARA'S OLD TREE GOES.

200-Year-Old Oak Is Cut Down When Split by Lightning.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., July 29 (AP).—The "Lone Sentinel," reputed to be the most photographed tree in the world, is nothing but a memory today. The ancient oak, estimated to have been more than two hundred years old, was cut down because it was split by a lightning bolt on Tuesday night and was deemed a menace. The tree was about thirty feet from the brink of the falls at Prospect Point and it appeared in countless pictures of the cataract.

A map of Niagara Falls published by Laurie & Whittle, Fleet Street, London, England, in 1704, a copy of which hangs in the State Reservation Administration Building, shows a tree at the spot where the Lone Sentinel stood through the years and it is believed to have been the oak that was cut down today.

In its later years the Lone Sentinel was not a beautiful tree. It had been practically stripped of branches through the Winters when it was weighted down with ice.

NAVY HURTS LOBSTER CATCH

Cuttyhunk Men File Claims Against Destroyers at Target Practice.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., July 29 (AP).—Several Cuttyhunk lobster fishermen have been practically put out of business, they have informed Representative Charles L. Gifford, by the activities of a flotilla of United States destroyers at target practice a few miles east of Vineyard Sound lightship.

In their manoeuvring, the fishermen assert, the destroyers parted buoys from pots, chewed up lines and otherwise materially damaged the settings. The lobster season is at its height now and because the damaged buoys cannot be replaced before the Summer is over many of the fishermen have been almost forced out of business.

George O. King, one of the most seriously affected, has forwarded a bill for fifty-eight pots to the Navy Solicitor. Representative Gifford has written to Secretary Wilbur outlining the plight of the island fishermen and urging prompt payment of their claims.

'HOT DOG' MAN GIVES HIMSELF A DAY OFF

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., July 29.—Castas Hitalikides took a day off today from the strenuous labor of being chased by the Scarsdale police. Instead of the usual white cap and apron, "Joe" was clad in his best blue, and instead of driving the little automotive truck he walked the streets.

He did sally forth on business for a time. But as he dared not go to his old stand in front of the Scarsdale High School and as he would not go to an inferior neighborhood, he soon returned to put the car in the garage. In the afternoon he chatted with George Yayakos, who owns a small hand-propelled peanut stand.

Not even newspaper accounts of his difficulties could console him, for "Joe" neither reads nor writes English. Some one handed him a picture of himself under arrest and he laughed at that, but when a letter he was supposed to have written was shown to him he just wrinkled his brows and asked to have it read aloud.

Tomorrow, however, he will see if he can't find some place where parking is allowed and where the police will let him carry on the trade he has followed for thirteen years.

WOMAN HAS RIGHT OF WAY.

Denver Adopts This as Safety Maxim for Auto Drivers.

DENVER, Col., July 29 (AP).—Women drivers always have the right of way, the latest amendment to the city's courtesy traffic code provides.

R. F. Hershey, Manager of Safety, declared that if men would give women drivers the right of way whether they were entitled to it or not there would be fewer accidents and less disputes.

In announcing the code recently motorists were requested to "pray instead of pay," on the theory few drivers gave much thought to fines.

GIVES AUTOMATIC AIM TO TELESCOPE AT NIGHT

SCHENECTADY, July 29 (AP).—The General Electric Company and the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey have developed a device by which a telescope, at night, may be pointed directly at a signal light fifty miles away without the delay caused by the "cut-and-try" method. Although still in the experimental stage, the device has shown promising results.

The apparatus makes use of fused quartz, which has the property of transmitting light with a minimum of absorption and apparently causing light to bend around corners. Light from a shielded flashlight is transmitted to the tapered ends of two fused quartz rods, the ends of which are bent at right angles and placed parallel with the barrel of the telescope.

By bringing these two points of light into line with the distant signal, the observer draws the beacon into the limited field of the telescope.

TO RENAME PEAK MUSSOLINI

Mont Blanc, Highest in Alps, Is Selected for Honor to Premier.

ROME, July 29 (AP).—Mont Blanc, highest peak of the Alps, is to be renamed Mont Benito Mussolini in honor of the Fascist Premier.

This was announced today with plans for the inauguration on the mountain of the first of a series of Alpine camps for training thousands of youthful Black Shirts of the Fascist University.

The renaming of the mountain will take place Aug. 12, the day on which the camp will be dedicated by Augusto Turati, Secretary General of the Fascist Party.

HOW MORGAN RULES HIS BANKING HOUSE

DUTIES OF THE PARTNERS

Name of Firm to Be Dropped 15 Years After Lineal Kin Ceases to Be Member, He Says.

STETTINIUS ESTATE VALUED

Gross Is Put at $5,948,376—Life Income From Residuary Is Left to the Widow.

The control of J. P. Morgan over J. P. Morgan & Co. and the fact that the name is to be dropped fifteen years after a lineal descendant of Mr. Morgan bearing his name ceases to be a member of the firm were set forth in an appraisal filed yesterday by Deputy Tax Commissioner Stephenson of the estate of Edward R. Stettinius, member of the Morgan firm, fixing the value of his estate at $5,948,376 gross and $5,839,662 net.

Mr. Stettinius's interest in the Morgan firm was valued at $3,284,526. The other chief assets were securities appraised at $2,041,307, which included as the largest item 595 shares of the First National Bank, valued at $1,746,325.

The report contained the articles of partnership of J. P. Morgan & Co., with an affidavit by Mr. Morgan to show that the interest of Mr. Stettinius consisted only of his share of the profits and of his money deposited with the firm, and that neither Mr. Stettinius nor any other partner, including Mr. Morgan, had any interest in the good-will and that the value of the Morgan name is not taxable at the time of death or retirement of such partner because the good-will continues with the surviving partners of the firm.

Mr. Morgan made his affidavit in support of the assertion by the firm that it was difficult to fix the value of any partner's interest in the good-will of the firm because of the nature of the business done by J. P. Morgan & Co., for which reason the partnership agreements, which are renewed every three years, always provide for the retention of the good-will by the firm.

The Division of Profit.

The partnership agreement did not give the proportions of the profits payable to each partner, and for this reason the share payable to Mr. Stettinius was not disclosed, the State Tax Department having accepted the figures of the Morgan firm as to the sum due the Stettinius estate according to its books.

Mr. Morgan's affidavit said that Mr. Stettinius, who had been President of the Diamond Match Company for many years, was induced during the World War to become head of the export department of the Morgan firm, and that he had charge of the purchase of a great bulk of the British war supplies in this country. He was on salary before he became a partner, and upon joining the firm he contributed nothing to the business in the way of cash, said Mr. Morgan, and his interest was always a minority one because his partners could have caused his retirement at any time.

Mr. Morgan said that the firm is employed by customers "because of their confidence in the character, capacity for leadership, and the knowledge of financial affairs possessed by the individual members." Concerning the requirements of clients, Mr. Morgan said that they seek expert advice in regard to financial matters, "consolidations, reorganizations and new enterprises."

Mr. Morgan's affidavit also said that the partners were called upon to exercise their expert knowledge and judgment as to the marketability of securities and "they are also relied upon to employ their skill, judgment and experience in carrying out important transactions entrusted to the firm and in dealing with emergencies growing out of financial disturbances, war conditions and other contingencies."

"It is wholly impossible to say what part of the firm's business was so far independent of the personality of its members that it would have continued to come to the firm notwithstanding a change in membership," the affidavit continued. "It is certain that routine business bears no ascertainable relation to its entire business, and that the income derived from it constitutes no ascertainable proportion of the income of the entire business."

Morgan in Full Control.

The partnership agreement attached to the report provides that in case of any dispute between the partners the matter is to be referred to Mr. Morgan and his decision will be final. Any partner may withdraw on three months' notice, and upon the death or withdrawal of any partner Mr. Morgan is to determine the value of the assets of the firm and he also is to judge the amount due the withdrawing partner on account of capital, individual profits and credit balances.

The agreement provides that Mr. Morgan may at any time compel any partner to withdraw at once from the firm upon written notice to that effect. Upon the death of Mr. Morgan the good-will and the right to use the name of J. P. Morgan & Co. and Drexel & Co. go to the surviving partners, and if they are unable to agree as to terms the majority is to decide and also has power to determine the value of Mr. Morgan's interest.

The appraisal of the Stettinius estate shows that he owned real estate amounting to $433,780, which consisted of an equity of $209,513 in 1,021 Park Avenue, worth $310,000, and an equity of $224,266 in The Hedges at Locust Valley. He also had a sixth interest in the Cravath Property Syndicate at Locust Valley, his share being appraised at $35,845. He owned stocks worth $252,027, other than the First National Bank shares, the largest items being 653 shares of Texas Cotton Mills, $62,067, and fifty shares of Guaranty Trust, $94,250.

The deductions of the estate included funeral expenses of $106,735, debts $281,197, and commissions to executors $315,781. The debts included $40,000 for a mausoleum, $84,870 for Federal income taxes for the period of 1925 until his death on Sept. 3 of that year, and two quarterly instalments of $69,365 each for 1924.

Under his will Mrs. Judith Carrington Stettinius, the widow, received household effects, jewelry and other personal property worth $40,314; a cash legacy of $500,000, a life interest in the $455,780 of real estate, and the income from the residuary estate, $4,253,074. Upon her death the principal of these bequests goes to their children, Mrs. Isabel Marsh; Miss Elizabeth Settinius and Edward R. and William Carrington Stettinius. The will forgave an indebtedness of $5,000 due from General Hermonius of Paris and $750 owed by Harry B. Slaughter.

De Russey's Lane, Notorious In Hall Case, Now a Boulevard

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., July 29.—De Russey's Lane, which figured so prominently in the Hall-Mills murder case, has become Franklin Boulevard.

The character of the lane, once dark and quiet, has changed. It is now part of a real estate development and is lined with homes. Residents petitioned the Franklin township committee for a change in the name because of the notoriety attaching to it from the happenings there on the night of Sept. 14, 1922, when the Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills were murdered.

The lane is in Somerset County, but near the Middlesex County line.

TRUCK SINKS IN WATER AFTER LEAP OVER MEN

Novice Thrown Into East River and Driving Teacher Dives —Both Are Rescued.

Robert Lee, 19 years old, of 536 East 147th Street, the Bronx, spent two hours yesterday afternoon teaching John Hardland, 22 years old, of 484 Monroe Street, to drive a motor truck. Exterior Street from East Sixty-sixth to East Sixty-eighth Street was used for the experiment.

Shortly after 3 o'clock Lee became tired and ordered Hardland to drive the truck, the property of the Columbia University Book Store, 2,960 Broadway, east into Sixty-seventh Street, with the motor point toward the ten-inch stringpiece which runs along the East River there.

"Start her up again, and put the gear shift in reverse," ordered Lee of his pupil. Hardland did so, but he accidentally kicked the gear shift into first speed, and the truck started for the stringpiece, about ten feet away.

George Moran, 17 years old, of 330 West Thirty-seventh Street, and Charles Lutz, 20 years old, of 654 West 180th Street were dosing on some planks beside the stringpiece and on a direct line with the truck, while Frank Cassidy, 17 years old, of 659 Walton Avenue, Bronx, was seated on the stringpiece behind them with his face toward the river.

The truck leaped forward, over Moran and Lutz, and shunted young Cassidy into the river, after which it backed off from the stringpiece and leaped forward again. Hardland had abandoned his post at the steering wheel by this time, and leaped to the street, but Lee remained in his seat and sought desperately to check the course of the vehicle.

It wavered over the stringpiece for a few seconds, and then plunged into the water. Lee dived into the river as the truck disappeared. The truck came to the surface again, and floated about twenty feet beside a barge of the New York Central Railroad and then sank.

Cassidy was pulled out of the water by Moran and Lutz, who were unharmed in the passage of the vehicle over them, and Patrolman Crowley of the East Sixty-seventh Street Station. Then a search was begun for Lee. A crowd soon gathered, and the patrolman had about concluded that Lee had been drowned, when the captain of the barge yelled: "Here he is. He's holding on to the side of the barge. He must have fetched under it when he dived."

Lee was rescued and an ambulance was called from Flower Hospital. Lee was found to be suffering from submersion and cuts on the left leg and left shoulder. He was taken to the hospital, where Cassidy also was treated for a laceration on the head, received from the truck before he was hurled overboard.

WOMAN PICKPOCKET JAILED.

Third Offender Convicted of Stealing Pay From Factory Girls.

Mrs. Mamie Davis, alias Matilda Neiman, 36 years old, a pickpocket with a record of two previous convictions, who made a practice of robbing factory girls of their pay in the subway, pleaded guilty to a robbery charge before Judge Nott in General Sessions yesterday, and was sentenced to two and a half years in Auburn Prison. Detective John J. Mullin of the Pickpocket Squad, said that when he took her into custody on the B. M. T. subway station at Fourteenth Street about two months ago the woman wore $15,000 in jewelry.

Mullin had noticed her throw away a pay envelope, and when she was searched by a police matron $12 was found on her. Miss Adeline Chavin of 1,662 Cropsey Avenue, Brooklyn, identified the money as having been stolen from her.

Soon after her arrival in this country from her birthplace, Warsaw, Poland, in 1909, the woman was arrested and convicted as a pickpocket. Four years later she was convicted on a similar charge. She was married to Benjamin Davis in Brooklyn in 1919, but obtained a divorce from him the following year, Davis giving her $10,000 in settlement. She told Judge Nott that her last home was at 365 West Fifty-fifth Street.

WILL OUST MAYOR ROGERS.

New State Law Will Make Humorist Chief Magistrate "Emeritus."

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 29 (AP).—Will Rogers is to lose his job as Mayor of Beverly Hills.

A committee today informed the cowboy humorist that a new State law will oust him as Mayor.

"I bet it's a frame-up," said Will.

"Nope," retorted the committee. "Beverly Hills becomes a city of the sixth class and Sil Spaulding, the President of the Board of Trustees, atuomatically becomes Mayor."

"Well," roared the Mayor, "what does that make me?"

"That makes you —" The committee went into a hurried conference.

SUICIDE 'POETIC,' GIRL DIES BY GAS

CAREFULLY PLANNED DEATH

Miss Helen Oatman Had Studied to Be Painter—Mother Knows of No Motive.

A week ago Miss Helen Oatman, 19 years old, student of music and of philosophy, whose greatest ambition was to be a painter, told her mother, Mrs. Helen F. Oatman of 64 West Ninety-third Street, that "there is something poetic about suicide." At midnight Thursday, while her mother and her brother, Fred, a Harvard undergraduate, were absent, she took ether, turned on the jets of a gas cooking stove and was found dead hours later by neighbors.

Miss Oatman, who was described by friends as a brunette of moderate stature, handsome rather than pretty, with dark hair cut like a boy's, was a niece of A. P. Frymier, wealthy contractor, member of the firm of Frymier & Hanna, 2,061 Broadway. She was said to have moved in society in Philadelphia and Washington and to have lived much of her life in California and Honolulu. She formerly was a student at Miss Spence's School, where she had studied dramatics and art, and was enrolled in the New York School of Fine and Applied Arts.

Appeared in Good Spirits.

She appeared in good spirits when last seen before her death and left no note of explanation or farewell. Thursday her mother went to visit her sister, Mrs. Frymier, on the Frymier estate at Lake Mahopac, where Miss Oatman was to have joined her today. Her brother, who was said to be working in an office during the Summer, left about 8 o'clock Thursday evening to visit friends.

As he left their apartment on the fourth floor, he said, his sister asked him in a casual tone when he would be back. He said he replied, "Midnight or a little later." He did not return until after 5 o'clock yesterday morning.

Half an hour after he left, Miss Oatman went to a drug store at Columbus Avenue and Ninety-third Street and purchased two packages of cigarettes. The superintendent of the building, who was on the front stoop with his wife, greeted the girl when she paused on the way up to her apartment.

Soon after midnight, Miss Palma Polito, 17 years old, who appears on the musical comedy stage and in motion pictures as Palma Riti, returned home with her father, John Polito, to their apartment on the fifth floor, directly over that of the Oatmans. Miss Polito remarked to her father upon the odor of gas.

They decided to investigate. They tried the door to the Oatman apartment, found it open and walked in. The electric lights were on. Preceding her father, Miss Polito, who had been a close friend of Miss Oatman, glanced into the kitchen. She fell to the floor fainting, and Mr. Polito called a policeman.

Ends Life in New Attire.

Miss Oatman had chosen to end her life in an unusual fashion. She had evidently bathed, had then donned new silk night attire and negligee. She had taken a fresh linen sheet from a cupboard and spread it neatly on the kitchen floor before the gas stove, the oven of which was only a few inches from the floor. She had then arranged pillows about the stove.

She was found reposing on her side with her head resting on an arm inside the oven, all jets of which had been turned on. Beside her was an open pint can of ether and close to her face a dainty lace handkerchief which had been saturated with the fluid.

In an adjoining room was an unfinished oil painting on an easel, and books relating to philosophies and religion, some on shelves, some where they had been left on a table and the arm of a chair. An artist's kit lay open on a chair with palette and brushes ancleaned.

Mrs. Oatman was summoned by telephone and hurried to New York by automobile with Mr. and Mrs. Frymier. The mother, who had not been informed of the nature of the tragedy until her arrival, was prostrated. Later she said, "I can hardly believe it yet. It is incredible. Helen was studious, but not morose or moody.

"Only the other day she was reading an account of a suicide in a newspaper. She looked up and said 'There is something poetic about suicide, something beautiful. No more fuss, nothing to worry and fret about. It's just all over.'"

Mrs. Oatman said that while she was accustomed to hearing her daughter voice original thoughts she did not think it proper to make such remarks even as a pose, and that she had remonstrated with her, telling her that "You ought not even to think of such things." Miss Oatman had not referred to the subject again.

Knows of No Motive.

Mrs. Oatman said that she had not the faintest idea of what motive her daughter could have had in ending her life. She had not taken her remarks about suicide seriously, she said, and as far as she knew there was nothing over which her daughter might have been despondent.

Miss Oatman rarely associated with men, neighbors said, and added that she did not appear to care for their society, although she was companionable and well liked. It was said that her father had died while she was a child and that she, her mother and brother, had an income of $500 a month from the Frymier estate.

The body was removed to the Riverside Memorial Funeral Church at Seventy-sixth Street and Amsterdam Avenue, where services will be held today.

Bold Pigeon Defies Cat's Luncheon Monopoly; Daily Tilt for Food Delights Ferry Commuters

Inside the big, domed ferryhouse at St. George, S. I., a blue and beige pigeon has taken up its abode, deserting its many comrades who fly aloft outside and dwell in the crannies of the roof and eaves over the waves of the bay.

This particular pigeon could fly out, too, if it wished. Indeed, it frequently struts to the main, wide doors, but never all the way out. Invariably it returns—to the lunch counter! Whether it discovered the lunch counter by accident or instinct, by eyesight or sense of smell, it is for ornithologists to tell; but it is a matter of common observation over a period of several weeks—with one considerable "intermission"—that, having once discovered the lunch counter, it has found life good for "this pigeon." It has ceased to strut and peck for a living, for its living has been literally thrown at it in chunks.

It is the "intermission" that lends drama, and forebodes even tragedy, to this otherwise dainty tale of nature. Alas, the lunch counter had been for a year or so the particular perquisite of a lean and ever-hungry tortoise-shell cat!

When the pigeon was hit by the first fragment of doughnut tossed by a commuter, it was neither so old nor so wise as it is today. And when the cat first saw the bird trespassing on its preserves, its yellow eyes bulged with astonished anger. Its tail swelled out, and with all its claws extended it started on its stomach in a crawl designed to exterminate the rash bird. When the cat was twenty feet away the pigeon rose, alighting beyond reach of spring. Then eighteen feet away. So it went, an hour at a time. But, at last, the pigeon miscalculated the distance, being young in this game of life. It preened itself too long, it laughed in the face of that cat too loudly, and, when the spring came and the bird lifted, the cat's claws had tail feathers.

After that the pigeon disappeared, and the intermission lasted a week or two, and then behold! the pigeon again hovered around the lunch counter, with new tail feathers.

It goes on every day. The cat approaches from every angle. The bird struts up to within a dozen feet of it and looks it in the eye. It turns almost quite around, and flicks its tail in the cat's face. The cat springs, and the pigeon rises straight up from the ground about five feet and, doubling back, alights thirty feet behind the cat, which is then headed in the wrong direction. Pussy looks back foolishly. The bird seems now to have the margin of safety down to a few inches. The chase will go on till the bird, having had enough to eat, flies off to a perch far overhead.

The commuters and ferryhouse hands are baffled by the problem. How will it end? The pigeon gets fatter every day. Will it get too heavy, or will it grow even stronger on the wing by its frequent exercise of instant rising? The cat is getting thinner. Will it grow more elastic on the spring, or weaker and less lithe? Here is a transit puzzle the commuters debate much and which the salt-sea dogs cannot settle.

GIRL IS INDICTED IN A MURDER PLOT

Accused of Conspiracy to Kill Father and Three Others With Maid's Help.

SERVANT ALSO IS HELD

Aged Parent Declares Daughter Is Innocent—Prosecutor Says She Sought Fortune.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., July 29.—Of the sixteen indictments returned by the April Term Grand Jury of Middlesex County this afternoon, two were against Miss Bessie Morse of Plainsboro, daughter of George G. Morse, a retired farmer, and Mamie Todd, a negro maid in the Morse home, charging them with conspiring to kill Mr. Morse, the sister of Miss Morse, Mrs. Grace Dey and her husband, Elmer Dey, and the adopted son of the Deys, Raymond Brittain.

They will be arraigned by Prosecutor John B. Toolan later. Bail in $7,000 given by Miss Morse's father will stand. The Todd girl was held in the county jail, where she has been since her arrest last April.

The prosecutor used the Todd girl as a witness against Miss Morse. Other witnesses were Chief County Detective Ferd David, and the two detectives employed by the prosecutor to continue the alleged negotiations with the Todd girl after the case was brought to the attention of the county authorities.

Miss Morse is accused of a conspiracy to take the lives of three of her relatives who would share with her the half-million dollar estate of her aged father. She is free in bail furnished by her father, who insists that the charges against his daughter are false. The State alleged that Miss Morse, through her maid, entered into an agreement with detectives, posing as slayers, to do the killing.

FLORIDA SLAYER GETS DEATH

He Was Charged With Killing 5 in a Family With a Railroad Spike.

TAMPA, Fla., July 29 (AP).—Benjamin Franklin Levins, charged with the slaying of five members of the Merrell family here last May, was found guilty without recommendation of mercy by a jury in Circuit Court today. The sentence carries a penalty of death by electrocution.

The Merrells were beaten to death with a railroad spike and the arrest of Levins was followed by three nights of rioting in which six men were killed and more than a score injured in storming the jail here to lynch Levins. State troops were called out and used machine-guns before finally quelling the mob.

Authorities said at the time that Levins confessed that he had slain the Merrells by mistake, believing that he was killing members of another family with whom he had quarreled. On the stand, however, he denied a great part of that and said he had killed Looney Merrell, the head of the family, in self-defense after Merrell had struck him. He denied slaying Mrs. Merrell and the three children.

He was convicted today of the murder of Looney Merrell and is under four other murder indictments.

A baby, five and a half months old, the only survivor of the Merrell family, was wounded by the slayer. The baby was taken by relatives who are living in Missouri.

DEATHS RISE TO 27 IN BOAT DISASTER

YACHTSMEN PUT ON JURY

CHICAGO, July 29 (AP).—A four-angled investigation of yesterday's excursion boat disaster in which twenty-seven persons, mostly women and children, lost their lives today revealed no evidence of negligence or carelessness on the part of crew or owner.

None now is reported missing and authorities believe that all of the other forty-nine on the Favorite were saved. According to the best check-up obtainable today there were seventy-one passengers and a crew of five aboard the vessel when it upset.

Inquiries indicated that the boat had been pronounced seaworthy as late as July 13 last, and that the skipper tried valiantly to save his boat when the sudden off-shore squall struck it.

Fred J. Meno, District Steamboat Inspector from Detroit, asserted the Favorite carried twice as many life preservers as would have been required for the passenger list. Had there been any question of the boat's stability, the Steamboat Inspection Bureau would have ordered a stability test, Meno said.

On the other hand, Coroner Oscar Wolff said he found that straps on few preservers were rotten and that many of them were inaccessible. Preservers designated for children were in some instances too high to reach, he believed. The Coroner's observations, however, were made informally, and not as a part of his inquest.

The Coroner selected a jury from men interested in seamanship. These included Commodore Sheldon Clark, former Commodore of the Chicago Yacht Club; Isaac M. Hamilton, President of the Federal Life Insurance Company; Edward Buker, President of the Coach and Car Equipment Company; L. C. Wilson, sales manager of the Byrd Archer Chemical Company, and Clark C. Wright, executive of an architectural firm.

The disaster was "an act of God," asserted William A. Rittenhouse, Assistant State's Attorney, who was directing the investigation for that office.

The fourth inquiry was started by Michael Hughes, Chief of Police, who ordered five members of the crew held.

Although there is no official list of missing, several persons who are believed to have been on the boat have not been located. Throughout the night and today divers and Coast Guards searched the lake for bodies. High waves finally forced them to abandon their work.

Chief Hughes has recommended that Carnegie hero medals be awarded to William A. Hofnauer, wealthy yachtsman, and four companions, who, the first to reach the Favorite, saved more than a score.

"Those men undoubtedly prevented the loss of life from being twice as large as it was," Chief Hughes asserted.

Mr. Hofnauer, before the State's Attorney's investigators, defended Captain Olson, who, he said, should be "praised for his heroism instead of censured."

THREE DIE AS TRAIN CRASHES INTO AUTO

BOY KILLED WHILE PLAYING

Four-Year-Old Brooklyn Child Runs Into Truck as He and 50 Comrades Frolic Under Firemen's Shower.

NEW LISBON, N. J., July 29 (AP).—Two men and a boy were instantly killed late today by a westbound freight train which struck their automobile at a grade crossing of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The dead were Albert Seifert of 2,942 North Oriana Street, Philadelphia, Frederick Kligge of 2,945 North Oriana Street, Philadelphia, and his son, Frederick Jr., 12 years old.

The crossing is unprotected and authorities said that the driver's vision was obscured by freight cars on a siding in the rear of the station. The bodies were thrown about thirty yards and the automobile was demolished.

The train, bound from Long Branch to Camden, was traveling between fifty-five and sixty miles an hour as it approached the crossing, according to Frank G. Jones of Camden, the engineer. He saw two automobiles start across the tracks, he said, and immediately applied the brakes, but the engine pilot struck the rear of one of the cars.

An investigation was started by Coroner Benjamin F. Farner. He said several persons had been killed at the crossing in the past two years.

The bodies were taken to Mount Holly. From papers and pictures found in Seifert's pockets, police believed that the party was driving to Beach Arlington from Philadelphia.

SAYVILLE, L. I., July 29.—Mrs. Arthur J. Hilly, wife of the Assistant Corporation Counsel of New York, a Summer resident here, and her infant son, Raymond, were badly cut about the face and hands tonight when the automobile she was driving overturned in a collision with a car owned and driven by Mrs. Harry M. Burtin of Brooklyn, at Elm Street and Candee Avenue.

A Porto Rican nursemaid known as "Johanna," who was in the Hilly automobile, was seriously injured about the head. She was taken to the South Side Hospital in Bay Shore. Mrs. Burtin was only slightly bruised.

About fifty small boys, attired only in their undergarments, were enjoying themselves yesterday dashing back and forth under a shower bath erected by firemen in Graham Avenue, near Siegel Street, Brooklyn, when one of them, 4-year-old Sidney Morris of 106 Siegel Street, ran into a motor truck of the Street Cleaning Department and was killed. The cries of the other boys brought the firemen, one of whom crawled under the vehicle and lifted the child to the near-by fire house, where an ambulance surgeon pronounced him dead.

Michael Mazi, the driver of the truck, of 22 Ainslie Street, said that he was driving cautiously when the little fellow was struck and run over by one of the front wheels before he could bring the truck to a stop. Mazi was allowed to go after he had made a statement to detectives at the Stagg Street Station.

The overturning of an automobile early yesterday on the Motor Parkway near Farmingdale, L. I., resulted in the two men and two young women occupants being slightly hurt, and the arrest later of six youths for stripping the car of its tires when the injured persons had been removed to the Nassau County Hospital at Mineola.

Bernard Cone, 31 years old, of 365 West End Avenue, was driving the car when it skidded and turned over on its side. He received bodily bruises and a dislocation of the right arm. The others in the car were Paul Fayers, 29 years old, of 320 West End Avenue; Miss Margaret Lehman, 23 years old, of 121 West Seventy-second Street, and Miss Edith Turrell, 21 years old, of 36 West 100th Street. They escaped with cuts and bruises.

Sergeant Julius Heberer of the Syosset police several hours after the accident discovered the youths stripping the car. When he arrested them on a petit larceny charge, they said they were James F. Botkin, 18; Irwin Botto, 18; Clarence Heller, 18; William Geyer, 18; William H. Frost, 18, and Morris Albert, 20, all of Hicksville.

Heberer told Justice of the Peace Augustus Morey in Oyster Bay that the boys had placed the tires in an automobile. The prisoners pleaded guilty, and, after being reprimanded, were freed on suspended sentences.

HELD FOR DRUNKEN DRIVING

Anti-Saloon League Official's Son Smashed Organization's Car.

RICHMOND, Va., July 29 (AP).—After having admitted that he had a small quantity of liquor in his possession when the Anti-Saloon League automobile he was driving crashed into a trolley wire pole last Saturday, Carroll V. Hepburn, son of the Rev. David Hepburn, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Virginia, was certified today to the Grand Jury.

An indictment charging him with driving while drunk and for unlawful transportation of liquor will be asked. Bail of $500 was furnished.

The Anti-Saloon League superintendent appeared in Police Court and stood with his son and Attorney Leith S. Bremner during the preliminary hearing.

Asked if he desired to make any statement, Mr. Hepburn said that it was the first time he had realized that his son had guilty knowledge of the presence of whisky in the automobile. In a letter he had written to Commonwealth's Attorney Dave E. Satterfield, he said:

"If the punishment of my son and his companions shall help to advance the cause and save some other home from the disgrace and shame that my wife and myself have had to endure on account of this deplorable affair, we shall be thankful."

Mr. Bremner entered for his client a plea of guilty in advertent violation of the Prohibition law.

The defendant testified he and three companions purchased the pint of whisky on the Petersburg Turnpike and came back to Richmond, all having partaken of it. He denied that he was drunk and Arthur Boyd, one of his companions, testified in corroboration.

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 29.—Lindbergh is doing great work. He is visiting each town one day trying to interest people in aviation. When he gets through it wouldn't be bad to have him visit Washington for at least a week and try and interest them. Don't get the idea because three of our planes flew to Europe and made it that we are ahead in aviation. It's not how far can three men fly, but what have you got for the other hundred and ten million to fly in; and where are they to land when they come down?

Yours, WILL.

Indianapolis Gets Word That Former Klan Leader Has Left Prison.

AGREES TO GIVE EVIDENCE

Grand Jury Hears Testimony Concerning Checks for Gov. Jackson —His Wife Threatened.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 29 (AP).—Authoritative sources here tonight confirmed reports that D. C. Stephenson former State Klan leader and a life prisoner in the Indiana State Prison, was to be brought to Indianapolis to testify tomorrow morning before the Marion County Grand Jury which has been investigating charges of political corruption in the State.

Mr. Moore said that William H. Remy, Marion County Prosecutor, had outlined to him the questions he proposed to put to Stephenson before the Grand Jury tomorrow and that the prisoner had expressed his willingness to answer them.

Remy refused to make any statement.

Floyd Christian, a Noblesville attorney who stated some time ago he had not seen checks made out by D. C. Stephenson in favor of Governor Jackson, testified before the Marion County Grand Jury today. Christian, who was one of Stephenson's attorneys at his trial for the murder of Madge Oberholtzer, said his client showed him two checks drawn in favor of Governor Jackson—one for $5,000 and the other for either $2,500 or $2,700.

It was understood the Grand Jury asked the attorney about these checks today. Jackson has denied receiving any money from Stephenson other than $2,500 for a saddle horse.

Commenting on reports from Mackinac Island, Mich., that Governor Jackson had received anonymous threatening letters, Pliny Wolford, secretary to the Governor, today admitted that several such letters had been received at the Governor's office here. He declined, however, to exhibit the letters. Some, he said, had to do with the Stephenson case and demanded the release from the Indiana State Prison of the former Grand Dragon of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan. The letters, he indicated, were typewritten and had been mailed in Chicago.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 29.—Continuing the investigation of alleged political fraud and corruption when D. C. Stephenson, former Ku Klux Klan Dragon now serving a sentence for murder, was in power, the Marion County Grand Jury was in session today and was expected to be in session again Saturday and possibly for several days next week.

Miss Mildred Meade, former confidante of Stephenson, was a witness for more than an hour. Documents and papers obtained from Stephenson's mysterious "black boxes" were removed from the safety vault of a downtown bank and taken to the jury room. The jurors, it was said, spent most of the day examining these papers, which are said to show the former Klan leader's relations with persons high in official and public life.

Emsley W. Johnson, Special Assistant Prosecutor, and William H. Sheaffer, Deputy Prosecutor, presented to the jury information they obtained Thursday on a hasty trip to Pittsburgh.

It was understood that they interviewed Foster Strader, a former lieutenant of Stephenson while they were in Pittsburgh.

It was not revealed, however, whether they obtained more Stephenson documents. Additional papers which would throw further light on the former Klan leader's relations with persons high in official and political life were said to be the object of the journey.

"Our trip was not made in vain," Johnson said. "We obtained some information which we believe will be of value."

Strader has been sought before by the prosecutors. He was employed by Stephenson in various capacities while at the height of his career. During the time Stephenson was in the Hamiliton County Jail at Noblesville awaiting trial for murder, Strader was one of his message bearers.

MESSENGER IS SHOT IN DAYLIGHT HOLD-UP

ONE VICTIM BREAKS AWAY

Bullet Hits Him in Neck as He Runs for Help—His Condition Serious.

BANDITS, FOILED, ESCAPE

Two armed men made an unsuccessful attempt to steal a $2,000 payroll in Fifty-seventh Street, near Eleventh Avenue, soon after 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, shooting one messenger and escaping in the ensuing excitement.

Walter Wall, 30 years old, of 235 West Fifty-first Street, and Charles Zibransky of 773 Melrose Avenue, the Bronx, messengers for Brink's Express Company of 149 Broadway, were on their way to the offices of G. Reiz & Brothers, label manufacturers, at 548 West Fifty-seventh Street. They left the elevated railroad at Fifty-ninth Street and walked through Fifty-seventh Street and were within a few doors of their destination. Zibransky had the money under his arm in a shoe box wrapped with brown manila paper.

Factories and offices in that vicinity were closing for the day and the streets were filled with homeward-bound workers. As the messengers passed a doorway at 542 West Fifty-seventh Street two men tackled them from behind.

Both messengers struggled. Wall managed to get loose from the grasp of his captor and darted for the doorway of Reiz & Brothers, intending to get help. The robbers evidently sensed his intention and one of them drew forth a pistol and fired. The bullet struck Wall in the neck and he fell.

The shot, the struggle and yells of persons near by roused the entire district. Heads popped out of windows, police whistles began to shrill, stenographers shrieked and men yelled "Stop him!" without in the least knowing whom to stop. In the hub-bub the robbers released Zibransky and darted through an alleyway of the Sheffield Farms Company which leads to Fifty-sixth Street. There they lost themselves in the crowd.

Wall was taken to Roosevelt Hospital, where it was said last night that his condition was serious. The bullet entered the left side of his neck and lodged in his throat.

Detectives interviewing Wall in the hospital were forced to stop because of his critical condition.

Zibransky was taken to the Rogues' Gallery at Police Headquarters to look at the photographs there. Before going he said he did not see the bandits well and doubted that he could identify pictures of them. This proved to be the case.

Returning to the West Forty-seventh Street Police Station, Zibransky said he had been employed on Friday for a year to guard payrolls for the express company, receiving $3 for his day's services, which included the guarding on an average of five payrolls totaling more than $50,000. Yesterday, he said, he rode to the express company's office with Wall and on the way Wall told him he had been working for the company only two days.

Zibransky, who is married and has three children, said he intended to quit his job as guard. He is regularly employed as a detective by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, earning about $80 a week.

Dr. Diehran Zakarian, a dentist, was preparing to leave his office at 135 East Twenty-third Street last night when a man entered and asked for immediate relief for a severe toothache. Zakarian told him that he had put away his instruments and was ready to go home. Another man entered the waiting room with a drawn pistol and commanded Zakarian to hold up his hands, and then the supposed patient searched the dentist. They took $50 cash and jewelry which Zakarian valued at $2,000.

STATE SCORES POINT IN LOUISIANA TRIAL

Special to The New York Times.

FRANKLIN, La., July 29.—The State scored in minor points today at the beginning of testimony in the Leboeuf murder trial, in which Dr. Thomas E. Dreher, Mrs. James J. Leboeuf and James Beadle, a trapper, are charged with having killed James J. Leboeuf, Superintendent of the light and power plant at Morgan City, later sinking the body in a tidewater lake connecting with the Gulf of Mexico and weighting it with railroad angle irons after it had been mutilated.

For five days the trial has dragged on, through motions and the selection of a jury. Early motions by defense counsel consumed the entire morning of the first day but District Judge James D. Simon, 33 years old and the youngest jurist in Louisiana, ordered night sessions to hasten the trial.

The feature of the first day's testimony was the statement of Dr. C. M. Horton, Coroner of St. Mary Parish, that the incision made in the body to keep it from rising to the lake was similar to the incisions made by surgeons for the purpose of laying bare the abdomen.

The body was identified, the face having been eaten by crabs, through Leboeuf's peculiarly stubby thumbs.

Two small boys and a woman testified that they saw Dr. Dreher and Beadle in the physician's automobile the evening of the murder, transporting a brogue in the direction of the flooded football park, to which, it was alleged, Leboeuf was enticed to his death by his wife.

The court room is crowded to suffocation at every session by the picturesque characters of this Bayou country.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Investment Shares Surge Forward in Third Consecutive 2,000,000-Share Day on Exchange.

A further buoyant upturn in investment stocks, putting no less than half a hundred separate issues to their best prices of the year, synchronized nicely with a further relaxation of rates for "business money," in yesterday's trading. It was the third consecutive 2,000,000-share day and the market at times went so fast that its whirling about gave it an excited and erratic appearance. Profits were taken here and there, fresh selling for the decline was evident, too, but the leaders forged ahead in determined and vigorous fashion.

The fillip given trading by the announcement that the du Ponts have become investors in shares of the United States Steel Corporation has had a prolonged effect. It seemed to merely whet the public appetite for investment and semi-investment stocks, and it was shares of this calibre in most insistent demand yesterday. Steel, General Motors, du Pont, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Allied Chemical and Dye, all seasoned dividend payers, were clearly the market's fashionable leaders and were turned over and "churned about" in such rapid fashion that liquidation of less important and popular issues went almost unnoted. There were some periods of drastic profit taking, when even the leaders slackened their pace and retreated a step or so. One of these followed the Federal Trade Commission announcement that the du Pont purchases of Steel shares will be investigated for a study of "their economic aspects." Nevertheless, it was a long list of first-grade securities which closed the feverish day with appreciable gains.

The reduction of the reserve rate by the Kansas City Reserve Bank to 3½ per cent. and the further softening of rates for merchants' paper in this market quite naturally lead to prophecies that the New York rate will be lowered. This does not necessarily follow, although such action is not, of course, entirely out of the question. The fact that acceptances now are quoted ⅝ per cent. below the discount rate is strong argument for a reduction. On the other hand, the possibility that this move might prove an incentive to wild speculation in the securities markets and that it might conceivably throw out of adjustment the present even workings of foreign exchange act as natural deterrents to any change at the moment. The expected demand for additional credits as business expands this Fall are to be taken into consideration, too. Yesterday's advance in the call rate to 4 per cent. was in response to the calling of about $25,000,000 in loans, for month-end requirements, and being recognised as such was given but scant attention.

The reviews of trade and business add further testimony that current changes are on the side of betterment, although it is to be noted that improvement is moderate and that a great many irregularities still are evident. Dun's Review comments that "the progressive upward trend in certain of the principal trades is a constructive development," while Bradstreet's notes that "reports on trade and industry this week displayed a somewhat more cheerful tone, reflecting the continuance of warm weather, a slightly improved crop outlook, better buying of cotton goods, and a moderate expansion in steel orders and mill operations."

ACCEPTANCE RATES AT NEW LOW LEVEL

Advance Regarded as Temporary Condition Affecting Only the Local Money Market.

The abundance of credit supplies, which has been in evidence in Wall Street several weeks, resulted yesterday in a reduction in bankers' acceptance rates to their lowest level since the first week of August, 1926. At the close yesterday, the bid price on sixty-day and ninety-day bills was ⅝ per cent. below the Federal Reserve rediscount rate, which increased discussion of the possibility of a cut in the bank rates, especially in view of the reduction from 4 to 3½ per cent. in the rediscount rate of the Kansas City Federal Reserve Bank.

The reductions in the acceptance rates amounted to ⅛ to ¾ of 1 per cent., and at the close of business the following quotations were in force: thirty days, 3¼@¼ per cent.; sixty to ninety days, 3⅜@¼ per cent.; 120 days, 3½@⅜ per cent.; five to six months, 3⅝@½ per cent. The reductions followed declines which had taken place earlier in the week.

The lower rates resulted from a material weakening that has taken place in time money and the fact that successive reductions in acceptance rates had not been successful in bringing out a larger supply of bills. Supplies of acceptance paper in the hands of dealers are now the lowest in years.

While the lower acceptance rates were considered a true reflection of conditions in the money market, the call loan rate yesterday turned firmer. After renewals at 3¾ per cent., it advanced to 4 per cent., following the calling of about $25,000,000 of loans by the banks. This was regarded as a temporary development, due to preparations for large month-end settlements, as well as to a desire of the banks to settle their weekly reserve position with the Federal Reserve Bank. Time money showed no change for the day.

The reduction in the Kansas City Reserve Bank's rediscount rate again figured largely in Wall Street discussions, and the opinion grew that it was the forerunner of a cut in the New York rate, especially in view of the low level of acceptances here. As a rule when the rediscount rate at one centre is lower than at others, a shift in funds occurs, and if additional money should come here from the interior of the country the low money rates in New York would be accentuated.

The early movement of crops is responsible largely for the reduction in the Kansas City rate. Farmers have been paid in many instances and have liquidated their loans with the banks. This has left large supplies of credit available, for which little demand exists. Those who believe the rediscount rate in New York will not be cut, however, point out that the season of the year is approaching when money rates usually stiffen as a result of business expansion and crop marketing requirements.

CELANESE TO BUILD PLANT.

Production of Non-Inflammable Celluloid to Be Increased.

The Celanese Corporation of America, following the proposed acquisition of the Celluloid Company by the Safety Celluloid Company, a subsidiary of the Celanese Corporation, is planning to build a chemical plant at Cumberland, Md., at a cost of about $2,500,000 to produce cellulose acetate, used in the manufacture of non-inflammable celluloid and allied products. The plant will have an initial capacity of five tons daily, all of which will be turned over to the consolidated company to be used in the manufacture of non-inflammable celluloid products.

The consolidation will unite the patent rights, manufacturing facilities and interests of the Celluloid Company and the Celanese Corporation in this field, which include non-inflammable motion picture film, and will open up a much larger field in many industries which inflammable celluloid cannot enter.

To carry out the consolidation, a meeting of stockholders of the Celluloid Company was called yesterday for Aug. 29 to vote on the proposed merger. Robert Campbell, President of Celluloid, will retain that office.

WHOLESALE PRICES LOWEST SINCE WAR

DOLLAR TRADE TOTAL DOWN

But This Was Still Above the Level of Same Week in 1926.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Dollar volume of trade last week as shown by data on check payments, although smaller than in the preceding week, was larger than in the corresponding week of last year, according to today's weekly statement of the Department of Commerce.

Wholesale prices decined from the previous week, reaching their lowest level since the end of the war. Prices for cotton, however, continued to average higher than in the previous week, but were still below the corresponding week of a year ago.

Prices for iron and steel averaged the same as in the previous week, but the price level was lower than for the corresponding week of 1926.

Loans and discounts by Federal Reserve member banks showed no change from the preceding week but were higher than in the corresponding week of last year. Interest rates on time money averaged lower than in the previous week but were higher than in the same week of a year ago.

"Bond prices showed practically no change from the previous week," the department said, "but were higher than in the same week of the previous year. Stock prices again advanced, both as compared with the previous week and the same week of 1926. Interest rates on call loans declined from both comparative periods. The Federal Reserve ratio advanced from both the previous week and the corresponding week of last year.

"The production of bituminous coal during the week ended July 16 was larger than in the preceding week but considerably smaller than in the same week of 1926. Lumber output was greater than in either comparative period, the increase over a year ago being the first registered this year.

"The production of beehive coke was smaller than in either the previous week or the corresponding week of 1926. Petroleum production again reached a new high record.

"Receipts of wheat at primary markets were greater than in the previous week but smaller than last year. Cotton receipts were substantially larger than a year ago. Receipts of cattle at primary markets were smaller than a year ago, while hog receipts showed an advance over the same week of 1926.

"Manufacturing production in June was smaller than in May, after adjustment for working time differences. As compared with a year ago, however, industrial output was greater.

"With no adjustments for varying number of days in the month, production of foodstuffs, textiles, lumber, leather, stone and clay products and non-ferrous metals and tobacco showed increases over the preceding month. As compared with a year ago, larger production was registered in foodstuffs, textiles, chemical and oils, stone and clay products and tobacco, other groups declining.

"The production of raw material, although smaller than in May, was greater than in June, 1926, all groups increasing over a year ago except forest products, which declined."

HATCH BACK ON EXCHANGE.

Sold Membership in May for $194,000, Pays $218,000 for New One.

E. Sanford Hatch, who in May sold his seat on the New York Stock Exchange for $194,000, which was $174,000 more than he paid for it in 1896, has purchased another seat for $218,000 and is preparing to resume trading activities.

Mr. Hatch bought the membership of the late Herbert L. Smith. He will be back on the floor of the Exchange in about two weeks.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

News, Comment and Incident, On the Stock Exchange and In the Financial Markets.

With an increasing number of traders committed to the advance, the familiar spectacle of a lively bidding up of favorite issues was repeated on the Stock Exchange yesterday. United States Steel common, although swinging less violently than on the preceding day, remained the undisputed pace-maker of the market, with du Pont and General Motors pressing it closely for the distinction. So far as could be determined on the basis of the day's happenings on the Exchange, Wall Street completely ignored the surprisingly large increase in brokerage loans. Rather, the stock market community was disposed to pay attention to the evidences of easier credit conditions reflected in the lowering of acceptance rates and the reduction in the rediscount rate of the Kansas City Federal Reserve Bank. All of these factors, however, appeared to be less significant to the speculative interests than the fact that large investments are being made in the common stocks of several large corporations, notably United States Steel. The rise in du Pont of 15¼ points was the most striking of the day's changes. Allied Chemical showed a net gain of 6½ points, Greene Cananea of 5⅞, Union Pacific of 3, Manhattan Electrical Supply of 2½, Delaware & Hudson of 3¾, Consolidated Gas of 2⅝ and Santa Fé of 2.

Bank Rate Cut Predicted.

Expectations of an early reduction in the rediscount rate of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, based on the rate cut made in Kansas City, were strengthened yesterday by a further decline in bankers' acceptance rates. The action in Kansas City was considered important for several reasons. If money in the interior of the country remains excessively cheap, it is likely to cause increasing amounts of funds to be sent to New York for placement in short term investment, and this would further weaken rates here. The difference of ⅛ of 1 per cent. between sixty-day and ninety-day acceptances and the Federal Reserve rediscount rate is larger than usual, and such a spread usually is followed by a readjustment of the rediscount rate. Against these arguments, however, stands the fact that the season of the year is approaching when money rates usually stiffen, and the $62,000,000 increase in brokers' loans also would militate against a reduction in the bank rate.

In and Out of the Market.

Brokerage houses have no reason to complain of the fickle traits which the bulk of the trading fraternity appears to have developed. There has been more switching in the last two days than has been seen in some months, the head of one firm said. Some of his customers, he added, are in and out of a half dozen stocks in one day, all of which means increased commissions for the brokers.

Gold From Holland.

The arrival of a shipment of gold from Holland yesterday, following several similar transfers made earlier in the month, lent point to the belief in Wall Street that Holland will be one of the next countries in which the discount rate of the central bank will be advanced. The Amsterdam discount rate is 3½ per cent., which is lower than that of any other country of Europe with the exception of Switzerland. There has been considerable export of capital from the Netherlands, and the financial market there has participated in many important foreign loans. So far as the exchange rate is concerned, the gold exports are puzzling, as the Dutch guilder for months has held a trifle over 40 cents, which is within a fraction of a cent of par. Shipping rates on gold have been cut, however, which makes occasional shipments to New York profitable.

Steel Calls.

Time was, and not so long ago, when calls on United States Steel common could be purchased in the New Street mart very close to the market. Because "X" always moved so slowly and sedately there was little danger, the brokers thought, in selling a thirty-day paper 1 to 1½ points up. Since Steel has become such a hot speculative favorite, however, and the fluctuations are in several points a day, instead of fractions, these options have entirety disappeared. The best that one could do yesterday on a Steel call was 5½ points up for thirty days, and even at that the broker shivered as he made the offer. Incidentally, many professional speculators who used to sell Steel as a "hedge" against commitments in other securities have been scrambling for dear life to get out from under.

The Railroad's Half Year.

Wall Street is awaiting with considerable interest the appearance of official compilations of aggregate railroad earnings for the first half of the year. It is acknowledged now that the carriers failed to make anything like the showing for June, which was the case last year, but the results for the first half still stand uncertainly. Up to a certain point in the reports already submitted by the railroads the half-yearly results indicated that the 1926 record for the same period would be substantially bettered.

Another Investigation.

The proposal of the Federal Trade Commission to investigate the reported "community of interest" among the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., the General Motors Corporation and the United States Steel Corporation caused a brief flurry of excitement in stock market circles early yesterday afternoon, but it was later appraised rather generally by the financial community as "just another investigation." If Wall Street has been correctly informed as to the relations of the three companies—and few doubt that it has—the projected investigation need not cause any concern, according to the view expressed by interests most affected. The Steel Corporation's position, it can be said, is that it has no way of preventing the du Ponts or any one else from buying its stock. There is little likelihood, however, that du Pont or General Motors interests ever will be able to obtain even "working control" of the Steel Corporation because of the very large investment holdings of its stock.

Municipal Bonds Speeding Up.

Running quite contrary to midsummer form, the municipal bond market appears to be gradually gaining momentum. Prices are firming up satisfactorily on first grade issues, and it is expected they will do so gradually on secondary bonds. A sign of the times yesterday was the closing of the syndicate books on two major issues which had been moving slowly for several weeks. Other announcements may be forthcoming in the next few days. With lists shortened considerably dealers will start August with less apprehension than they had at the beginning of the present month, when the market appeared to be unable to absorb the new bonds coming into it, let alone the many undistributed issues which had piled up.

ONE of the best ways to make sure of leaving a sufficient estate to care for your family is to take out life insurance. The protection afforded by the insurance is intensified when combined with the trust idea.

The Life Insurance Trust is a natural outgrowth of the principles of insurance and trusteeship. Set aside in a trust with this Company securities, the income from which is to be used for the payment of life insurance premiums, and the original amount of the trust will eventually be increased by the amount of the insurance.

The younger you are on forming the trust, the greater will be its increase.

MUNICIPAL BONDS BEING DISTRIBUTED

Dealers Make Special Efforts to Reduce Stocks—Large Orders in Market.

PRICE CONCESSIONS MADE

Syndicate Books for Two State Issues Closed—$32,702,539 for Award Next Week.

Closing the syndicate books on the issue of $13,000,000 State of Arkansas 4½ per cent. bonds, which were offered on June 9 on a 4.25 per cent. basis, and on the issue of $6,000,000 State of Illinois 4s, offered in April, was announced yesterday by Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., as syndicate managers. All these bonds have been sold. The winding up of these syndicates is indicative of the effect that is now being put forth by dealers in municipal securities to dispose of issues which have burdened their lists for the last few weeks.

A check-up of the market yesterday revealed that many of the major issues offered in the past two months either have been disposed of entirely and the syndicate books closed, or greatly reduced. The issue of $12,938,000 City of Pittsburgh 4½s offered in April is understood to have been sold down to a block of approximately $3,000,000. The $80,000,000 City of New York 4s, brought out in mid-May, are now reduced to about $20,000,000, after taking into consideration the $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 withdrawn from the market. The issue of $5,000,000 State of Missouri 4½s, offered around June 1 on a 3.95 per cent. basis, is about 50 per cent. sold. Of the issue of $4,000,000 State of South Dakota bonds offered in June, about $3,750,000 remains unsold. The $13,547,000 City of Baltimore 4s, offered in mid-June, have all been sold.

Other Issues Reduced.

Of the issue of $10,000,000 State of North Carolina 4s brought out in April, about $2,000,000 remain unsold. The issue of $2,750,000 Moffet Tunnel District 5s, it is understood, has all been sold. Varying amounts of such issues as City of Milwaukee 4½s and State of West Virginia 3½s and 4s are still on the market.

The ability of dealers to reduce their holdings substantially during the past few days has been due to the presence of several large buying orders in the market. In most instances concessions from the current market levels have been asked, which, in most instances, have represented fair-sized declines from the original prices at which the bonds were brought out a few weeks ago.

The decline in prices has been accompanied by a slackening of supply of new issues, which has enabled dealers to catch up with their lists. The July reinvestment demand in municipals has left much to be desired, but at present the market has a steadier tone than at the start of the month, when price cutting was being conducted on a rather wide scale on high-grade bonds. This firmness in first-grade bonds is being gradually extended to some of the secondary issues.

Future Bond Sales.

Next week a total of $32,702,539 in new municipal issues will be sold by municipalities, a gain of approximately $10,000,000 over the week now closing. The principal issues of the week will be sold on Monday, headed by the $15,000,000 City of Philadelphia and $3,250,000 State of Michigan bonds.

According to present indications August sales of municipal bonds may approximate the July total, despite the fact that August is rated as the dull month of the year. July offerings of municipal bonds total $31,888,000 to date.

The following list of the principal issues to be sold next week is compiled from a schedule prepared by The Daily Bond Buyer of New York:

BRIDGE CO. MARKETS STOCK

West Virginia-Ohio River Will Use Proceeds for Construction.

McLaughlin, MacAfee & Co. of Pittsburgh and Mackubin, Goodrich & Co. of Baltimore have purchased 5,000 shares of $7 cumulative first preferred stock of the West Virginia-Ohio River Bridge Company, which is building a modern two-way vehicular steel suspension structure, with sidewalk, crossing the Ohio River from Point Pleasant, W. Va., to the Ohio shore just above Gallipolis, and bisecting a stretch of ninety-eight miles now without bridges.

It is expected that the bridge will be open for traffic on May 30, 1928, but construction is proceeding more rapidly than anticipated.

Purchasers of the preferred stock will receive one share of common and one share of preferred stock, the proceeds from the sale to be used for the construction of the bridge and the purchase of franchises and rights of way and the payment of property damages, financing costs and carrying charges. The necessary approvals have been obtained.

Bond Interest Not Received.

Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., announced yesterday that sufficient funds had not yet been received from the State of Catherina, Brazil, to pay the coupon due on Aug. 1, 1926, which, it was expected, would be paid on Aug. 1, 1927, on the State's twenty-five-year 8 per cent. external loan. As soon as such remittances are received notice will be sent to bondholders.

D. G. Dery Bonds Being Retired.

The Amalgamated Silk Corporation has deposited $84,000 to the credit of the D. G. Dery Corporation sinking fund, which, with funds now in the account, will be used to retire on Sept. 1, at 110, D. G. Dery Corporation first mortgage twenty-year 7 per cent. sinking fund bonds on the issue of 1922 to the face value of $58,500.

BOND PRICES RISE WITH EASIER CREDIT

Influenced chiefly by abundant credit facilities, the bond market on the Stock Exchange was strong and active yesterday. Banks and other large institutions bought on a larger scale than has been general this week, and this was reflected in advances in high grade investment issues. Convertible bonds and others of a more speculative character also ranged upward.

The further reduction in acceptance rates and discussions of the possibility of a reduction in the Federal Reserve rediscount rate were the factors principally responsible for the firm tone in bonds.

Railroad issues continued to attract buying, with advances in Baltimore & Ohio refunding 6s, Santa Fe general 4s, Union Pacific 4½s, Southern Pacific 4½s, Erie convertible 4s, series D; Seaboard, Missouri-Kansas-Texas, St. Louis-San Francisco and others.

Copper bonds were a feature of the industrial list, reflecting improved conditions in the copper trade and higher stock prices. Anaconda Copper 6s advanced ¾ point, Chile Copper 6s were firm under an attractive turnover, and Andes Copper 7s registered a net gain of ¾ point. Brooklyn Union Gas 5½s, moving in sympathy with that company's stock, advanced 3 points, reaching a new high record at 206. Another feature of the industrial was American Writing Paper 6s, which advanced ¾ point.

Italian Government 7s were a feature of the foreign list with an advance of ¼ point under an active trade. German issues were slightly easier, and French bonds firm. United States Government securities were firm, but rather inactive. Total sales of the day, at $10,595,000, were considerably above the average for the week.

JULIAN RECEIVERS ASK RETURN OF $1,400,000

Threaten Suit for $3,365,136 if Theatrical Producer Refuses to Refund Oil Company.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 29 (AP).—Adolph Ramish, wealthy theatrical producer, will be sued for $3,365,136 by the Julian Oil Corporation receivers unless he returns to them $1,400,000 which he is accused of collecting as a bonus from pool loans, they declared today.

The receivers said that they would file the suit under the triple damage provisions of the law, by which thrice the amount illegally collected may be demanded. They also declared that Mr. Ramish would be requested in the suit to return 278,000 shares of Julian stock.

The receivers late yesterday announced that such a suit would be filed against a "business man" involved in the Julian stock over-issue affair, but declined to name the man or the exact amount until today. They plan also two other suits of about $300,000 each.

$85,450,000 BONDS MARKETED IN WEEK

OFFERINGS TAKEN READILY

Important foreign and domestic industrial financing was principally responsible for bringing the total of new bond offerings up to $85,450,000 in the week ended yesterday, which compared with $73,617,000 last week and $89,415,000 in the corresponding week of last year. Activity was on the broadest scale in weeks, owing largely to the favorable reception given the major new issues.

The offerings by groups of this and last week follow:

	This Week.	Last Week.
Foreign	$40,000,000	$6,000,000
Industrial	22,250,000
Public Utility	11,200,000	61,300,000
State and Municipal	9,854,000	4,717,000
Farm Loan	500,000
Railroad	1,650,000
Total	$85,450,000	$73,617,000

The largest issue of the week was one of $30,000,000 of the United Steel Works Corporation of Germany, which ranks second to the United States Steel Corporation among the steel companies of the world. This issue was brought out by a syndicate headed by Dillon, Read & Co., and was promptly oversubscribed. The fact that it was necessary to cut down the allotments to dealers on this issue, together with the sale of a large portion of the bonds abroad, exerted a favorable influence throughout the market, and several issues which had been held back because of hesitancy on the part of underwriters will now be placed on the market. The steel issue drew attention to the large amount of German financing now going on in this market. It follows closely a $30,000,000 German Agricultural Bank issue as well as several smaller German loans, exclusive of the $30,000,000 Reichsbank credit which has been established in New York. Other foreign financing of this week included a $4,509,000 loan to the Danzig Port and Waterways Board, and issues by Bogota, Colombia, and Buenos Aires, Argentina.

The Pure Oil Company sold $20,000,000 of notes through a syndicate headed by the Guaranty Company, this constituting the principal domestic industrial financing of the week. In the public utility division, the feature was the sale of $10,000,000 bonds of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois. State and Municipal financing included scattered issues, mostly for small amounts.

A broad investment demand prevailed all week, and the major offerings were well absorbed. Important new issues are scheduled for next week.

Novadel Process Net Profits Up.

The net profits of the Novadel Process Corporation for the first half of 1927 amounted to $154,943, as compared with $94,750 for the same period of 1926. The earnings are equivalent to $3.08 per share on 50,000 shares of preferred participating stock originally issued, against dividend requirements of $1 per share for the period. After providing for the regular quarterly dividend on the preferred stock, the balance equals $1.04 per share on the common stock.

VOTE TO CUT OIL OUTPUT.

TULSA, Okla., July 29 (AP).—Oil operators of the greater Seminole area late today voted to put into effect a curtailment program which would limit production in the district to 450,000 barrels daily.

An attempt will be made to have the curtailment plan apply to all the operators in the area, including the companies that did not vote for its adoption. Representatives of these companies remained silent when their names were called.

NEW OIL EXCHANGE UNDER OBSERVATION

H. J. Keener, general manager of the Better Business Bureau, made known last night that the bureau was investigating efforts to form a new oil exchange in New York. He said that the moving spirit behind the efforts was Alexander T. Hussey, an attorney who was counsel for the defunct New York Petroleum Exchange, Inc., which got into difficulties with the Attorney General's office in 1926.

Mr. Keener said that the investigation had not yet proceeded far enough for him to make any statement. He said that the new exchange was to be known as the New York Oil Exchange. The promoters, according to reports, have already obtained forty members at $1,000 each, and it is said the officials plan to open it for trading when the membership reaches 100. Some of the members of the new exchange are said to have transferred their seats from the old exchange.

The New York Petroleum Exchange was formed in 1918, but according to charges brought out at various times it never functioned as a public market. In May, 1926, the Anti-Stock Fraud Bureau of the Attorney General's office contained that O. A. Eschbach, its President, John M. Walsh, and its agent, Lillian Peter, were guilty of falsely representing the Exchange to be prosperous, whereas it had a deficit.

As a result of these complaints, Supreme Court Justice William B. Carswell issued a temporary order prohibiting the Exchange from issuing stocks, bonds, notes, certificates of membership or sale of seats.

In December of last year, however, an agreement made by Mr. Hussey, counsel for the defunct Exchange, and Attorney General Albert Ottinger was ratified by Supreme Court Justice Selah B. Strong in Brooklyn and the ban on the institution was lifted. The agreement provided that the Exchange should elect a Board of Governors, should keep accurate minutes available to the Attorney General at all times, should keep a complete set of books and have an auditor nominated by the Attorney General.

The Petroleum Exchange, it was said, failed to become active following the ratification of the agreement containing these stipulations, and the plans for establishing the New York Oil Exchange were then developed.

DETERDING RENEWS ATTACK ON SOVIETS

Refuses to Deal With "Twelve Unprincipled Cutthroats" for Oil, He Says.

CHARGES RATES ARE CUT

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 29.—Sir Henri Deterding, head of the Royal Dutch Petroleum Company, made today a new statement regarding the company's reasons for its refusal to purchase Soviet gasoline that certainly will not endear him to Moscow.

"I refuse," he said in The Daily Mail, "as a man who believes in the good order of established society to have anything to do with gasoline which is in the hands of twelve unprincipled cutthroats whose hands are stained with the blood of their victims. These assassins are outside the pale of all decent civilized trading and are as unscrupulous in their methods of trading as in their seizure of power. Every company is affected by the Standard Oil Company no less than my own.

"I know of one contract made by a big firm with extensive interests in the Mediterranean. The Soviets sold them gasoline considerably below the price which could be obtained elsewhere, and included a clause in the agreement that if we were able to reduce our price they would give a proportionate reduction on the quoted price.

"The plain fact is that the Soviets are trying to use this oil to bring about the bankruptcy of honest trading companies."

DENIES RUSSIA NEEDS OIL.

The Soviet Union is not denying kerosene to the Russian people through the sale of oil products to the Standard Oil Company of New York and the Vacuum Oil Company, says Saul G. Bron, Chairman of the Amtorg Trading Corporation and representative of the Russian Naphtha Syndicate in this city.

In disputing statements made by Sir Henri Deterding, head of the Royal Dutch-Shell petroleum combination, that a serious shortage of kerosene existed in Russia, Mr. Bron said yesterday that Russia had an adequate supply of petroleum products for its own use and that the contracts with the Standard of New York and the Vacuum would in no way operate to the disadvantage of the Russian people. It was he who, acting for the Russian Naphtha Syndicate, signed the contracts with the two American oil companies.

"In the current fiscal year, 1926-1927," Mr. Bron said, "both production and consumption of oil products in the Soviet Union have exceeded the pre-war maxima. The consumption of kerosene in the territory formerly occupied by the Russian Empire before the war amounted to about 1,000,000 tons. The consumption of kerosene in the present territory of the Soviet Union—without Poland, Latvia, Lithuania and Esthonia—in 1925-1926 amounted to 688,000 metric tons, which represented a per capita consumption of twelve pounds. In the current year the consumption increased to 1,000,000 metric tons, representing a per capita consumption of sixteen pounds.

"During the next year it is expected to bring the consumption of kerosene to about 1,100,000 metric tons, which will signify a further increase of the per capita consumption. The actual situation is even better than might be judged from these figures since, with the development of hydroelectric power supply, electricity takes the place of kerosene in many cities and villages.

"There is also a steady growth of the home consumption of other oil products. However, this growth of internal consumption neither affects the export trade nor is it affected by the exports, since production in the various Russian oil fields is increasing at a greater rate than the internal consumption.

"The program for the next fiscal year calls for a production of 11,576,000 metric tons of all oil products. The consumption is figured at 6,564,000 metric tons, leaving a surplus of 5,012,000 for export and for reserves. Thus, the Soviet oil industry is fully equipped to meet both the home requirements and the growing demand for its products in foreign markets."

Letter Is Understood to Urge Closer Relations With Russia.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Ivy Lee of New York has written a long letter to Secretary Kellogg in which he is understood to have urged closer relations between the United States and Russia. Beyond admitting that a letter had been received from Mr. Lee, however, State Department officials refused to comment and declined to make the letter public.

Mr. Lee recently wrote to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States urging it to establish in Russia a trade bureau to improve business relations between the two countries, but the suggestion was rejected.

B. K. Marcus at 37 Heads Bank of United States

By his election yesterday to the Presidency of the Bank of United States, Bernard K. Marcus, who is 37 years old, became one of the youngest bank heads in the country. Mr. Marcus succeeds his late father, Joseph S. Marcus, who founded the bank in 1913 and was its first President. Bernard K. Marcus started his banking career in 1913 as cashier of his father's institution, and for several years has acted as executive head of the bank.

The directors of the Bank of United States also announced the election of Saul Singer as Executive Vice President and Chairman of the Executive Committee, and that of Henry W. Pollock, counsel for the bank, as director. The Bank of United States, which started with a capital of $100,000, now has total resources of more than $100,000,000.

MEXICO GETS LOAN HERE.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, July 28.—The Treasury Department issued a statement today announcing that the Government had arranged for a loan from the International Committee of Bankers.

In view of the lessening of income from the export and production of oil set aside to pay the interest on the external debt, the statement says, and because this income was not sufficient for the first six months of this year to cover back payments, the Secretary of the Treasury obtained from the bankers a loan of $2,000,000, which, with the $7,611,901 sent before June 30, makes a total corresponding to Mexico's obligations for the first six months of 1927.

"This sum will be delivered to the bondholders at once," the statement adds. "It must be observed that the total payment, corresponding to the months referred to, including the obligations of the railways, amounts to $16,547,596."

LOAN TO LISBON FAILS.

Portugal Refuses British Bankers' Offer of Advance in September.

VIGO, Spain, July 29 (AP).—It is understood here that the Portuguese Government has failed in negotiations with a group of English bankers for a loan.

The explanation of this is that the loan failed because the Government would not accept the condition that the first instalment should not be paid until September.

Unofficially it is declared here that this apparently unexpected condition by the bankers was based on statements made by political exiles who escaped after the Lisbon and Oporto revolutions of last February, who told the bankers that before next September the old party administration would be restored and that any external loan now made to the present government would not be recognized.

It was announced yesterday that Cluett, Peabody & Co. had perfected plans for the manufacture in Cuba of shirts, underwear, handkerchiefs and other articles for the Cuban trade. The site for the new factory is at San Antonio de los Banos, about twenty-five miles southwest of Havana. Operations are expected to start about Sept. 1. M. G. Blakeman will be in charge of manufacturing operations, and Schechter & Zoller, who have been Cluett, Peabody sales agents on the island for some years, will retain their sales rights.

"The decision to establish the Cuban manufactory was reached," said Edgar H. Betts, President of Cluett, Peabody, "on account of the new tariff differentials established by the Cuban Government in favor of home manufacturers. The revised tariff law of Cuba, which President Machado is expected to announce shortly, is very definitely designed, he said, to promote the manufacture in Cuba of products sold there, and consequently the differentials in favor of the home manufacturer are so great as to make prospects for United States exporters very difficult."

TEHERAN, Persia, July 29 (AP).—The Mejliss (National Assembly) after lengthy debate passed a resolution today requesting the Premier to assume the duties of Arthur C. Millispaugh, American Administrator General of Finances, pending the appointment of a successor.

A dispatch from Allahabad Tuesday said the Persian Government desired to renew Mr. Millispaugh's five-year contract, which has expired, but to curtail his powers. Mr. Millispaugh was said to have decided to take a three months' leave of absence.

American Bank Note Gains.

The American Bank Note Company and subsidiaries report for the first half of 1927 a net income of $1,000,923 after depreciation, Federal taxes and other charges, equivalent after dividends on the preferred stock to $1.76 a share earned on 494,829 shares of $10 par stock, or at the rate of 35.2 per cent. per annum. This compares with $353,964 or $1.45 a share in the first half of 1926. Net income for the June quarter was $550,408, against $478,122 in the same quarter of last year.

Asks Advancing of Valuation Cases.

WASHINGTON, July 29 (AP).—The Department of Justice has asked the Supreme Court to advance for hearing in the October term the valuation cases of the United States and the Interstate Commerce Commission against the Kansas City Southern and other Southwestern railways. The court was asked to reverse the decree of the Western District Court of Missouri annulling the valuation placed by the commission upon the railways.

PARIS, July 29.—Although transactions on the Bourse remained at practically the minimum, the general tone today was optimistic. All French securities, rentes, railroads and industrial shares remained steady and the prospect is for resumed activity with the beginning of the new month.

It was announced here that an agreement has been reached between representatives of Angora on one side and the French, English, Belgian, German and Italian holders of various Ottoman loans on the other side for the payment of 67 per cent. of these debts incumbent on Angora.

The agreement which must be ratified by the Angora Parliament and be accepted by the bond-holders, provides for the first payment on June 1, 1928. From 1928 to 1936 annuities of 1,960,000 Turkish gold pounds, from 1935 to 1941 annuities of 2,380,000, from 1941 to 1946 annuities of 2,780,000, from 1946 to 1951 annuities of 3,180,000 and from 1951 annuities of 3,400,000 will be paid.

Rentes closed as follows: 3s, 55.10 and 57.65; 4s of 1917, 60 and 60.80; 4s of 1918, 59.45 and 59.65; 5s, 88.50 and 88.95, and 6s, 87.80 and 90.

LONDON, July 29.—Domestic railway stocks were the centre of interest on the Stock Exchange today. Prices receded sharply this afternoon on the news that no interim payment would be made on the London & Northeastern second preferred shares.

The market generally was firm, the feature being a distinct turn for the better in the oil section. Investment securities maintained a good tone and European bonds were a little stronger.

Money was again plentiful in Lombard Street and the rate for new funds fell to 3 per cent. Old loans were renewed at 3½ per cent. Discount rates were unaltered.

Berlin Trading Turns Strong.

BERLIN, July 29.—The tendency in the Berlin Stock Exchange today was confident, despite the fact that the week end and ultimo pay day fell together. The principal stimulating factors were the comparatively moderate demand on the money market, the announcement of the redemption of Mexican coupons and the conviction that confiscated German property will soon be released by the United States.

A rumor that the report of the Commerz und Privatbank, which will be published Monday, will be very favorable, also exerted an encouraging influence. Textiles and artificial silk stocks were again boomed after yesterday's slump and Dye Trust was likewise in good demand.

Bank stocks closed at an average of 2 to 4 points higher; mining, up 3 to 4; heavy industries, 2 to 3; electro valves, 3 to 5; chemicals, 2 to 3; textiles, 10 to 15.

Day-to-day money advanced in rate to 6½ to 8½ per cent., although the demand was not heavy.

BANK HAS 22 OFFICES.

Manufacturers Trust Opens After Combining Two Institutions.

The Manufacturers Trust Company yesterday opened for business with twenty-two offices, instead of fifteen the day before, with its resources swelled to $275,000,000, as the physical transfer of the business of the merged Commonwealth Bank, which had five offices, and of the Standard Bank, which had two, took effect yesterday.

The rights to subscribe to 25,000 shares of new Manufacturers Trust at $450 a share expired at the close of business yesterday, and the new capital was all paid in. The taking up of the rights and acquisition of new stock by the stockholders has been in process actively for a number of days, with the result that the capital, surplus and undivided profits of the bank have been increased by $11,250,000. The capital now stands at $15,250,000, compared with $10,000,000 before the merger.

BALDWIN CAPITAL CHANGES PLANNED

TWO METHODS SUGGESTED

One Calls for Sale of Philadelphia Real Estate, Said to Be Worth More Than $30,000,000.

A complete readjustment of the capital structure of the Baldwin Locomotive Works was seen yesterday as a probability this year in consequence of the purchase by the Fisher Brothers of the General Motors Corporation of a large stock interest in the company and the preparation of two plans of financial reorganization by engineers acting in behalf of the Fisher interests.

It has been known for some time that the Fisher Brothers had bought into Baldwin, some estimates placing their present holdings at 120,000 shares. The outstanding capital stock consists of 300,000 shares of common and a like amount of preferred, all having voting power. It is not believed in Wall Street that the Fisher investment in the stock is at large as 120,000 shares, which would amount to virtual control, but their holdings are sufficiently large to give them a powerful voice in the corporation's affairs. Philadelphia dispatches yesterday quoted a representative of the firm of Drexel & Co. as saying he doubted that the Fisher Brothers and associates had purchased as much as 100,000 shares of the common stock.

Plans Arouse Interest.

Baldwin has been a sensation on the stock market for months and the announcement yesterday of proposed readjustment plans aroused much interest. One plan under consideration contemplates the creation of a $35,000,000 first mortgage issue of 5 per cent. ten-year bonds, $20,000,000 of 6 per cent. debenture stock, 200,000 shares of no par $7 preference stock without voting rights, and 500,000 shares of common stock. Proceeds from the sale of the bonds would be used to retire the present bonds and preferred stock. The preferred is callable at 125. Under this plan the present common would receive one share of debenture stock, one share of preference stock and two shares of new common for each share of present common. This plan provides fixed charges of $4,350,000 and common dividends of $3,300,000.

The alternative plan would preserve the present corporate status, with some charter amendments, among them a proposed change in the preferred stock so as to eliminate voting rights, to make it callable at 120 and to increase the authorized amount to 500,000 shares. The plan also would provide for an increase in the common shares from 200,000 of $100 par stock to 500,000 of no par value and would call for an issue of $35,000,000 of 5 per cent. first mortgage bonds so as to retire present bonds and preferred stock. The present common shares under this plan would be exchanged for twice the number of no par shares.

There would be under this plan a security distribution after the sale of the company's Philadelphia real estate, said to be worth more than $30,000,000.

Under the latter plan the fixed charges of the company would immediately become $1,750,000 and ultimately would expand to $2,500,000, as compared with the present fixed charges of $1,900,000.

To Make Other Products.

PHILADELPHIA, July 29.—One of the results of the Baldwin Locomotive reorganization, it is strongly hinted, will be a division of the authority now held by Samuel M. Vauclain, President of the organization. Another effect will be an immediate increase in productivity of the new Baldwin plant occupying a 600-acre tract at Eddystone. It is understood, moreover, that besides building locomotives the company will turn out a variety of other heavy steel and iron products. Included in these will be ship's plates for vessels to be built at Chester, Wilmington and other places along the Delaware River. The manufacture of marine engines also is planned.

CITY WITNESSES ASSAIL L. I. LAND VALUATION

Valuations for the real estate of the Long Island Railroad, about $65,000,000 less than the estimate of the railroad, were submitted yesterday by two witnesses for the city at the hearing of the railroad company's application for a 20 per cent. increase in commutation rates before Transit Commissioner Leon G. Godley and Public Service Commissioner George R. Lunn.

Charles Partridge, manager of the United States Housing Commission during the World War and now a Brooklyn real estate broker and appraiser, estimated the market value of the land used by the railroad at $27,450,000. Ira L. Terry, President of the North Shore Chapter of the Long Island Real Estate Board, estimated its value at $25,000,000. The railroad company has valued its real estate at $91,500,000.

Both witnesses were questioned by Assistant Corporation Counsel Vincent Victory. Under cross-examination by Alfred A. Gardner, counsel for the railroad, the witnesses said they made their estimates on the value of the land without reference to its use in railroad operation. A few days ago Dr. John Bauer, another expert witness for the city, valued the road's real property at $53,000,000.

Secretary of State Robert Moses, a resident of Long Island, testified that the railroad company in computing its valuation figures, upon which it based its application for an increase in commutation fares, should have used original costs instead of the value of adjacent property at the present time. This contention was disputed by Mr. Gardner.

The hearing was adjourned to Monday at which time the city is expected to complete the presentation of its case in opposition to the increase. The two commissioners, which have joint jurisdiction, will then consider the testimony and render a decision.

Maurice Hotchner, counsel of the Association of Long Island Commuters, said that during the three years in which the application has been pending the commuters had already saved more than $12,000,000 in increased rates by fighting the case.

THE NEW HAVEN FILES PLANS

Seeks I. C. C. Sanction for New Stock in Meeting Government Debt.

WASHINGTON, July 29 (AP).—The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad placed before the Interstate Commerce Commission today the plan which it has adopted to begin the payment of its $87,030,000 debt to the Government.

As a preliminary step the company sought approval for an issue of $49,036,700 in new 7 per cent. preferred stock, which it will offer to its stockholders at par on Oct. 1, with an arrangement by which J. P. Morgan & Co. will underwrite the entire issue for a commission of 2 per cent.

Later on the company hopes to issue bonds to pay off the balance of the Government account.

Jersey Central Alters Divisions.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey will extend its central division, now covering territory between Jersey City and Phillipsburg, N. J., to include Allentown, Pa., effective on Monday, Aug. 1. The division will thereafter include a portion of the present Lehigh and Susquehanna division from Easton to Allentown. The latter division will include all territory between Allentown and Scranton, Pa.

RAILROADS REPORT REDUCED INCOMES

MICHIGAN CENTRAL DROPS

Ford's Road Has $2,300 Deficit for June and Drop of Nearly $700,000 in Six Months.

A dozen statements composed yesterday's list of reports of railroad earnings for June and the first half of 1927. The chief point of interest in these reports, several of which were those of railroads which suffered from the floods of the Middle West, was the reflection of the depression caused by those disasters and, in addition, by the comparative lightness of Spring wheat shipments, the lessened movement of coal and other factors.

The Missouri Pacific revealed a drop in gross revenues for June from $10,500,000 last year to $9,600,000 this year, and in gross revenue for the six months from $63,700,000 to $60,100,000. Net income for June dropped from $1,400,000 to $684,000, and that for the half year from $8,700,000 to $5,800,000.

The Michigan Central also showed losses in both gross and net receipts for the two periods, the six-month's gross declining from $47,400,000 to $44,800,000.

Henry Ford's Detroit, Toledo & Ironton reported for June a drop from a net income of $220,000 last year to a net operating deficit of $2,300 this year, while the net income for the six months fell off from $1,200,000 to $363,000. Gross revenues for both periods also declined materially.

12.3 PER CENT. GAIN IN BANK CLEARINGS

Bank clearings in twenty-three leading centres of the United States this week are greater than they were a year ago, mainly due to another heavy total in New York, Dun's Review reports. The total for the week at all cities reporting is $8,758,848,000, against $7,794,739,000 a year ago, and New York City's total of $5,508,000,000 is 21 per cent. above the figure for the same week of 1926. At the outside centres clearings of $3,247,848,000 show a gain of 0.2 per cent. The gain in percentage for all cities is 12.3. BANK HERE RECEIVES $1,200,000 OF GOLD

The American Exchange Irving Trust Company announced yesterday that it had received on the steamship Rotterdam a shipment of $1,200,000 of gold. While no additional details were given out, it is understood that the gold came from Holland, which already this month had sent more than $4,000,000 gold to New York.

The transfer of gold was a special transaction similar to recent shipments which were made possible by a combination of exchange rates, insurance and shipping rates. The American Exchange Irving Trust Company has been active all year in this type of transaction, having received a large part of the heavy shipments of gold that were sent to New York by France last Winter and Spring.

Dutch guilders were quoted yesterday at slightly more than 40 cents, within a fraction of par, but there has recently been a reduction in steamship rates on gold from Holland, and this caused a readjustment in the rate at which exports are profitable. Holland has been losing gold steadily for some time, and it is considered possible that the discount rate of its central bank will be advanced from its present level of 2½ per cent. in order to check the outflow.

WITTEN HAS NEW PLAN FOR PITTSBURGH BANK

PITTSBURGH, Pa., July 29.—Organization with Eastern capital of a new bank in Pittsburgh out of the former Brotherhood Savings and Trust Company through the efforts of Thomas J. Witten, Philadelphia capitalist, is said to be assured.

Former Mayor William A. Magee, Pittsburgh representative of Mr. Witten, has conferred with thirty of the major stockholders of the Brotherhood Bank relative to the plan and they were unanimously in favor of it. He placed it before 200 stockholders tonight.

"We have been in Philadelphia several times to confer with Mr. Witten and he sent his son here to investigate conditions. If the stockholders of the Brotherhood Bank vote in favor of the plan, Mr. Witten will be formally asked to take over the bank's affairs.

"A new bank would be organized with a capital stock of $300,000 and a surplus of $125,000. The Brotherhood stockholders will be asked to subscribe for the number of shares in the new bank that they hold in the old bank, paying for them with notes due in twenty-four monthly instalments.

"In the meantime, they would be paid for their old stock from the proceeds of the liquidation of the old bank, soon to take place, and the first earnings of the new bank. No dividends would be paid on the new stock until the old bank's stock had been entirely bought up.

"The old bank, capitalized at $500,000, had only $160,000 of issued stock. Mr. Witten would be asked to acquire the remaining $340,000 of stock in order to start the new bank.

"The entire arrangement is the first project that would definitely assure the Brotherhood stockholders of receiving all that they had invested and would give them the opportunity of buying Witten stock, which is at a premium in Philadelphia."

BANK UNDECIDED ON STOCK.

Bowery & East River Postpones Shareholders' Meeting.

The adjournment of the special meeting of stockholders of the Bowery and East River National Bank from July 26 to Aug. 9 was explained unofficially yesterday as being due to the indecision of the directors at the time of the meeting as to the exact amount of new stock which should be offered.

The bank was reported to have planned to increase its capital stock from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 by the sale of $1,000,000 new stock at $160 par value at $450 a share, and it was believed that instead of crediting the additional $3,500,000 in proceeds from the sale of stock to surplus it was planned to acquire certain banking properties in the metropolitan area. This surmise was not commented upon by officers of the bank.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

Buoyancy in the French franc as a result of repurchases by those who went "short" of the bill at the week's outset featured the foreign exchange market yesterday. Buying was in good volume and lifted the bill 3-16 cent, to 3.91 5-16 cents, at the close. Sterling held steady around $4.85¼, in fairly active trading, but the Italian unit slumped a fraction to 5.43 cents.

In the so-called neutrals, business was small and rate changes negligible. Scandinavians, Swiss, Spanish, Holland and Belgian were all firm. German marks continued strong at 23.77½ cents. Chinese covering of the Japanese yen sent the latter up sharply, while their own currencies sagged. A brisk rally in the Uruguayan peso, which had been weak, featured the South Americans. Others were unchanged. Canadian was firm. The Mexican peso rose to within a few points of the year's highest on good buying reported to be due to overtures by bankers and Mexican officials for strengthening the currency.

PHONE IMPROVEMENTS TO COST $9,605,585

The directors of the New York Telephone Company have authorized the expenditure of $9,605,585 for new construction work in its territory, bringing the total appropriations made since Jan. 1 to $55,363,430, of which $45,909,990 was set aside for the construction of additional plant facilities in the metropolitan area.

Erection of a telephone central office building in Fifty-sixth Street, between Second and Third Avenues, installation of additional equipment in the Beekman and Westchester central offices in Manhattan and the Bronx and in the Foxcroft and Atlantic central offices in Brooklyn are among the outstanding items provided for by the new appropriations.

An extensive program of cable construction in connection with the Eighth Avenue subway excavation is planned, and additions to the outside plant are to be made in several central office districts in the Bronx. In Westchester County provision has been made for installing additional equipment in the Ossining central office and for general outside plant construction in the Larchmont and Mamaroneck exchange districts.

Additions to be made to the telephone plant in suburban Long Island include a new manual central office unit in the telephone building in Elmhurst, general additions to the Bayside, Huntington, Port Washington and Roslyn central offices, and to the Garden City toll switchboard. Considerable outside plant construction is projected in Garden City and Westbury.

In the second quarter of 1927 the various associated companies of the Bell System and the Long Lines Department of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company appropriated $114,000,000 for additions to plant, bringing the total of such appropriations made in the first half year to nearly $208,000,000.

INDUSTRIAL FAVORITES GAIN OVER THE COUNTER

Demand for Insurance Stocks Continues—Several Bank Shares Marked Down.

Activity in the over-the-counter market yesterday was confined for the most part to a small list of upturns in a few of the old industrial favorites and a continued demand for insurance stocks. Sugar issues registered were quite active and the bank stocks underwent new comparisons, with the result that several were marked down, the first in the list in about two weeks.

Zieley Processes continued its upward swing with a 6 point gain. Celluloid preferred was up 2 points and smaller gains came in Bunker Hill, Eastern Dairy common and United Publishers preferred. Rolls-Royce preferred was up 3 points and the common gained a point. Superheater was off 2 points and Syracuse Washing Machine lost a point.

Aetna Casualty led the insurance stocks with an upturn of 25 points. Hartford Fire and Fidelity-Phenix gained 5 points. Five point advances were seen in Hartford Insurance and Aetna Life. Continental Insurance passed 120 for a gain of 6 points on the day. Except for Southwestern Bell Telephone preferred the telegraph and telephone stocks were quiet. Southwestern was up a point.

The downturn in bank stocks showed Textile down 25 points and Harriman off 10 points, while United States Mortgage and Trust eased 5 points. In the sugar group National Sugar was up 2 points and Fajardo and Central Aguirre were each down one point. Metropolitan Chain Stores common eased off a point and Metropolitan 5-50 Cent Stores preferred moved up a point.

FOR WORLD MOTOR TRANSIT

Alfred Reeves Reports International Campaign Under Way.

Alfred Reeves, general manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, returned yesterday on the Aquitania after a meeting in Paris with motor representatives of England, France, Germany, Belgium, Italy, Austria and Holland, which resulted in the formation of a committee headed by Roy D. Chapin of Detroit, President of the national body, to study transportation in the leading countries and to assist in fostering the use of cars, buses and trucks.

Mr. Reeves said notable progress has been made in Sweden, Norway, Denmark and Finland, where 85 per cent. of all motors were of American manufacture. He added that European manufacturers, recognizing the need for better highways, had joined with American makers in plans to make a world's survey of highways, especially as related to cost of building and maintenance.

Louisiana Governor Seeks Conference—Expects Extra Session.

BATON ROUGE, La., July 29 (AP).—Governor Simpson today, anticipating the call of a special session of Congress for flood relief, wrote Governor Martineau of Arkansas and Governor Murphree of Mississippi asking that both of them name a committee of five men to meet with a similar committee from Louisiana to agree upon some plan of action for the three States most affected.

Lien on 18 Buses Cripples Line.

CAMDEN, N. J., July 29—Service on the bus line of the Pennsylvania and New Jersey Transit Company, operating between Philadelphia, Haddonfield and Woodbury, was crippled today when constables seized fifteen of the buses to cover a lien against the company obtained by John McLennan, garage proprietor. It is alleged the company has failed to pay McLennan a $1,400 gas and oil bill. The manager of the company said he hoped to adjust matters and resume full service tomorrow.

EVOLVES NEW FORM FOR GAS CHARGES

OPTIONAL WITH CONSUMER

Substitutes Demand Unit for 1,000 Cubic Feet, Basis—Nearly Ready for Commission.

A new form as the basis of charging for gas to big consumers, which has engaged the attention of gas experts for many months, has been virtually completed so far as the Consolidated Gas Company is concerned, it was said yesterday, and may be ready for filing with the Public Service Commission within a day or two.

Two problems confront the companies. One is how to establish a system by which the average monthly consumption of gas throughout the year can be gauged with fair accuracy, and the other is to increase this consumption.

Under the present system of payment the consumer who uses 100,000 cubic feet of gas or less a month pays $2.15 for each 100 thousand feet. The next 100,000 feet costs $1.10, and the rates thereafter decline, until the user of one million feet and more pays 90 cents. It is said that new outlets can be obtained only by encouraging present big consumers who use less than 1,000,000 feet a month to use more, so that the minimum rate may be obtained, by supplanting the use of coal and oil with gas, with the discovery and opening of new fields.

New Plan Optional.

The new plan, or form, is optional with consumers. How it will work to the advantage of large consumers was explained in this way:

"Out of the big customers of the Consolidated company has used an average of nearly 30,000,000 feet of gas a month since 1922. For this gas the minimum rate of 95 cents was paid. Under the optional rate the price would be about 85 cents. Under the new form the 1,000 cubic feet basis would be disregarded as the unit of measurement and in its place there would be the demand unit.

"The large industrial user who would require 1,000,000 feet a month would have a daily demand of 33,000 feet approximately. The big consumers in this territory use more gas between November and April, the six peak months, and less during the rest of the year, known as the valley months. Under the new form he would have an average expense for gas of 92 cents, 80 cents during the valley months and $1.22 for the peak months.

"About 18 per cent. of users of gas are those who use more than 100,000 cubic feet a month, and only about 1 per cent. of these use 1,000,000 feet or more. The new plan would be of service to those who use more than 100,000 feet of gas a month and whose use of it is fairly stabilized.

Details Not Complete.

"All of the details of the plan have not been completed, and before it is ready to file with the commission it may undergo important changes, but you have the general idea. Another point is that when a customer agrees to an average monthly charge he is firmly fixed as a customer of the company and the income to the company from that particular source can be depended upon for a year at least."

It was said that the Consolidated company does no better than break even during the valley months and that its net earnings for the peak months determine its profits. The earnings of some of the other companies in the outlying sections of the city are greater in the Summer months because of the large influx of Summer visitors. It was suggested that the new plan probably would be slow in inducing big users to adopt it because of the fear that they might lose by it.

What the gas companies are seeking, it was explained, is to attract new industrial users, by proving to them in the proposed new form, or in some other way, that gas is more economical than any other form of fuel, because of the low price when the larger quantities are used, because of the certainty of the supply and because of its cleanliness. It was also explained that if the companies could more accurately gauge the amount of the daily demand their overhead would be less.

Spear & Co. Increases Profits.

Spear & Co. report a consolidated net profit of $488,380 for the first half of 1927, after expenses, depreciation, interest and reserve for Federal taxes. This was equivalent, after preferred dividends, to $1.06 a share, earned on 235,000 shares of no par common stock outstanding. In the like period of 1926 the net profit was $367,577, or 65 per cent. less than in 1927. Net sales this year were $7,210,544, as against $8,144,670 in the same period of 1926.

TELAUTOGRAPH'S PROFIT UP

Increases for Second Quarter and First Half of Year.

The Telautograph Corporation reports for the June quarter a net profit of $65,408 after depreciation, interest and Federal taxes, equivalent after preferred dividend requirements to 27 cents a share earned on 193,000 no par shares of common stock. ACTIVITY DECREASES IN THE CURB MARKET

UTILITY MARKET COLLAPSES

Some Shares Make New Highs and Ford of Canada Comes Close to Its All-Time Record.

Lessened activity and an unsettled list followed an active morning marked by the collapse of the barely awakened utility market on the New York Curb Exchange yesterday. Although a number of industrials, and especially chemical processes, were actively sought throughout the day, the movement was not general and no actual trend could be perceived. In the aggregate, however, the list closed with a weak undertone.

American Light and Traction, Blackstone Valley Gas, Commonwealth Edison, Mohawk Valley and United Railway and Electric of Baltimore were among the leaders in the weak utility group, but the fact that the declines resulted from insignificant turnovers is rather inconclusive. Southwestern Power and Light and Southeastern; both preferred issues, gained a point more or less.

American Cyanamid B, Brill Corporation A and B, Brillo Manufacturing at a new high, Celanese new shares, Commercial Solvents w. i. and a number of others showed the interest in chemical industries, although Celluloid common and preferred reacted suddenly, after the common attained a new high, to the merger news. American Rayon lost a point.

Eastern Steamships, Gobel, Cuneo Press, Bigelow Carpets, Union and United Tobacco, and Metro 5 to 50 Cent Stores preferred were a diversified group to close at highs for the year. Royal Baking Powder advanced 12 points to a new high, but closed after losing half its gain. New York Central new also established a new high, but closed ¼ point under the top, while Maine Central fell sharply.

Weakness developed in Hercules Powder, American Manufacturing, Deere & Co., Grand Stores and Libbey-Owens, while Mirror preferred and Fanny Farmer were strong, and Ford Motor of Canada came close to its all-time record.

In the oil group Illinois and Prairie Pipe were conspicuously weak. Lone Star Gas and Tidal Osage were strong, while South Penn Oil eased.

The net income for the first half of 1927 was $944,465, or $2.82 a share, on the common stock, against $796,062, or $1.74 a share, in the first half of 1926.

BEARS IN COMMAND, GRAIN PRICES FALL

VALUES AT NEW LOW LEVELS

Better Corn Crop Prospects Bring Short Selling and Realizing by Longs.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 29.—A bearish feeling dominated the grain trade especially in wheat and rye with corn acting fairly, considering the break in the other grains. Prices reached new low levels on the present downturn, on which there were irregular rallies caused by an oversold pit condition.

It would be no surprise to see prices drop a few cents lower as the trade sees it, and there was buying of bids after the close. The receipts were large, 775 cars at Chicago and 1,554 cars at Kansas City and Omaha, against 1,194 cars last year. These two markets had more than 50 per cent. of the total receipts at Winter wheat points.

Export sales were only 300,000 bushels, while there were inquiries here for boats to load wheat for Montreal next week. Sales of hard Winters at Montreal were said to have been made as low as 9 cents over Chicago September.

Another market factor was the continued large export of corn from Argentina, 9,780,000 bushels, or more than 19,000,000 bushels in two weeks.

Liquidation and lower prices were on in all grains, with buying support fair at times in wheat and corn, but rather poor in other grains. There were net losses in wheat of 1¾@2¾ cents, with July leading. Liverpool was off ¾@1¼ pence. All the other wheat markets were weak, with Winnipeg 1¾@2¼ cents lower, July leading. Minneapolis lost 1@1¾ cents and Kansas City 1¼@1¾ cents. There were deliveries of 1,543,000 bushels cash wheat on July contracts in Chicago, which depressed the July at $1.39@1.36¾, with the finish at $1.36¼@1.36¾. At the close July had only ⅛ cent premium over the September. December finished at $1.40¾@1.40¾. Cash demand for wheat was too small.

The corn crop was advanced by good rains over a majority of the leading States in the belt. High temperatures have also been a factor forcing the crop along during the last two days and creating a belief that there is still hope for a fairly good production. This has brought pressure from short sellers, and realizing by longs, with the pit traders more inclined to press the selling side on bulges. Weakness in wheat also had a depressing influence but in all corn gave a good account of itself.

A feature of the market was the pressure on July and September on all hard spots. Commission houses have been persistent buyers of late and sold September and bought December and early in the day were sellers of December. The spread between these two months early was 1¼ cents and later 2⅛ cents. July came out freely and closed at $1.01¾, or ⅝ cent above the low point. September finished at $1.04¾@1.04⅞, or at nearly the lowest of the day and December at $1.06⅜ to $1.06⅝, showing more strength than any of the other deliveries.

July oats were sold freely by holders and they reached 41¾ cents, with the close ⅝ cent above that figure, losing ⅛ cent for the day, while the deferred futures were off ⅛ to ⅜ cent at the last, with September 43⅜ to 44⅛ cents and December 46⅜. Crop reports were unfavorable but cut no figure.

Howell sold July rye liberally and with the help of liquidators there was a break from $1.06 to 98¼ cents. Later prices rallied to $1.00¾, a net loss of 6¼ cents for the day. September closed at 92¼ to 93⅜ cents.

Primary receipts of wheat today, 4,319,000 bushels; week ago, 3,471,000 bushels; last year, 3,900,000 bushels. Corn receipts today, 330,000 bushels; week ago, 557,000 bushels; year ago, 404,000 bushels. Wheat shipments today, 1,772,000 bushels; week ago, 853,000 bushels; years ago, 1,376,000 bushels. Corn shipments today, 300,000 bushels; week ago, 725,000 bushels; year ago, 274,000 bushels.

NEW YORK GRAIN MARKETS.

Wheat Declines Under Steady Pressure—Oats Also Weaker.

Trade in wheat futures continued on a fairly good scale on the New York Produce Exchange yesterday. The market was under pressure of general selling and closed with losses of 1¾ to 1¾ cents a bushel. At no time did prices display any rallying power. The smallness of export demand, together with favorable Spring wheat weather and crop advices and heavier interior receipts, offset all other factors.

Oats were weaker on good weather, scattered liquidation, with the weakness in corn and limited domestic and export demand.

RUBBER TRADING DULL.

Market Condition Attributed to 3-Day Holiday in London.

Business in crude rubber futures yesterday was a colorless event, although the list was steady and final schedules showed gains of from 10 to 20 points. The market's dullness was ascribed to the fact that London closed early for a three-day holiday over the month-end, which was an attraction to many operators to take a brief respite from business. As a result, only fifty-one contracts changed hands.

London was firm during the short interval of trading, spot and August closing unchanged. The distant months also finished without change from Thursday. Average spot price for the current quarter was 18.165d.

RAIN AIDS CANADIAN CROPS.

Bank of Montreal Reports Good Indications for Wheat.

Warm dry weather, which was badly needed in Canada, prevailed last week, and has been of inestimable advantage to all crops, according to the Bank of Montreal. In British Columbia, the Martime Provinces and the Prairie Provinces the continued good weather has accelerated the growth, and all crops are in good condition. The only unfavorable factors have been scattered hail losses in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

The wheat crop gives every evidence of being good. In the Prairie Provinces about 75 per cent. of the wheat is headed up, and in Ontario Fall wheat cutting will be general within the next few days if the weather continues to be favorable. Prospects are especially good in Alberta, where wheat is headed, is in bloom and is filling at some points.

THE WEEK'S PRICE TREND.

Changes Were Few, but the Advances Exceeded the Declines.

Not only were the changes in Dun's list of wholesale commodities prices fewer this week than last, but they showed a slight excess of advances over declines. There were but fifty-six, of which thirty were upward. Last week there were thirty-six advances in seventy-two changes. Features were limited.

The following table gives the minimum wholesale prices quoted on selected standard commodities this week. They are corrected to yesterday, and with them are given comparative prices for last week and the corresponding week a year ago:

Nineteen changes were seen in the foodstuffs this week, of which eleven were declines. Recessions of 10 and 15 cents a barrel, respectively, occurred in Spring patent and Winter soft straight flours, but there was a rise of 10 cents a barrel in the best Minnesota family flour. Middle Western lard was lower here, but hams and bacon did not change. At Chicago live hogs, live steers and best fat lambs were higher. Mess pork and fat ewes were unchanged, but short ribs declined.

Changes in the dairy products were few and small. They consisted of an advance of half a cent a pound in extra creamery butter and of a rise of a similar amount a dozen in prime fresh-gathered eggs.

The fresh and dried fruits were devoid of change either way this week, but two sharp recessions were seen in the vegetables. They consisted of declines of 50 cents a bag in onions and 65 cents a barrel in potatoes.

Both No. 7 Rio and No. 4 Santos coffees were lower in the beverage list, which showed no other change. Fine granulated sugar advanced, but there was no change in 96-test raw sugar. Save for a rise in red Mombasa pepper, all of the changes in the spices were downward. They consisted of declines in Zanzibar cloves, black Lampong pepper and white Singapore pepper.

Revisions in the grains included advances in corn and rye and declines in wheat, oats and malting barley. Hay was higher, but straw declined. Leathers were quotably unchanged, but in the hides there were declines in branded cows, No. 1 extremes, No. 1 Kips and No. 1 calfskins.

The lumber list and the building materials were bare of change. In the metals the only revisions were advances in antimony, zinc and lead.

The number of changes in the combined lists for drugs, chemicals, dyestuffs and oils was small. There were but seven, of which four were downward. Revisions in the naval stores included a rise in resin and recessions in turpentine and tar.

The miscellaneous changes of the week included advances in hemp and jute, and also in American litharge and American red lead paint. There was a decline in Eastern crude rubber.

Changes in the textiles were more numerous this week than for a long while. Light and heavy burlaps went up sharply, and there were many advances in the cotton goods, both finished and unfinished. The more important ones in the finished cloths included percales, wide sheetings, flannels, staple ginghams, &c.

COTTON RECOVERS, THEN LOSES GAINS

ARBITRAGING GOES ON HERE

There was a further recovery in cotton in the early trading yesterday, but the market ran into an increased supply of contracts and lost all the gain made the previous day. Prices worked off a quarter of a cent and closed at the lowest quotations of the session at a loss of 15 to 17 points. For the third consecutive day comparatively little rain fell in Atlantic sections, while heavy rainfall was reported over a large part of Oklahoma, and predictions were for general showers throughout the Cotton States today. A feature of trading was the first definite evidence of hedge selling against the new crop now beginning to appear in Southern markets.

Though foreign prices made a partial recovery, a loss of a quarter of a cent in Alexandria left American contracts in Liverpool closer to New York quotations than for some time and this brought arbitrage selling in the local market. Thursday's sharp rally here and in New Orleans reduced the floating short interest, while commission houses as well as several Southern interests bought cotton for sale on the advance. Outside demand for contracts failed to broaden as the session advanced and scattered realizing operations continued to the close.

Several private crop reports were issued. Clement Curtis placed the condition at 73.1, indicating a yield of 14,418,000; the Japan Trading Company at 73, with a crop of 14,578,000, and Norman Mayer with a condition of 70.7 pointing to a yield of 14,500,000.

Week-end figures showed heavy spinners' takings of 274,000 as compared with 215,000 last year, making 18,122,000 for the season, against 15,079,000 last year. The amount in sight is 92,000, compared with 51,000 last year, bringing the total movement for the season to 19,254,000, compared with 16,259,000 last year. The visible lost 140,000, compared with a decrease of 164,000 last year, leaving the supply 3,410,000, compared with 2,299,000 a year ago.

SUGAR, COFFEE, COCOA.

Sugar.

Raw sugar futures market of the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange opened unchanged to 5 points off yesterday. Selling by brokers with Cuban connections and European interests caused a sharp drop in prices during the early trading. This reaction was attributed to the fact that the advance the day previous resulted in an overbought condition. The market for the rest of the day was dull as a result of the decline in futures. The price level for raws was difficult to judge as refiners were not interested enough to indicate what they would be willing to pay, while the offerings were at a standstill. Withdrawal demand in refined was fair, but new business was small.

Price ranges in the raw sugar futures market yesterday were:

Coffee.

A firmer tone developed in the raw coffee futures market yesterday as a result of scattered short covering and buying by commission house interests. Outside interest remain quiet with a number of the more prominent operators refusing to take a position on either side of the market. Trading was light and reports from the primary markets showed practically no change. Both Rios and Santos showed a slight improvement in the spot market. Rios were cheaper due to the cheaper Java offers, while Santos 4s were quoted at 16¾ to 17 cents.

Cocoa.

Cocoa futures on the New York Cocoa Exchange were very inactive yesterday. Prices advanced 10 to 20 points early in the session on manufacturing and European buying, but reacted toward the close on evening up commitments on the part of local traders. However, the market closed steady at 4 to 14 points higher. The actual market appeared to be slightly firmer.

NEW SHIP LAUNCHED FOR MORGAN LINE

LARGEST STEAMER IN FLEET

12,000-Ton Oil Burner Is 445 Feet Long, With Capacity for 379 Passengers and Freight.

A new 12,000-ton passenger and freight steamship for the Morgan Line service between New York City and Gulf ports was launched in the Passaic River yesterday by the Southern Pacific Steamship Company at the yards of the Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company of Kearny, N. J. Mrs. Lewis J. Spence, the wife of the chief executive officer of the Southern Pacific Company, broke a bottle of champagne over the prow and christened the ship "Dixie."

The Dixie is an oil-burning steamer with a passenger capacity of 379 and a speed of 16 knots and will be manned by a crew of 114 men. It was designed by A. S. Hebble, superintending engineer of the Southern Pacific Company, and is equipped throughout with the most modern appointments, including telephones in each stateroom. In the suites both salt and fresh water will be available for bathing.

Extra precautions against fire have been taken in the construction of the Dixie and in addition to the usual fire mains the cargo holds, machinery rooms and deck levels are protected by an Aero-Pneumatic Rich Smoke Detector and Lux protection system.

The Dixie is well provided with public rooms. In addition to lobbies on all passenger decks and a dining room in which 212 persons may be seated, the vessel will have smoking rooms, a writing room, lounge and music room, a smoke room, barber shop and a café conveniently located for all decks. The large observation sun parlor and dance room will be glass enclosed, permitting wide visibility.

The main propelling unit of the vessel is a De Laval geared turbine driving a single screw and capable of developing 8,000 horsepower with a normal power of 7,100.

The Dixie, 445 feet in length, 60 feet in beam and 37 feet deep, is considerably larger than any of the other ships of the fleet. The three other passenger ships, the Comus, Momus and Creole, were built in Atlantic coast shipyards in 1900, 1908 and 1907 respectively, and of these the latest built is a twin-screw steamer. The Comus and Momus are designated as of the schooner type.

When inducted into the Morgan Line service in the Fall, the Dixie will be in the command of Captain Charles P. Masson, who is at present master of the Momus, plying between New York and New Orleans.

Nearly a thousand persons witnessed the launching ceremony yesterday and about a third of these as guests of the building company were served luncheon in the offices of the company in Kearny Meadows, where the plant is located.

Advances Price of Lead to 6.60c.

TRADE RECOVERING, REVIEWS ANNOUNCE

MANY LINES ARE AFFECTED

Wholesale Buying More Active, With Orders for Supplies Covering Longer Period.

A recovery that is unusual at this period is reported in business activity, forward buying and commodity prices by both of the weekly trade reviews, which announce generally improved returns from most lines of endeavor and expectations for good business for the balance of the year.

"Reports on trade and industry this week displayed a somewhat more cheerful tone," Bradstreet's says, "reflecting the continuance of warm weather, a slightly improved crop outlook, better buying of cotton goods and a moderate expansion in steel orders and mill operations. Wholesale buying was more active in a number of lines, and dealers showed a little more disposition to place future orders than for some time past. Cotton goods moved well, and prices rose, following the raw material, which is now hovering close to the nineteen-cent level. Shoes, hardware and canned goods were in fair to good demand, and wholesalers and jobbers generally were more optimistic on the outlook for the remainder of the year. Retail trade was stimulated by reduction sales, but was not equal to a year ago.

"Woolens and worsteds were rather quiet, except for certain lines of fine dress fabrics, on which price advances were announced. Raw wool prices held firm, but buying was less active than in the earlier weeks of the month. Broad silks and raw silk were dull. Hides and leather, in line with the increase in shoe production, were higher in prices, and some grades sold well. The automobile situation was rather mixed, with a few companies fairly busy, following price cuts and the introduction of new models, while others were operating at a low rate, and the general level of production was considerably below a year ago."

Dun's Review says:

"July is closing with more activity in some quarters and with more firmness in commodity prices than appeared when the month opened. Midsummer gains in business have a special interest, for they are rather unusual, except in lines that are stimulated by purely seasonal influences. The expansion now is mainly moderate, and is by no means widespread, yet the progressive upward trend in certain of the principal trades is a constructive development.

"The general business situation now, as it has been for a long time, is marked by sharp irregularities and contrasts, but it is hardly to be expected that favorable phases will prevail simultaneously in all channels. There is an overproduction in some instances, competition for orders nearly everywhere is exceptionally keen, with a consequent narrowing of profit margins and the practice of purchasing in relatively small lots, and chiefly for current or near-by needs, is being rigidly adhered to. Yet that policy, if causing difficulty in arranging manufacturing schedules, tends to minimize the possibilities of a sudden reaction, inventories being kept within conservative limits.

"As was clearly foreshadowed, financial statements for the second quarter and for the half year show somewhat widely varying results, but the reports of the leading units in the steel and automobile industries are highly satisfactory.

"In response to these bullish exhibits, and also because of a maintenance of low money rates, the buoyancy of the stock market has become still more pronounced. With a more promising outlook for crops and with a sustained large consumption of merchandise, prospects for Autumn trade are viewed with confidence in most circles, and in parts of the West sentiment has strengthened noticeably."

GIVE UP CLAIMS TO ESTATE.

Children, to Follow Father's Wish, Abide by Will Rejected in Court.

RIVERHEAD, N. Y., July 29 (AP).—Two sons have disinherited themselves and a daughter cut herself off with $1,000 in deference to what they believed was their father's dying wish, although they might legally have received one-fourth of the estate apiece.

Charles R. Rudolph, a printer, died last May in Babylon, leaving an estate designated as "in excess of $10,000." The original of his will could not be found, but a copy was discovered, leaving $1,000 to a daughter in Denver and the residue to Edward R. Rudolph, a son. Two other sons, Charles R. Jr. and Richard R., the latter living in Boston, were cut off. Surrogate Pelletreau refused to probate the copy today on the ground that the testator might have destroyed the original himself. The two disinherited sons, who appeared in favor of probating the copy, announced that they would abide by the terms of the will and would turn over their shares of the estate to the brother their father favored. Their sister, they said, would do the same, keeping only the $1,000 willed her.

DENIES LOWELL IS "DEAD."

Massachusetts Chamber of Commerce Answers Slur on City.

BOSTON, July 29 (AP).—The Massachusetts State Chamber of Commerce today added its support to the protest of President Ernest D. Scribner of the Lowell Chamber of Commerce in reply to a statement of Robert J. Eustace, Toledo Industrial Commissioner, that Lowell is a "dead city because that is the psychology of the city itself."

The Massachusetts organization made public a message to Benjamin H. Bonner, manager of the Toledo Chamber of Commerce, objecting to what it termed the "unfounded and maliciously false statements" attributed to Mr. Eustace in a speech before the Exchange Club of New York yesterday.

"The truth, of course," the message said, "is that Eustace uses Lowell's temporary depression in the textile industry as ground for sweeping assertion that does grave injustice." It declared the business men of Lowell are maintaining a spirit that is "rapidly overcoming any industrial inactivity due to the textile situation."

THE BUSINESS WORLD

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday, 4 per cent. for the best names
Thursday, 4 to 4½ per cent. for the best names
The quotations are for six months' paper.

Floor Coverings More Active.

Although July has run true to form as one of the quietest months in the year for makers of floor coverings, there have been definite signs of improvement during the last few days. Several important Western wholesalers have been in the market laying down their final carpet and rug orders for Fall and, while this business has not been of great proportions, it is said to augur well for the future. The jobbing trade, as a whole, has been particularly busy this season, with the result that a good-sized volume of duplicate business is expected from that quarter in the course of the next four to six weeks. Signs of an improving call for linoleums and felt-base goods are also apparent here, largely due to contract work in new buildings.

Hard Coal Prospects Brighter.

With July in the background, Seward's Journal will say today, the anthracite producers and distributers are confident that they are through the worst of the depression. A picking up in wholesale demand is bound to come some time during August, and many think that, owing to the limited amount of replenishment which the retail trade has been doing lately, it will become noticeable early in the month. Not enough new business is coming into the bituminous market materially to change the general situation, either in regard to prices or mining activity. In the high volatile fields a scarcity of lump orders is creating a shortage of slack that is reflected in slightly higher quotations on tonnage for August shipment.

Gray Goods Remain Quiet.

Trading in gray goods was again light here yesterday. Spot business in 39-inch 68-72 printcloths was put through at 5¼ cents, and there was also trading in spot 38½-inch 64-60s at 7⅞ cents. For spot 36-inch 6.15-yard sheetings buyers paid 6 cents, and they took 5-yard sheetings of the same width at 7¼ cents. The best price available on 37-inch 3.95-yard drills was 5½ cents, which was paid. The specialties were inactive and featureless, but in the fine-yarn goods there was further trading in rayon alpacas, voiles, &c.

Velvet Orders Have Been Good.

Velvets continue to meet with strong fashion support and, from every indication, will be among the leading formal fabrics for the Fall season. The advance business in them has been good, and the dress and cloak trades as well as the high-grade privates tailors, are still placing substantial orders. Some importers and manufacturers of velvets are credited with doing more business during the last few months than in any similar period in the last two or three years. Black has led the color demand so far.

Buy Fewer Cottons for Export.

Rising prices for cotton goods in this market have checked buying for export, but there are still plenty of inquiries about merchandise. Some of the inquiries develop into business in spite of the advances, nice sales of colored drills, colored cotton suitings, narrow ginghams, &c., having recently been made at the higher quotations. At the moment the best business is coming from the Central and South American countries. Importers of American cottons in the Philippines are well covered for the time being by goods previously ordered at lower prices. Until these get into consumption there is not much chance of a resumption of buying for that market.

Foreign Ribbons Cut Risk.

For certain narrow novelties in ribbons some manufacturers here are depending more on foreign sources than on their own production, it was said yesterday. It was explained that importing the goods entails less risk and a more satisfactory turnover for the manufacturer than if he were to put his own looms on them. If the latter were done the mill would have to turn out at least 300 boxes, for example, before the setting of the looms would prove profitable. In the case of the foreign ribbons, however, 100 boxes of a particular novelty can be purchased and merchandized profitably with a consequent sharp reduction of the risk involved in handling the goods.

Economical Neckwear Novelty.

A new type of men's neckwear is being introduced by a manufacturer here. The feature of it is the use of a tiny nickel form, over which the cravat is permanently tied. This form is said to possess a different construction from any types previously on the market, and enables the tying of a knot that has the appearance of a regular four-in-hand. The wearing qualities of the tie are enhanced, inasmuch as the knot is tied only once. The silks used are of the better grade, the manufacturer says, and the range of patterns and colors is extensive. The ties are priced to retail at $1.25 each.

Trends in High-Grade Hand Bags.

The large swagger pouch style is being featured in women's higher grade handbags for Fall. This type of bag, which is fashioned of pin seal or alligator calf, has a ten-inch oval frame that affords a large opening, and is equipped with double swagger handles. The pleated bag of fine seal and reindeer leathers is also coming in for much attention. It is trimmed with marcasite, and has gold and silver piping. For use with formal wear bags of velvet and metallic embroidery are being shown.

Women's Fabrics Now Sought.

Some improvement in the buying of women's wear fabrics for Fall is reported by selling agents here. They said yesterday that they regarded the interest shown as the forerunner of much active buying during the weeks directly ahead. The situation reflects the stronger demand for finished garments. Some of the selling agents expect a shortage of the fabrics in most demand later on. They point out that the short period remaining for the production of Fall goods will not be sufficient to take care of the peak demand, and none of the mills is desirous of piling up any stock goods. For some fabrics and colors the cutters-up are said to be paying premiums already.

$3,500,000 SALES IN FUR AUCTION HERE

PRICES OF RACCOON BREAK

Dull Bidding Causes Drop Also in Civet Cat, Opossum, Squirrel—Bear and Wildcat Advance.

The first large midsummer auction of raw furs ever held in this city concluded yesterday with sales totaling $3,500,000. Of this amount, $600,000 was realized on the final day.

Yesterday's bidding lacked much of the snap of the earlier days of the sale. About the only feature was the break in the prices received for certain varieties of raccoon, which was the first setback this fur had received at an auction for several seasons. More than 31,000 raccoon pelts went under the hammer of General Manager J. Gordon Noakes of the New York Auction Company as the final collection of the sale. The kind known as "better sections," well colored, brought prices equal to those of the Spring sale here, but "pale colors" declined 10 per cent. Top for raccoon was $14.75.

Selling began with 501 black bear, which advanced 10 per cent. and touched $9 for the best. Tops for polar and grizzly bears were $40 and $6, respectively. Civet cat sold to $1.38 and declined 5 per cent. The best of about 25,000 house cat skins brought 42 cents, but the prices were generally unchanged from the Spring levels.

Wild cat, which advanced 5 per cent., brought a top price of $14.50. Sundry cat also went up 5 per cent., with $4.80 paid for the best Russian pelts. Opossums did not do very well. The American variety sold to $1.95 and failed to advance, while the best Australian opossum brought $3.50 and dropped 10 per cent. Petchaniki was unchanged at 58 cents for the best.

An offering of 258,650 squirrel averaged 10 per cent. below the Spring sale prices. The best skins in the collection brought $1.68. The selling of raccoon concluded the auction.

Prompt day for the sale just closed will be Aug. 29. The company's annual Fall sale will begin in the Masonic Hall here Oct. 10.

AVERT NECKWEAR STRIKE.

Union and Manufacturers Agree on Basis for Settlement.

A threatened strike in the neckwear industry probably will be avoided as a result of a conference yesterday between representatives of the United Neckwear Makers' Union and the United Association of Men's Neckwear Manufacturers at the Hotel McAlpin. During a six-hour conference the questions at issue, affecting 4,000 workers, were discussed and a basis for settlement reached. Another conference will be held Aug. 8 at the Half Moon Hotel, Coney Island.

The employes have demanded that home work be abolished and that there be a forty-hour week during four months of the year. Employes and employers agreed that a strike would be harmful to the industry and should be avoided.

BUILDING WORKERS GET SHOWERS AND LOCKERS

Architect Urges That All Drive to Jobs in Good Clothes and Change to Overalls.

Workers in the building trades are demanding and in some cases are receiving locker rooms and shower baths on construction jobs, according to Harvey Wiley Corbett, architect, who explains in a statement made public yesterday by the New York Building Congress how high wages and improved working conditions have developed the "finest craftmanship in the world" in the building trades.

"I look forward to the time when every building operation will have locker room equipment on the job for workmen," said Mr. Corbett. "Let them come to work in their good clothes in their automobiles and change to their overalls and working clothes. A shower bath should be installed for their use. They are demanding it now and it has been done in some cases.

"America has better craftsmen than any country in the world and the building mechanics of greater New York cannot be surpassed in the excellency of their handiwork. The existing wage scales today have a very distinct bearing on craftsmanship. Our labor costs are so high in proportion to the total cost of the building that the builder makes very sure his men are always employed. The men thus become accustomed to continuous work and to rapid work, which necessarily becomes a habit of mind.

Mr. Corbett said that the warning that New York was being overbuilt was exaggerated because it was impossible to overbuild this city.

Mr. Corbett is designer of the Bush Buildings in New York and London and is a fellow of the American Institute of Architects and a member of the Royal Academy, London.

EDITORS VISIT COBDEN HOME

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 29.—The American editors who are visiting England as guests of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace were entertained today at Dunford House, the former home of Richard Cobden, by his daughter, Mrs. T. Fisher Unwin, the wife of the publisher, who recalled Cobden's friendship for the Union in the Civil War.

The names Cobden and Carnegie were linked as apostles of international friendship by Dr. C. L. B. Evans, Trustee of the Foundation. "We are not here trying to prevent war between England and America," said Dr. Evans, "because war is no longer possible."

The heads of the Cobden Memorial expressed appreciation for American aid in making the mansion a permanent museum. Among the speakers were Philip Bright, the son of John Bright, Cobden's coworker in spreading pro-Union propaganda among British textile centres when they were hard struck by the blockade of Southern cotton during the Civil War.

NEUTRAL ON RESALE INQUIRY

National Commerce Chamber Explains Referendums on Issue.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—A statement made in connection with yesterday's decision of the Federal Trade Commission to investigate resale price maintenance that the United States Chamber of Commerce "twice" had gone on record for legislation was inaccurate.

Officials of the Chamber today asserted, in response to inquiry, that that organization was neither for nor against such legislation. The Chamber, it was explained, had twice submitted the question by referendum to trade organizations, Chambers of Commerce and Boards of Trade throughout the country affiliated as members.

The first referendum, in 1916, favored resale price legislation. That referendum, however, did not submit the form of legislation. More recently the Chamber held a second referendum on the question which failed to developed the necessary two-thirds vote.

PRICE TREND IS IRREGULAR.

The first thirty weeks of 1927 have witnessed the investment of more money in engineering construction than did the corresponding period last year, considering the fact that costs are slightly lower, Engineering News-Record reports. The money value of contracts let on large operations from Jan. 1 to the present time totaled $1,755,559,000, as against $1,659,106,000 in the same time a year ago.

Contracts let during the past week were valued at $74,194,000, which compares with $40,742,000 in the preceding week and $52,167,000 in the corresponding week of a year ago. Minimum costs observed in arriving at these totals are $150,000 on commercial, educational, institutional and other buildings; $40,000 on industrial projects, and $15,000 on public work, including street and road construction.

In the market for construction materials, finished steel is firmer and in better demand than a week or so ago. Prices for pig iron are at the lowest point reached since 1922. Taking the price movement from a nation-wide standpoint there is at present a definite upward turn in sand, crushed stone, window glass, wire nails, gypsum plaster, plaster board and red cedar and cypress shingles. Easier prices obtain in common brick, portland cement, yellow pine and Douglas fir two-by-fours, pine flooring, and roofing other than slate and wood shingles. Telegraphic reports from the Pacific Northwest announce a steadily increasing lumber output, following the regular seasonal shut-down.

BOXHOLDERS SEEK A NEW OPERA SITE

DECISION NOT YET FINAL

Quiet Antagonism to Plan Holding Up Action—Urban to Sail to Get Ideas for New Building.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and several other boxholders of the Metropolitan Opera House were reported yesterday to have made known to the Board of Directors their objections to the proposed relocation of the opera house in West Fifty-seventh Street between Eighth and Ninth Avenues. The existence of a quiet opposition has been known ever since Otto Kahn, Chairman of the board, announced the plans for a new building, but the report of yesterday was the first intimation that influential boxholders had actively aligned themselves against the proposal.

Reached at her Summer home in Newport, R. I., by telephone last night, Mrs. Vanderbilt would not confirm or deny the report.

R. Fulton Cutting, President of the Metropolitan Opera House and Real Estate Company, which owns the property now in use, said he had heard of no new opposition. He and a committee of the Board of the Metropolitan Opera Company have had conferences recently dealing with both the Fifty-seventh Street site and the question whether the proposed building should contain revenue producing features of an extraneous nature. It is known that no definite decision has yet been arrived at.

Although the directors of both the opera and the real estate companies have recorded themselves in favor of Mr. Kahn's plan, the knowledge that there was passive opposition has delayed action and caused a public announcement that the directors were not absolutely committed to it. The opposition has criticized the proposed site as not centrally enough located and without attractive surroundings. A Fifth Avenue site has been suggested but the expense would be prohibitive, it is thought.

Joseph Urban, architect and stage designer, is sailing tomorrow on the Olympic for a two-months' stay in France, Austria and Germany to consult leading theatre architects to get ideas for the new opera house. He expressed the opinion that in view of the improvements going to in the neighborhood of the proposed site, the location would be a desirable one.

Mr. Urban declared that contrary to general belief the new building would be a unit of architectural beauty and not the commercial type of skyscraper. It will be a separate edifice of appropriate and fitting type for a great lyric theatre, he said, although whether it will be of th eclassic, Gothic, Renaissance or modern style he would not say. There is room on the proposed plot, he pointed out, for a tower or other type of skyscraper to help defray the expenses of the opera, but any such building will be distinct from the opera house.

"I shall consult with many leaders in theatre construction and stage direction," he said, "notably with Max Haisait, technical director of the Dresden Opera, who has made many revolutionary changes in methods of stage production. I expect also to get ideas from Hans Poelzig, architect of the Berlin and Salzburg Festspielhaus, and from Oskar Kauffmann, architect of the Berlin Komedie Theater."

Benjamin Wistar Morris, Mr. Urban's associate, sailed last Wednesday on the Mauretania. They will go to the South of France for a holiday before proceeding to Germany and Austria. Mr. Urban said he had completed the settings for four novelties or revivals to be put on at the Metropolitan next season: "La Rondine," "Violanta," "Hansel and Gretel," and "Norma."

MOTHER LEAPS TO DEATH.

Breaks Away From Cousin Who Tried to Prevent Suicide.

Leaving her five-weeks-old baby asleep in bed, Mrs. Rose Robin, wife of David Robin of 142 Livingston Street, Providence, R. I., leaped from the fifth story window of an apartment at 1,556 Minford Place, the Bronx, early yesterday morning, and was killed. Mrs. Robin had been suffering from a nervous ailment since the birth of her child.

She arrived here a few days ago to visit relatives at the Minford Place address. Her cousin, Esther Gevatoff, was awakened when she heard Mrs. Robin getting out of bed. She saw the older woman walk to the window, and realizing what Mrs. Robin was about to do, Miss Gevatoff caught hold of her and shouted for help. Other members of the family were aroused, but Mrs. Robin broke from the young woman's grasp and leaped through the window. Dr. Kaplan was summoned from Fordham Hospital. He said Mrs. Robin's skull had been fractured.

Helen Mueller, 4 years old, was badly hurt yesterday afternoon when she fell from the third story window of her home at 308 Bleecker Street. Dr. Scullion took the child to St. Vincent's Hospital. It is feared that her skull has been fractured.

SLASHES WOMAN, MOBBED.

Barber Said to Have Been Angered by Her Refusal to Return Gifts.

James Rose, 37 years old, a barber of 1,712 Second Avenue, was rescued from an unfuriated crowd by Patrolman Francis Quinn of the East Sixty-seventh Street Station early yesterday morning after he had slashed a young woman with a razor at Sixty-second Street and Third Avenue.

Quinn, with his revolver drawn, stopped Rose as he fled to First Avenue and Sixty-fifth Street after cutting Miss Beatrice Hillock, 26 years old, of 41-20 Fifty-fifth Street, Woodside, Queens, who was on her way to work accompanied by her sister, Mrs Kenny Lifita. It is said the trouble had been caused by Miss Hillock's refusal to return to Rose some presents he had given her when he was a suitor.

More than 100 persons pursued the barber and Quinn hustled him into a store and barricaded the door. He telephoned for assistance when the crowd grew in numbers and shouts of "lynch him" were raised.

PHYSICIAN KILLS TWO, ALLEGING HOLD-UP

But Chicago Police Have Theory That Revenge for Operation Was Sought.

CHICAGO, July 29 (AP).—Dr. Frank Nathanson, who last night shot and killed two men who he said were trying to hold him up in his office, was held in custody today after a Coroner's inquest at which evidence was offered that no hold-up had been attempted.

According to his story last night, two gunmen posing as patients, tried to rob the physician at the point of revolvers, but he reached a pistol in a drawer and shot them before they could fire.

The police investigated the shootings on the theory that former patients or their relatives attempted to attack the doctor. An investigator for the coroner's office reported the physician had been charged with performing illegal operations. The two men have not been identified.

STILL WRECKS APARTMENT.

A 100-gallon still exploded yesterday afternoon in a small apartment occupied by Patsy and Josephine Marino at 32-11 100th Street, Corona. Firemen confined the flames to the apartment, where the damage was slight, and found not only the wreckage of the still but also twenty-seven cans of alcohol.

Assisted by photographs which they found, Detective Henry Wittel and Patrolman Charles Donady searched the neighborhood for the Marinos and in a clothes closet in an adjoining house they found Josephine, who is 21 years old. Her husband is in his early twenties. She admitted hiding soon after the fire started. She led the police to a woodshed containing clothing which she had carried from the apartment, and after dressing herself more completely she went with them to the Astoria Police Station, where she remained until Federal authorities took her. Late last night Patsy had not been found. Josephine took her arrest stoically. She and Patsy have been married a year and a half.

SOLVE DAYLIGHT GEM THEFT

Bronxville's mysterious daylight jewel robbery of a few days ago was solved yesterday. Mrs. Theodore Reburn of 22 Chestnut Place, Mount Vernon, known as Nellie A. Lock, a nurse employed in the home of Julius Bliss, at 7 Oriole Avenue, where three rings valued at $3,000 were stolen Monday, was taken to the county jail at White Plains, charged with grand larceny. Captain Van Buren of Bronxville obtained a complete confession, according to the Police Department of that place.

Mrs. Bliss reported the robbery Monday morning when she missed her wedding ring and two others when she returned from a visit to a neighbor. The rings had been in a dresser drawer in her bedroom.

Captain Van Buren questioned those connected with the household. He decided that it was an "inside job." Wednesday the nurse received a day off and went to New York to visit friends. In her absence the police searched her room and found one of the rings valued at $1,500.

FIREWORKS MAKERS OUSTED

Four in North Bergen, N. J., Ordered to Move Within 24 Hours.

Drastic action was taken against fireworks manufacturers near North Bergen, N. J., yesterday following the explosion in the plant of August Sunday on Thursday which shattered hundreds of windows in the vicinity and threw the neighborhood into panic. Chief Marcy of the North Bergen police and his aides notified three manufacturers to remove their materials within twenty-four hours.

The Township Committee at a meeting Thursday night decided that the potential danger of the fireworks plants to life and property was too great and therefore empowered the police to take action against them.

When the four owners protested against the short notice, Chief Marcy told them that their material would be seized if they did not move. Four explosions have occurred in fireworks factories near North Bergen this year. Five other plants will be ordered evacuated, according to the police.

CANCER TREATMENT BY PLASTIC SURGERY

Dr. Sheehan, Back From Paris Lectures, Tells of Replacing Infected Parts.

DR. ALBIE ALSO RETURNS

Both Are on Faculty of International Clinic—Dr. Sheehan to Aid Spanish Soldiers.

Dr. Eastman Sheehan, plastic surgeon, and Dr. F. H. Albie, specialist in bone surgery, both of New York, returned yesterday on the Cunarder Aquitania from Paris, where they have been delivering lectures at the International Clinic in the Hospital of St. Louis, which was formerly devoted to the treatment of lepers.

The Faculty attached to the International Clinic has eleven members, of whom eight are French surgeons and physicians and three are Americans. Dr. Ferrars Smith of Grand Rapids, Mich, who returned recently from Paris, is the other American member.

Dr. Sheehan said the International Clinic had proved to be a success and something that had been needed in medicine and surgery for the last 200 years. If any discovery is made now in any part of the world for curing or preventing disease it will be brought to the newly established centre in Paris and all will know it.

Students at the International Clinic this Summer came from sixteen nations, while forty professors, all specialists in various lines of surgery and medicine, delivered lectures. Doctors came to the Hospital of St. Louis from all parts of the world, and as many as 100 were in the hall for morning lectures, Dr. Sheehan said.

He also explained that plastic surgery had now advanced so far that cancer on the jaw, lip, face or any part that was easily accessible could be eradicated and the bone or flesh replaced.

"Up till within the last two years," said Dr. Sheehan, "surgeons did not like to remove portions of a face for cancer because it would disfigure the patient for life. Now, in case of cancer on the jaw, the bone is removed and a new one set in its place at the same time, so that the flesh and the bone grow together. We performed that operation in Paris for an old man over 70. A few days later the only trace of the cancer or the operation was a small bump on the jaw."

Asked if the cause of cancer had been discovered at the International Clinic, Dr. Sheehan said so far it had not.

"Sometimes we think we have got it and are just going over the top when we come to a stop and are baffled once more, but we still have hope," he declared.

Dr. Sheehan said he had been invited by the Spanish Government to operate on the faces of the soldiers who had been mutilated in the war with the Riffs. He will go to Madrid in a few days.

Dr. Albee, who lectured at the International Clinic on bone surgery, which is connected with plastic surgery, took with him the machine he invented for drilling and cutting grooves in bones so that they can be easily put together and knit more quickly than by the old methods of bone surgery.

Dr. Albee said he had met Dr. Jonescu, the noted Rumanian surgeon, at the St. Louis Hospital and had been invited to lecture on bone surgery before the Faculty in Bucharest in October. He said that on his way to the capital of Rumania he would stop at the International Clinic to see how some of the cases operated upon this month were getting along.

FIANCE SHOOTS GIRL AND MOTHER IN HOME

Argument With Woman Leads to Attack—Elder Victim May Die —Other Slightly Hurt.

Jennie Mitelli, 19 years old, and her mother, Mrs. Mary Mitelli, 52 years old, were shot last night in their home at 1,317 Blake Avenue, Brooklyn, by the girl's fiancé, Samuel Logreco, who lives on the floor above them, according to the police.

The elder woman is seriously wounded. At the Kings County Hospital, where she was taken with her daughter, it was reported that her condition was critical. The girl was slightly wounded and will recover.

According to Miss Mitelli, she and Logreco announced their engagement two weeks ago. Last night, on his return to the house, he came down to the Mitelli apartment and an argument arose between him and Mrs. Mitelli. Logreco then drew a pistol, the girl said, and fired at her mother and herself.

Mrs. Mitelli was shot in the right chest and right hand. The girl was wounded in the right shoulder and under the left arm.

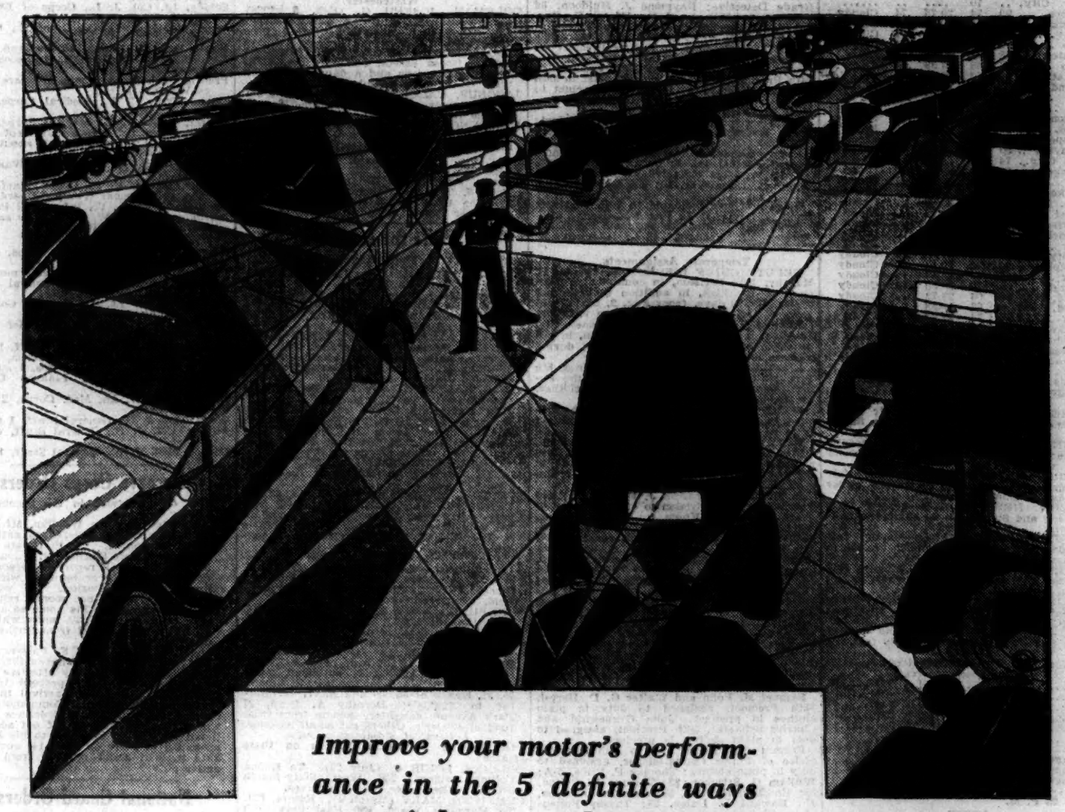
J., July 29.—With the renewal today of the wage and working conditions arrangement in the pressed ware department and the punch tumbler and stemware department, ten of the fourteen departments will remain under the same agreement for the ensuing year, it was announced at the annual wage scale conference of the American Flint Glass Workers' Union and the National Association of Manufacturers of Pressed and Blown Glassware, at the Hotel Marlboro-Blenheim here.

The chimney group was not able to reach an agreement. Another conference will be held during the last week in August. The three other departments, it was said, would be discussed tomorrow, thus concluding the conference, which started July 20.



Improve your motor's performance in the 5 definite ways essential to speed, ease and safety in today's tangled traffic

The GASOLINE that tames tough traffic

CITIES have had to face the acute problem of modern traffic with one-way streets and traffic signal-towers. Highway builders have had to answer it with wider, sturdier thorough-fares. Motor engineers have tried to meet it by designing lighter, faster, more flexible cars.

And now, a great oil company makes its contribution, Traffic Tydol—a new gasoline created specifically for congested driving.

In the 5 essentials required of a present-day motor-fuel, it has proved, in impartial tests, superior to seven other gasolines. Already it has been adopted by the country's leading motor transportation companies, which operate thousands of cars, taxis, buses and trucks in the world's toughest traffic. And millions of motorists who have turned to Traffic Tydol endorse it as no other gasoline has ever been endorsed.

Try this new gasoline that has so quickly won transportation experts and the motoring public.

Fill up today with Traffic Tydol at a black and orange Tydol pump. Then you'll drive away with a motor tuned up to face high-tension modern traffic.
